U. S. Cruiser Carries Saito's Ashes to Japan

In a final gesture of friendship, high officials of the Army, Navy and State Department, in an unprecedented ceremony at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., pay their respects to the memory of Hiroei Saito, former Japanese Ambassador whose sudden death recently shocked official Washington. Photo shows climax of services, with Saito's ashes being removed for transfer to the U.S.S. Astoria, American cruiser designated to carry the remains to Japan. On left, near the railing, are Mrs. Saito, her children, and Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi and his wife. On the extreme right, Yakichiro Suma, counselor of Japanese Embassy, stands at attention.

Farmers Asked to Preserve Cover for Wildlife

In the early days of Kentucky, the wildlife population, while always subject to diseases and the depredations of predators, managed to maintain its numbers. At this period in the history of our State, the inroads of cultivation had not been made the natural habitats, areas of cover and food plants, were present in such numbers that birds and other wild animals were not destroyed through failture to adjust themselves to changing conditions. Natural cover was available everywhere.

Today, however, we find that suitable habitats have become limited, and many species, through their inability to cope with over increasing changes in environment have become greatlyreduced in number.

The highways of Kentucky have effectively honeycombed the state even into the remote sections, and while no one would object to the benefits derived from good roads, it is very evident that good roads and automobiles have made more difficult the job of preserving and increasing beneficial wildlife resources. Before the days of automobiles our hunting trips were confined to the towns or counties in which we lived. Now, our hunting grounds embrace the whole state, and it was this condition which brought about the need for and passage of the statewide, uniform game laws. The day of effectively administering wildlife resources by local governmental units ceased toexist with the coming of automobiles.

Automobiles reduce wildlife population in another way. The amount of traffic over our main arteries of travel is enormous. In addition to the regular drain which occurs on wildlife populations during the hunting season, there is a year around open season on our highways—fall, winter, spring and summer. Quail and other birds, rabbits, squirrels and other fur-bearing animals, all must cross highways. There is no accurate estimate of thecasualties.

All thinking motorists who wish to avoid bent fenders, broken windshields, and possible personal injury will avoid hitting the wild creatures. The true conservationist, wishing to see our wildlife given every chance to increase during the closed season and particularly, the nesting period, will studiously prevent the needless destruction of wildlife that takes place on our highways everyday.

A good conservationist will check the speed on his car to prevent hitting wild animals the same as he would to prevent hitting domestic livestock.

All sportsmen and motorists are urged by the Division of Game and Fish to cooperate in the protection of wildlife on our highways. Remember that for every bird or animal that is spared on the highway, it will mean several more in the fields and forests when the hunting seasons open.

WPA Education Division Reducing Illiteracy Rate

Imagine, if you can, going down through life and especially in this age of abundant news unable to read the headlines of this or any other newspaper. By the last census, which was in 1930, there were 131,545 such unfortunates in Kentucky, but in three short years the Works Progress Administration, through its Education Division, has reduced that number to approximately 101,695.

Today 9,285 Kentuckians ranging in age from 16 to 87 years are learning to read and write in classes regularly enducted for them. WPA emergency work also is conducted in all Kentucky CCC camps by WPA teachers, for which figures are not readily available.

Literacy work by the Works Progress Administration in Kentucky, George H. Goodman, administrator, said, is not to be confused with efforts of the organization in the adult education field. Since July 1, 1935, there has been an enrollment of 179,120 students in these classes whose averaage age ranges between 28 and 30 years ,or an enrollment of 28,755 monthly over a period of 33 months. As of the current date, 33,258 are in attendance.

Subjects taught by 578 teachers in adult education range from reading, writing and fundamentals in arithmetic, through budgeting, food, nutrition, child care, health, cooking, canning, commercial subjects and shoe repair, to general academic subjects, including complete high shcool courses for adults unable to attend regular high school and public affairs education.

A WPA teacher works approximately 80 hours per month for an average of $50. Teachers must have had training in a State Teacher's College or another teacher training institution, together with successful teaching experience. Some WPA teachers have Master's Degrees.

Recently 512 students have reported receiving jobs in private industry as the direct result of attending WPA classes. Many more have received increased pay.

For the calendar year of January 1, 1938, to January 1, 1939, the Federal Government spent $34,810.88 on adult education in Kentucky. In addition to the State Department of Education, the sponsor, spent $51,254.73, or a total of $86,065.61.

State Unemployment Compensation Held Fair

"In a number of respects, Kentucky's Unemployment Compensation Law has been found to the most equitable of all other similar state laws," Robert B. Hensley, Burlington, Chief Legal Counsel for the Commission, declared recently in an address before the annual meeting of the Kentucky Bar Association, held in Louisville.

Hensley cited the merit-rating plan as one of the uniuqe features of the Kentucky Act. This, he explained, is, in effect, setting up a separate account for each employer to which is credited the contributions paid by each employer to the Commission.

Benefits payable to employees are chargeable against the reserve account of the employer who released him from employment. Thus, Hensley said, an employer's reserve account will increase where the employer has maintained steady employment and will fall where he has released several of his employees. Upon the condition of each employer's reserve account, after July 1, 1940 ,will depend the employer's contribution rate.

"If an employer has a large reserve balance, his contribution rate will be lowered," Hensley explained, "while the employer who has a low reserve balance will be compelled to pay a higher rate. The exact rate will depend on the ratio between his reserve account and the amount of benefits chargeable against it, with certain other factors, such as the annual payroll for the preceding year, entering into the final determination.

Hensley declared that officials of the Social Security Board had acclaimed Kentucky as doing the best job of administering their law of any State agency in the United States.

Since January 31, Hensley said, the Commission has paid to unemployed workers a total of $375,811.63, averaging about $38,000 per day.

He explained that only such workers who had previously been employed by an employer operating under the provisions of the Kentucky law were eligible to receive benefits.

Other conditions of eligibility were listed as requiring that the claimant be totally unemployed; must have earned at least $300 in wages from subject employers in the first twelve of the last fifteen months preceding the claim; must be physically and mentally able to work; must register for work with the Kentucky State Employment Service, and must serve a three-week waiting period of total unemployment after filing the claim.

Foxes hunt woodchucks persistently and the shrill lalarm cry of the groundhog heard echoing back and forth across pasture-land is a very reliable foretelling of the approach of a fox.

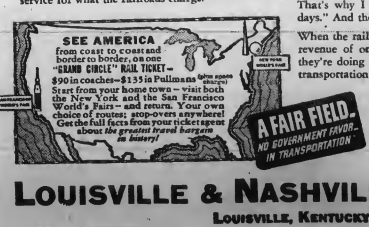
WHAT we men are doing here is called "maintenance of way."

You'll have to think twice to name any other kind of transportation that does that job for itself.

They tell me that more than thirty cents out of every dollar the railroads take in goes for maintenance, interest, taxes and other costs due to the fact that the railroads do build and maintain their own roadways—and that more than half of the total railroad investment is in roadway.

If other kinds of transportation that use "ways" built and maintained by the public had to pay the full cost of building and maintaining the "ways" they use, they couldn't even come close to furnishing their service for what the railroads charge.



That goes for the so-called "cheap transportation" by inland waterways. Almost without exception, the subsidy paid by taxpayers for each ton of freight moved on these rivers is as much as, and in most cases more than, the total cost of moving the same freight by rail.

The biggest part of the taxes paid by highway carriers goes to building and maintaining the roads they use—and they tell me that studies by a number of state highway departments show that these taxes do not cover the highway carriers' real share of road costs. Railroads pay more taxes per dollar of revenue than highway carriers do. And the big point is that railroad taxes are not used for building or maintaining their roadway—they go to meet general expenses of government.

That's why I say, "It takes real railroading these days." And the railroads are doing a real job.

When the railroads haul a ton a mile at an average revenue of one cent and pay all their own costs, they're doing a job that can't be beat by any other transportation system in the world, bar none.

And when they do a job like that—it seems to me that about all they need is a square deal in transportation.

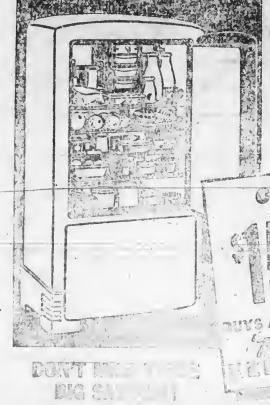
Centre College Receives Handsome Birthday Gift

On the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of its founding, Centre College of Kentucky will receive the largest single gift in its history through a bequest of approximatley $400,000 from the late Guy Easton Wiseman, according to an announcement made by President Robert L. McLeod, Jr., and Nelson D. Rodes, member of the Board of Trustees of Centre College and attorney for the Wiseman estate.

Mr .Wiseman, a graduate of the class of 1885, who died after a heart attack on Thursday, March 2, has been actively connected with the college since 1909, serving on the Board of Trustess of the Women's College since that time, and on the Board of Trustees of the college itself since 1923. For the past five years he has been a member of the executive committee of the college.

As a trustee of the college, Mr. Wiseman took an active part in planning and approving a movement to raise one million, one hundred thousand dollars for the' development of Centre College. This gift may be construed as his own contribution toward this objective. In commenting on the bequest, President McLeod said: "We owe it to the memory of our benefactor to accept this gift as a challenge to achieve our final goal by the time of our 125th anniversary in 1944."



"Mr. Wiseman," stated Dr. McLeod, "has had an opportunity to observe the college over a period of sixty years. His appreciation of its past and this hope for its future as expressed in this gift should be an inspiration to those who envision Centre College as one of the leading small liberal arts colleges of the South."

While the major part of the bequest is to supplement the present endowment of a million and a half dollars, it also provides funds for specific purposes: $125,000 may be used for a dormitory or one or more house units in the men's college to be known as the "Wiseman Memorial." Of this amount, $100,000 may be used for the erection of the buildings, $15,000 for furnishings and equipment, and the balance for the endowment of the building. A sum of $50,000 is to be set aside as an endowment for the music department of the women's college, and $3,000 for the purchase of an organ for that department. The remainder, interest of two trust funds amounting to $80,000, will become a part of the endowment of the women's college of Centre.

NEW YORK—Millions of "average" Americans, from Maine to California, will close their cottages, bungalows, and apartments for brief periods this year and start out for the New York World's Fair 1939. They will arrive by plane, car, bus, and some, perhaps, on foot.

About the wonders of the Fair they will have read much. They will expect the utmost of this $155,000,000 exposition. But the question they are asking now is "what will it cost?"

The answer:

They may enjoy virtually all the wonders of the Main Exhibition Area without cost, except what they may spend for food which ranges from 10-cent frankfurters to de luxe swank meals in the cafes.

Every night they will be treated to the greatest free espectacle in exposition history: the $1,000,000 fireworks and fountain displays which will bathe the 1,216½ acres of the Fair in brilliant colors.

Free Shows Galore

Hundreds of free shows on the grounds will include such varied entertainment as a rocket ship which carries passengers through both space and time to remote planets; thrilling head-on crashes at the automobile proving ground, a model dairy where 150 prized cows will be milked daily. Industry, science and the nations of the world will offer their wonders and art treasures to the free view of all Fair visitors.

Admission to the grounds will cost 75 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. One day each week children will be admitted for 10 cents.

One of the most elaborate spectacles in theatrical history, Billy Rose's stage and water ballct at the 10,000 seat Marine Amphitheatre, starring Eleanor Holm and 300 dancing and swimming girls, will cost only 40 cents.

The World on Display

Sixty-two foreign countries whose magnificent pavilions face the Lagoon of Nations and the Court of Peace will be open throughout the Fair for free inspection. Here the treasures of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and South America will be shown.

The Railroad Building, center of a 6-acre exhibit, containing the most complete miniature railroad ever constructed; a thriving American homestead, complete with cattle, sheep, and chickens, with a singing fountain at the entrance; the most valuable wheat field in the world; a 135-foot schooner in New England's exhibit; the model Town of Tomorrow containing completely furnished homes; The Children's World, a fantastic miniature fair by itself; the House of Jewels where more than $5,000,000 worth of gems will sparkle.

All this and vastly more, may be seen—free of charge.

Trips to Chicago, $1,000 In Scholarships to Be Awarded To 4-H Clubs

Local 4-H Club members may share in the benefits and awards of the third National 4-H Rural Electrification Program conducted under the supervision of the extension agents and local club leaders. Acceptance has been signalled by the state club leader's office. Clubsters are eligible, providing they carry on a project or definite activity on farm use of electricity.

Rural youth are gaining knowledge and performing a most useful service in this field, and it is hoped to interest many more. They help by studying the values of electricity to a community, whether available or not, and in disseminating the results through exhibits, demonstrations and other ways. Such values pertain to lighting, power use and heating ,and the proper installation and care of equipment.

The first step is for local leaders to secure forms from their county extension agents, which state plainly what must be done and give sources of "helps." These should be obtained at once. Reports should be filed with the county agent by October 1 so that a medal winner can be chosen and the record entered for state competition before November 1.

State winners will receive educational trips to the 18th National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago next December, and from their number a blue award group of five will be selected to receive scholarships of $200 each. All awards are provided by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

State Editor Appointed Johnson Campaign Head

Louisville, Ky., April 12 - J. Lyter Donaldson, manager of the Keen Johnson-for-Governor State Campaign, today announced the appointment of Tyler Munford, Morganfield newspaper editor, as director of publicity for the Johnson organization.

"No member of the newspaper profession in Kentucky is held in higher esteem than Keen Johnson", Munford said in accepting the appointment.

"His demonstrated executive ability in the publication of a successful newspaper, coupled with his experience as Lieutenant Governor and acting Governor admirably qualifies him for the highest post within the gift of the democratic party.

His very temperament and ability to get along with people makes him the ideal candidate for the promotion of party harmony and solidarity", Munford pointed out.

Munford is editor of the Union County Advocate, a member of the Kentucky Press Association executive committee, and has represented Union County in the KentuckyGeneral Assembly for five consecutive sessions.

"IN KENTUCKY" FEATURES DERBY STORY BY IRVIN COBB

The Spring number of "In Kentucky", the State magazine, which has for its primary purpose attraction of visitors, will include many features portrayed very largely by pictures in the rotagravure manner and dealing especially with the Derby, the American Folk Song Festival, the Mountain Laurel Festival and other events of Spring and early summer in the State

A story by Irvin S. Cobb on the Derby is a highlight, while numerous beautiful pictures portray the annual garden tour sponsored by the Kentucky Garden Club. Jeff Harris, well known Lexington authority, has an interesting bit about the record and death of Roxie Highlands, champion show horse which succumbed at Spindletop Farm recently.

There is a striking feature about dogwood trees, a story about the importance of Louisville to the State and to the South, a brief summary of improvements at Mammoth Cave, a dozen unusually attractive photographs of beautiful byways of the Bluegrass and numerous other Kentuckians which, it is hoped by the State Division of Publicity, may aid in attracting to this State some of the thousands of tourists expected to be on the move in record numbers this year to the world's fairs in New York and San Francisco.

With The Reds--

The Cincinnati Reds are winging their way homeward after a successful spring training program that has prepped them for the long stretch of 154 gruelling tilts against their National League foes, starting with their opener against the Pirates in Cincinnati on Monday, April 17.

The Reds will play four games on Ohio soil before the league season gets under way. In all these games their opponents will be the Detroit Tigers ,one of the ranking teams in the American League. The Reds and Tigers will cross bats Thursday at Portsmouth, and on Friday they will meet in Dayton

Cincinnati fans will have their first opportunity to observe the Reds Saturday and Sunday, when they meet the Bengals at Crosley Field.

This pair of contests will unveil the 1939 edition of the Reds, a team that has attracted more attention this spring than any other outfit in either major league It will also mark the local inauguration of Bill Werber, new Redleg third baseman and lead-off man, who has never made an appearance at Crosley Field. Werber comes to Cincinnati with a great reputation as a third-sacker and base stealer. He has swiped more bases than any player in the National circuit

The Tigers furnish ample opposition for the Reds, as they have colorful and powerful team, led by those veteran sluggers, Hank Greenberg and Charlie Gehringer. While the Reds and Tigers were in training in Florida, they met three times, with the Tigers winning twice.

CONSERVATION

Two hundred 40-acre farms are lost every day in the year through soil erosion.

But, according to Superintendent Darnell of the CCC camp at Walton, that rate of soil loss is going to decline materially if farmers continue their fight against erosion.

Mr. Darnell pointed to April 6 on the calendar. That date was the sixth anniversary of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and that date, six years ago, marked the beginning of the nation's first organized drive against soil washing.

Celebrating the anniversary, Camp Walton held open house on Tuesday, April 11, at 1:00 p .m. Ceremonies were under direction of Mr. Darnell and Lieut. Wehr, Commanding Officer An exhibit portraying the camp's work in the soil conservation field was on display. Entertainment consisted of a tour of the camp, moving pictures, exhibits of various work done by Soil Conservation Service and a tour of field work.

"The fact that 120 farmers in Boone, Kenton, Grant and Gallatin counties are cooperating with the camp shows that they realize that soil erosion is an acute problem in this vicinity,"Mr. Darnell said, in announcing the open house. "Dr. H. H Bennett, Chief of the Soil Conservation Service, recently pointed out that we are losing the equivalent of two hundred 40-acre farms every day through soil erosion.

"We are going downhill in respect to our soil, and most people do not realize the seriousness of the problem. Dr. Bennett estimates that the country has lost twenty billion dollars through soil erosion, and a like amount will be lost within the next 50 years if erosion is not checked. Fortunately, Boone, Kenton, Grant and Gallatin county farmers are doing their part to end this alarming wastage."

According to figures released by the superintendent, work done by the camp since its establishment on July 18, 1935, includes strip cropping, buffer stripping, fencing, gathering limestone, building diversion ditches, tree planting and mulching.

L. & N. RAILROAD ANNOUNCES SPECIAL FARES

The Louisville & Nashville and other southern lines, the April L. & N. Magazinere ports, have established a new basis and regulations for the sale of round-trip party coach tickets between all points in Southern territory, including Ohio, Potomac and Mississippi River gateways, and stations in Illinois and Indiana on and south of the line of the Southern Railway from Louisville to St. Louis.

On the new basis, parties of 15 to 29 persons will be charged per capita 1.35 cents per mile in each direction; parties of 30 to 74 will pay for their tickets at the rate of 1.25 cents per mile; the rate will be 1.10 cents to parties of 75 to 149, and one cent to parties of 150 and over. These rates are to remain in effect until December 31.

GRADE CROSSING FATALITIES SUBSTANTIALLY DECREASED

Fatalities resulting from highway-railroad grade crossing accidents in 1938 totaled 1,517. This was a decrease of 358 compared with 1937, a decrease of 1,051 compared with the peak year of 1928, when 2,658 persons lost their lives in such accidents.

This reduction in the number of fatalities took place despite an increase in the number of automobiles in operation over the highways of the country. For every person killed in a grade crossing accident in 1938, there were approximately 20,000 automobiles registered, compared with 15,843 automobiles in 1937 and 6,137 in 1921.

Chevrolet Dealers Back Up Sales With Service

More than 75 per cent of Chevrolet dealers are now cooperating actively in a program initiated by the factory to back up with expert service every Chevrolet car and truck sold. This announcement was made this week by Ed Hedner, of Detroit, national service and mechanical manager.

Chevrolet, Hedner said, has developed a continuous year-round activity designed to keep service managers and their mechanics up to the minute on all phases of their work. The basis of the system is the Service Managers' Clubs, of which there are 235 in the United States. These meet monthly drawing their attendance from the dealerships in their respective areas. The material studied at the Service Managers' Club meetings is furnished by the Service and Mechanical Department in Detroit, one division of which devotes full time to supervision of this work. Motion pictures, slide films, engineering and service data, covering both equipment and method, make up the study course, which is supplemented by informal discussion of the way in which individual managers have dealt with specific service problems.

Returning home, the service managers hold similar meetings in their own dealerships every two weeks, using the material shown at the managers' meeting, plus conducting a 15 minutes oral examination, covering the same ground. One or more specific service problems are discussed at each of these meetings, in light of the latest information on the subject. Reports of all these meetings are filed in the Central Office, an arrangement which makes it possible for the Service and Mechanical Department to distribute any specially useful item contained in such quickly throughout the entire field, through the channels provided by the countryside training set-up.

"Although Chevrolet's service training is a continuous year-round activity, the period just before the annual new car introduction is in a sense the starting point for the year's program," said Hedner. "At that time these twice manager clubs and service meetings in the dealerships enable Chevrolet to school its entire field organization quickly and efficiently, in the design, construction and servicing methods that apply to the forthcoming model. Subsequent meetings throughout the year amplify this information in the light of practical experience, and add constantly to the service managers' and mechanics' fund of information about previous models as well.

"The whole set-up, of course, is in line with Chevrolet's conviction that its own success and the success of its dealers will be in direct ratio to the satisfaction which owners derive from their Chevrolet cars and trucks."

"Nude women are moving past our windows," a middle-aged couple told police in Dallas, Texas. Three officers investigated and found the "nude women" were dummies used by a designer of women's clothers.

GOSSIP-GRAMS

News and Views on Air Personalities

Lucille Manners

FOR the first time in more than 13 years of continuous broadcasting Cities Service is presenting a drama during its regular Friday evening concert hour.

The new feature is called "The Romance of Oil" and each chapter unfolds an exciting story based on the fascinating drama behind the great petroleum industry. The tremendous growth of the industry is skillfully portrayed, and the important part it plays in our everyday life in providing modern conveniences and daily essentials is colorfully presented.

Lovely Lucille Manners, Ross Graham, baritone, a mixed chorus of 12 voices and a 36-piece orchestra under the direction of Dr. Frank Black are all regularly featured on the program.

Warden Lawes

WHEN "Criminal Case Histories," a Friday night half-hour feature over NBC, bows out for the summer this month, it will mark the end of seven years of presentations by Warden Lewis E. Lawes of factual cases from the files of criminal records of Sing Sing. By series of dramatized stories, the Warden would explain the unusual circumstances embodying the payment and eventual cancellation of particular debts of anti-social forces to society, and the responsibilities of society toward those same anti-social elements.

Phil Spitalny

WHAT is your favorite song—the song which has brought you the greatest happiness through the years? In a nation-wide search for the favorite songs of America, Phil Spitalny, conductor of the Hour of Charm All-Girl Singing Orchestra, will launch an eight week contest series beginning April 3 and closing May 22. Mr. Spitalny conceived the idea of the Song Search following requests for favorite songs of famous people—which have been featured as part of the Monday night programs over NBC at 9 o'clock, E.S.T. Among the selections have been Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," favorite of Walter Damrosch, noted conductor; and "Berceuse" selected by Dorothy Thompson, the program's news commentator. Weekly cash prizes of $100 and an I.E.S. lamp will be offered for the best 100-word-essays on the topic: "My Favorite Song and Why" . . . Entries should be addressed to the Hour of Charm, General Electric Bldg., New York City.

Frank Morgan

WEBSTER, it seems, has a word for Frank Morgan. While working on Morgan's script for Good News of 1939, the comedian's writers, Phil Rapp and Sam Moore, discovered the word "sciolist", in the dictionary. A sciolist is defined as "a man of superficial knowledge; a pretender of knowledge."

Morgan continues, nevertheless, to amaze his colleagues on Good News of 1939.... Now he claims to belong to a yacht club in which all of the members are officers, except one, Morgan, as judge advocate of the Emerald Bay Yacht Club, has such fellow members as Warner Baxter, Gene Markey, Preston Foster, John Wayne and others. The lone member is Owen Churchill, well known racing skipper.

Radio seems to be making Mr. Average Man more punctual, experts say —what with time signals and hourly time announcements making the public so time-conscious, it's easier for them to be "on time".

Arline Blackburn

THERE'S already an epidemic of spring fever among members of the "Pretty Kitty Kelly" cast . . . Arline Blackburn started it off with a new hat . . . one of those small, black affairs anchored with a snood. Snoods look like fish-nets, fishing means spring, spring calls for picnics . . . and there you are! Now every actor who misses a cue must pay a dime into a common fund . . . the money to be used as an expense account for a cast picnic when warm weather comes . . . Under this new system, Helen Choat — who plays the role of Bunny — has to watch her step. She's in deep disgrace at the moment . . . Given to hoarding old radio scripts, Helen found herself right at the mike with a copy of last year's broadcast! Somebody brought her up to date in a hurry.

BASEBALL CENTENARY

This year baseball celebrates its 100 years of existence, for it was in the spring of 1839 that Abner Doubleday, a West Point cadet, laid out the first baseball diamond at this home town of Cooperstown, N. Y., and established new rules to supersede the old game of "town ball" in vogue before that time.

Among the changes made in the old game was that of limiting the number of players on a side to eleven; making put-outs as at present, intsead of "soaking" the player with the ball as he ran; and regulating the length of the game. At first, the opposing teams agreed on how many runs must be made to win, and the club first reaching that number was the victor—no matter how many innings it took.

The game made headway slowly, and it was several years before grown men took much interest in it. Umpires were unknown until about 1858. Before that time the batters themselves called the balls and strikes, and it may be imagined that pitchers had a tough time. Some of the early umpires wore silk hats and frock coats on the field.

The catcher's mask dates from 1877, the first being made by a tinsmith for James Tyng of Harvard, and the light catcher's glove shortly followed. The first big mitt was used by Buck Ewing of the New York Giants in 1890. Basemen and fielders played with bare hands until about the same time, when light gloves were gradually introduced, followed in time by heavy mitts.

Many interesting stories of the game will be told by sports writers during this centennial year, and motion pictures showing its development will be available.

Twins belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hoskins, of York, Neb., have been admired so much by passers-by that Mrs. Hoskins has placed a savings bank in the carriage so their admirers can make donations.

After 56 years of wedded life, Mrs. Annie Ludwig filed suit for divorce against Henry Ludwig in St. Louis. Each is 78 years old.

New York City Brushes Up for Fair of Century

Grover A. Whalen

NEW YORK—While the New York World's Fair 1939 speeds toward its opening on April 30, the city is preparing to receive 15,000,000 guests. The Fair will be the greatest party this town has ever thrown.

Thousands of workmen, artists and technicians are now engaged in finishing up the vast spectacle and large crews are at work on Manhattan Island, grooming hotels, apartment houses, theatres, and public buildings for the date when The World of Tomorrow will steal the show from the City of Today.

"Going to the Fair" this year will mean two shows for the price of one so far as the out-of-town visitor is concerned. New York's Broadway, amusement center of the nation, will not rival, but will supplement entertainments at the Fair.

Extending in a broad arc beyond the New York State Marine Amphitheatre and along the eastern shore of Fountain Lake is the 280-acre Amusement area where gaiety will rule.

Million Dollar Show

At the amphitheatre, Billy Rose, Broadway's master showman, will present Eleanor Holm in his $1,000,000 extravaganza in which 300 dancing and swimming girls will take part. A curtain of water will shield the stage from the audience between the acts. The theatre will seat 10,000 persons.

Rides and thrillers take up one section of the Amusement Area; games of every kind another, while still another section will hold exotic villages.

In the Cuban village, covering three acres, the atmosphere of Havana's cafes will be recaptured. Here the rhumba and danzon will be danced to native orchestras and arroz con pollo will be on the menu.

Old New York will be another village. Here the Bowery of the mauve decade will live again.

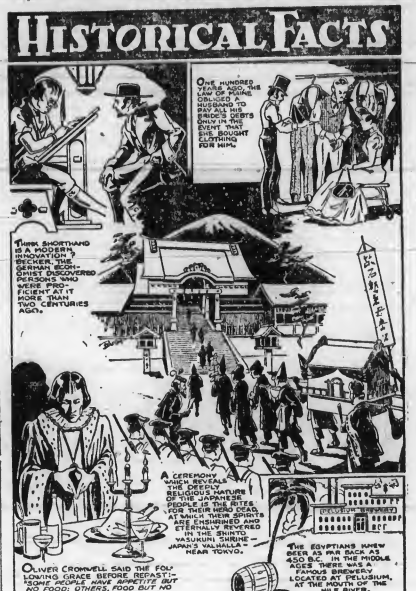
Thrills for the Kids

It is estimated that 2,000,000 children between the ages of 3 and 14 will visit the $1,000,000 Children's World. Admission to this zone will be free, although modest charges will be made for special entertainments including the diminutive restaurant.

In the "thrill section" will be found a parachute leap where visitors will experience all the excitement of "bailing out" without risking broken bones. An automatic, "fool-proof" mechanism will release the 'chutes in such a manner that folding up will be impossible. The landing will be gentle. While this is one of the latest hair-raisers, the play center will be replete with coasters, wheels and rides of all varieties.

And to quote Grover A. Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation: "The World of Tomorrow' exposition will display the marvels of science, industry and art, and at the same time provide fun and gaiety for everyone."



ANT A NATURAL RADIO?

According to the belief of B. W. D. Morley, a British scientist, the common ant has the power of transmitting messages to other ants through some mysterious means similar to radio.

Nearly everyone has observed the uncanny faculty of animal life for finding food, but it taxes one's credulity to believe that ants can communicate by telepathy or some means akin to radio, as Mr. Morley suggests. We do know, however, that certain species of ants make slaves of other species; also that they often feed on the secretions of aphids, or plant-lice, sometimes referred to as "ant-cows".

KENTUCKY POLITICS

By Tyler Munford

John Y. Brown made his official appearance as the entry of the Tom Rhea stable Thursday night when he opened his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor with a 15-minute radio speech.

A far cry from the bronco-busting tactics employed by the Lexington attorney when he was recommending Albert Chandler to Kentucky Democrats in 1935, his initial radio effort in the current campaign revealed a thorough currying and brush-down the Lexington attorney was definitely under wraps, but the question politicos are pondering is how long can the Brown handlers keep him from reverting to the hammer and tong tactics he has used in every campaign since 1935.

Noticeably absent from the Brown opening effort was any reference to the 1935 primary when he had Tom Rhea, his present sponsor, for a target. Equally conspicuous by its absence was any reference to the Brown connection with the CIO. Observers here contend that the Brown managers have been receiving bad news from farming sections and small towns where sentiment is definitely against the CIO. Because of this, the opening strategy was to eliminate any reference to the John Lewis organization or to Sam Caddy, Kentucky CIO representative and one of the main Brown supporters. How long organized labor will stand for this snub is another question and labor is Brown's main strength.

TWO ANNOUNCED CANDIDATE FOR $30 PENSION

The highlight of the Brown speech —his declaration for a $30 old age pension—came as no great surprise, and incidentally it was the second $30 declaration made by a gubernatorial aspirant in this year's race. Secretary of State Charles Arnett advocated this amount in his opening address two weeks ago at West Liberty. So thus far in the race, the old folks are out in front by a count of 2 to 0. This adds up the conclusion that so far ast he two candidates are concerned, there is no issue on the pension question inasmuch as both are for the same thing.

Keen Johnson, viewed as a certain starter in the contest, has yet to make an official announcement of his candidacy or to reveal his position on the pension question or other pertinent issues.

One thing is certain. The old people have a far greater chance of receiving an increase in their pension checks than at ay time in recent years. Four years ago the Laffoon administration was without money to pay any kind of a pension, but since that time the State debt has been reduced from 35 million to less than seven million. At the end of the year or at the close of the Chandler administration the debt will be further reduced, and revenues will probably be sufficient to give the old people a cash increase.

The present good position of pensioners can be attributed more to the debt reduction than to any other one item.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

According to plans of the Union County Golden Hoof club, sheep production will be increased by 1-3 this year.

Extensive replanting of forests has been started in Lewis cunty, as has also a campaign for better fire control.

Several marl deposits are being opened up for use by Metcalfe county farmers.

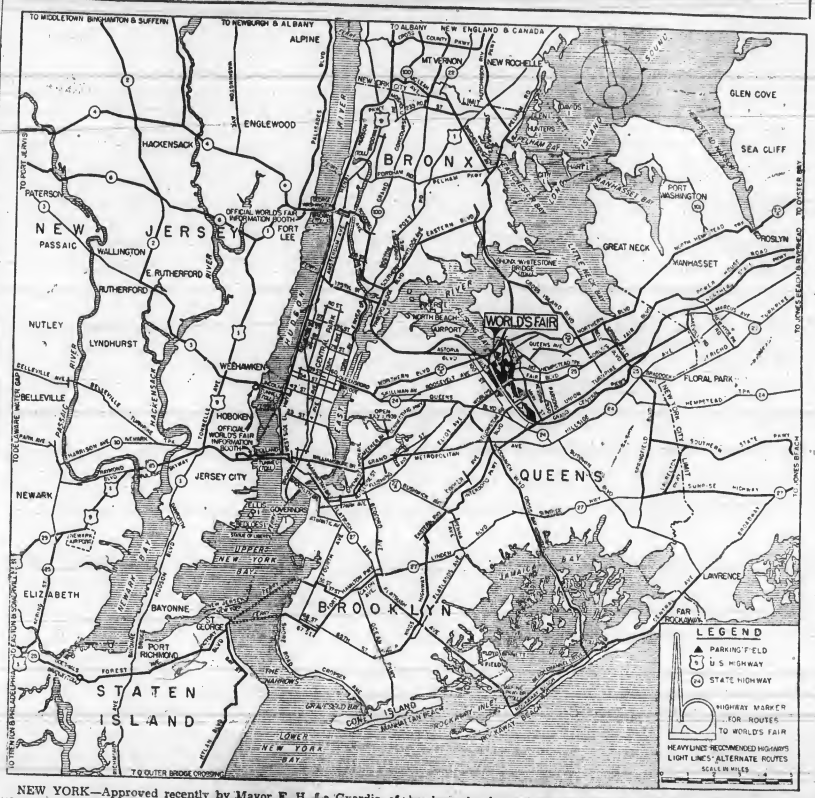
The Franklin county sheep protectife association was able to pay 90 cents on the dollar toward losses.

Jonas and Bill Brewer, 4-H club members, have founded the first purbred dairy herd in Perry county.



Several bulls were bught last month by Martin county farmers.

Bailey Olds, Madison county, has a spring broiler project will under way.

Pike county's sheep industry has doubled in number, and also there no dog losses last year.

Official Routes to The New York World's Fair

NEW YORK—Approved recently by Mayor F. H. La Guardia of New York City and Grover A. Whalen, President of the New York World's Fair, this map is designed to be of especial use to those motoring to the exposition. A comprehensive system of handling Fair traffic has been developed. Information booths will be found at bridge and tunnel approaches to New York. According to Mr. Whalen, out-of-town motorists will be able to thread their way through the city to the Fair grounds "as easily as they now go from home down to Main Street."

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last week, potato varieties and the way to prepare it was discussed, as well as what potato varieties should be used for various purposes outlined. It was also shown why buying new seed each year, especially if the usual spring varieties, should be done, rather than to try to make home grown potatoes do. The advantage of using only certified seed was discussed.

Now, no matter whether the seed is certified or so-called 'select," it should receive the treatment to cleanse it of the grems of scab or black scurf; certified seed guarantees only against the "running-out" diseases, caused by virus that is contained within the tubers and is thus out of reach ofexternal treatment. Scab is the more generally recognized disease because it disfigures the tubers, but scurf, though showing no sign on the potatoes themselves, cause reduction in yields. Two methods of treatment are discussed in Kentucky Extension Circular No. 307. Not much time is needed and no great expense is involved. A guage ofits cost is that the extra potatoes that result from using the treatment is that the extra potatoes cost less than 2 cents a bushel to produce.

Cutting the seed comes next, and on how this is done may depend the crop, for unless the seed pieces are large enough, a slow start is made, and the end o fthe spring rainy season may come before the potatoes are fully made. Seed pieces should be thick and blocky, weighing frm 1 1-4 to 1 1-2 ounces, and there should be at least one good eye. They should be dropped, one at a place, from 13 to 15 inches apart.

Last week it was said that potato land should be broken 10 inches deep. This should be the depth, so that planting may be 5 inches deep. Thus the roots will lie in the soil relatively moist and relatively cool. It is not meant that full evering should be done at once; rather, the season should be taken into account, the potatoes covered deeply enough to be out of freezing danger and the furrows cultivated shut later. Thus the advantage of shallow covering, with a consequent early start, as well as that of deep planting, is had.

Potatoes need a wealth of plant food. No matter how rich the land may be considered, complete fertilizer such as 4-8-6 or 5-10 5 should be used, and under the seed pieces, as explained in Circular No 307.

Potatoes should always be cultivated; never "worked," if by this is meant deep stirring that may put the potato roots in jeopardy. Any damage to the roots of any crop, or even any disturbance of the soil about them, must check the grwth of that crop, and be reflected in reduced amounts of potatoes.

Merely a shallow stirring of the soil is needed to control the weeds and this is the only object many cultivating. "Scalping" the soil or scraping it, with a hand hoe, is the best kind of "working" for potatoes "Shovel plows" or double shovels or the three-shovel "Rastus should nver be used in a potato patch; much better is a 5-tooth cultivator or the 13-tooth "garden harrow," and these without any weights on them.

The pests that bother potatoes are the Colorado beetle, the flea-beetle and the blight. All three can be stopped by spraying with Bordeaux mixture to which arsenate is added, after the manner described in Circular 307. This circular, by the way, is free for the asking, either from the county agent or from the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington.

Mountain Superstitinons

Drain cup of the tea, being careful not to lose any of the leavesin so doing. Then reverse the cup on the saucer and twist it around three times to the left. After doing this, turn the cup rightside up and read the emblems. Try only on Saturdays.

Anchor: This is the sign of trade and travel, both carried onsuccessfully. If standing alone at the top of the cup, it indicates true love

Birds: You have doubtless had worrries, but the tea "tea leaf" birds carry them away. If surrounded by other leaves, it means a pleasant journey.

Clouds: Small, light clouds mean the granting of your dearest wish. If they are heavy and lowering, disappointments.

Smoke: Seen clearly it is a sign of conquering in the face of deceit from your associates. Thickly surrounded, trouble will come.

Moon: Social and political prominence will come to you if the moon shines alone. If cloud surround it, regret for a short period.

Mouse: Standing alone it is an omen of recovery of lost object. Almost indistinguishable among other leaves, you must prepare for disappointment in this respect.

Heart: Denotes loves which is reciprocated, and joy over a gift.

Cross: Standing alone, your troubles will soon clear: In the thick, more troubles will come.

Rider: He brings good news from afar and lasting prosperity.

Rose (or flowers in general): They mean pride and pleasure in your children and success in artistic lines.

Lion (or any wild animal): Good fortune to eminent persons, if clear and distinct.

Ball: Good luck for you and your friends.

Garden: Clearly indicated, you willhave good and loyal friends. Encompassed by other leaves, beware of false acquaintances.

Fish: Denotes sucessful enterprises.

Dog: Clearly seen and alone, it indicates popularity and friends. If alone, it indicates popularity and friends. If seen at the extreme bottom of the cup, someone is envious of you.

Coffin: This means death or a serious illness. Closely surrounded, an inheritance.

LOUISVILLE A GOOD SPOT FOR KEEN JOHNSON

For a good early season spring bet we hand you Keen Johnson in Jefferson County by a comfortable margin. There is a lot of "anti-Brown" sentiment in Louisville, and the boys who do the work like Johnson.

According to reports received by the Divison of Game and Fish from Burkesville, Ky., the fish are leaping up and down Cumberland river and are inviting fishermen to try their luck.

QUALITY GOVERNS PRICES OF LAMBS

That lower lamb prices late in the season are due to light weight and lack of quality, is asserted in a Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station bulletin called "Factors Affecting the Place of Sheep on Kentucky Farms."

There is a tendency to sell lambs at lighter weights as the season advances, it is pointed out. Lambs lacking in weight are usually lacking in quality and condition, and thereby have a lower dressing percentage than lambs of a desirable market weight and condition.

It is reasonable to assume, it is said in this bulletoin, that the lighter weights of lambs as well as the increased number reaching market during the advancedmarketingseason cause the general decrease in price.

GREAT BRITAIN IS LARGE MEDICINALS MARKET

Despite the fact that the United Kingdom is one of the world's largest manufacturers and exporters of medicinals, imports of such products from the United States approximate $2,000,000 annually, according to a report to the Chemical Division, Department of Commerce, received by its Louisville District Office. Formerly the United States was the leading foreign supplier of medicinals to the British market but in 1937 lost its lead to Germany, during which year Germany accounted for 35 per cent of the import trade and the United States supplied 25 per cent.

LUDLOW CELEBRATES 75TH MILESTONE

Ludlow is celebrating its 75th anniversary. The event which will mark another event in a civic program commemorating the days when the town's population was 300, will be the presentation Thursday night of a Council meeting as it was back in 1864. The contrast with the busy city of today, the home of more than 5,000 citizens, should provide the frighlight of an interesting evening. Other events are to be staged at future dates.

Author of the script for this Council meeting of Civil War time is John M. Hunnicutt, floor leader in 1938 House of Representatives, who has delved into the early history of Ludlow and has prepared an authentic dramatization of what could well have happened at this early gathering of the selectmen of the village.

Ludlow residents are justly proud to celebrate this diamond anniversary of their thriving community. Looking back through the years they can see growth marked by the milestones of the years. They see about them the homes of their several thousand citizens; they see industries that have thrived in their city and today are giving employment to a large number of the residents; they see the development of a splendid school system, of the growth of playground and recreatiala facilities, of a stadium and parks and businesses.

Truly Ludlow should be the center of all eyes in northern Kentucky during the next few days when it stages this observance of its civic progress. And the sister cities and town of this region should join in wishing Ludlow 75 more years of glorious advancement. Growing at the same rate as in the past Ludlow inanother three-quarters of a century would be in the 100,000-popultion class.

NEW DEVELOPMENT

By D. A. Kirk
Branch Manager
International Harvester Company

One of the most important recent developments in farming is molasses silage made from grasses, legume, and grains. One hears much discussion on this question in farm circles, and invyariably these questions occur:

What is molasses silage? How is it made? Waht are its advantages? What results are obtained from its use?

What Is Molasses Silage?

Molasses silage is any chopped grass, legume, or cereal or any combination of thees crops ensiled with molasses as a preservative. The crop, or crops, suitable include alfalfa, soybeans, clovers, cowpeas, an dvete hamong the legumes; among the grasses, blue, prairie, timothy, orchard, quack, millet, and sudan; an damong the cereals, oats, rye, barley and wheat. Often various combinations of these are used. The molasses is of the inexpensive blackstrap variety—cane or beet molasses. The reason for its use is to provide the proper fermentation. Without this ingredient, such silage would tend to decay and become worthless as a feed.

How Is It Made?

Molasses silage is commonly made by a three-step method. First the crop is cut in an early stage with a windrow-equipped mower that lays the mown hay in a windrow. The use of thet windrower attachmen eliminatse the necessity of a separate raking operation. Second, the green material is loaded immediately on the rack, wagon, or truck by means of a green crop loader. Green crop loaders are especially designed to handl heavy green crops. Ordinary hay loaders are apt to cause considerable trouble when used in loading green crops, because they have been primarily designed for handling dehydrated (cured) hay, which weighs about one-fourth as much as the green crop. Third, the green material is hauled to the silo and put through a hay chopper equipped with molasses distribution system. Once the crop lands on the specially designed feed table of the modern hay chopper, the whole operation of supplying molasses, chopping and elevating into the silo is automatic, safe, and economical.

There are seeval points worthy of special mention. In the first place, it has been found desirable to cut only such amounts of the crop as can be handled in the same half day,

KENTUCKY'S JUNIOR HALL OF FAME

Kentucky farm boys and girls who win state championships in 4H club work are grouped in a Junior Hall of Fame. Honored this year are champions in projects as follows—A. Percy Adair, Burbon county, swine raising; Brownie Bolton, Grayson county, corn growing; Mary K. Ewbank, Gallatin county, sheep breeding; John Elmer Kalmey, Jefferson county, daring; Doriselwood Lemon, Harrison county, clothing making; Virgina Miller, Jefferson county, foods; Glenda Moultrie, Hickman county, canning; Patsey Mae Newell, Mason county, poultry raising; Robert Reisz, Daviess county tobacco production; Kenton Ross, Garrard county, baby beef production; and Gladys Tilton, Fayette county, room improvement.

PLANS TESTS

Students from six Northern Kentucky counties will vie at 3:30 p. mfi Friday a Lloyd High School, Erlanger, for top ranking in 18 scholastic tests.

Another student competition will be held at Bellevue High School, where three students will compete at 8:30 p. m. Thursday in the finals of an oratorical contest.

The afternoon session at Lloyd will be for schools of Kenton, Boone, Campbell, Grant, Gallatin and Pendleton counties. Supt Edgar Arnett said.

Numerous Events

Events to be contested include American and world history;English mechanics and literature, civics, general science, biology, algebra, and beometry, acounting, short hand and typing, home economics, Latin, general business information and geometry, accounting, short-

Only the best students from each school will take part and the top 10 per cent will be awarded certificates of merit when grades are recorded, it was said.

Campbell county elimination finals of a public speaking contest sponsored by the Kentucky Bankers' Association, Louisville, will be held Thursday night at Bellevue High School.

Representatives of the three schools will compete on the subject, "The Value of the Bank in the Community"

Contestants, winners by elimination at their respective schools, are Oma Field, Campbell County High School, Alexandria, Alice Davis, Bellevue High School and William Moorfield, Highland High Sschool, Ft. Thomas.

G. J. Egan Is Chairman

G. J. Egan, Bellevue, is chaiyman of arrangements in Campbell county.

He announced that the winner Thursday night would compete in a group competition, probably in May, with represeniatives from seven counties.

The finals, Mr. Egan said, are to be held in July at the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

First prize will be one year's tuition in any Kentucky college, Mr. Egan explained; second; $100, and third $50. Approximately $850 will be given in prizes.

This is the first year the association has undertaken the contest Mr. Egan said it is likely to be an annual affair.

Adolf Hitler must have felt there was a certain unpleasant similarity between President Roosevelt's note and the familiar legal question: "Do you still beat your wife? Yea or no."

PREPARE SUPPLIES

Boone countylimestone dealers have prepared to supply farmers with sufficent agricultural limestone to supply their 1939 needs, accordingto reports given H. R. Forker, county agent. They advise that this important soil fertilizer is delivered farmers at a cheaper price than paid in most parts of the state, but due to the large quantities used, they do not plan to increase the price this year.

The 1939 prices quoted by most dealers are around $2.00 per ton for the crushed stone delivered the farm in five ton lots. Most dealers will spread the stone for an additional fifty cents per ton. Pulverizer operators will crush a high qualitf agricultural stone on the farm at rates varying from 70 cents to 85 cents per ton dependinf on the quantity and location of the stone.

Agricultural limestone dealers who have reported at thecounty office they are ready to supply the farmers 1939 needs are—John W. Moore, Burlington, Rout No. 1, Phone Hebron 133; W. J. Craig, Burlington, Route No. 2, phone 685-X or 527; Stanley Groves, Hebron, phone Hebron 341 and Charles Kraft, Ludlow Route No. 2.

Pulverizer operators who hafe reported they will go anymhere in the county and are equipped to render efficient service are:—Orville Kelly, Burlington, Route 2, phone Burlington 682-X and Charles Kraft, Ludlow, Route No. 2.

8,348.8 tons of pliverized agricultural limestone were used the past year. Limestone has given substantial increases in clover and grass yields nd in many cases corn and other crops. Two tons per acre is a sufficient treatment for the average soil The Agricultural Conservation Program pays $1.50 per ton for ston eand $1.50 per hundred for 47 percent phosphate used on the soil building allowance. Immediate use of both these fertilizers is important if the greatest benefits from the A. C. program are going to be received. Credit assignments are available at the county office for farmers who do not have ready cash to pay for stone purchased.

NEW LOCATION

The Independent Linoleum and Carpet Company has moved to their new store, 527 Madison, one door north of the old location. Look for name on the window. They have only one entrance and the name of Independent Linoleum and Carpet Company in on the door of the entrance.

Mr. Miller is the proprietor and has has only the one store at 527 Madison, carrying the same fine quality of Rugs, Carpets and Linoleums. Every rug and piece of linoleum is guaranteed. This is the same old firm doing business for twenty years in Covington. Ask for Mr. Miller and make sure you have the right store. There has been some confusion since they moved from the old location—ask for their free gifts.

BROODS 4,700

Grant Maddox, of near Florence, has 47 baby chicks being brooded in colony brooder houses under the Kentucky Clean Chick Program Plan, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. This is the largest poultry enterprise in Boone County and one of the largest in Kentucky.

Maddox is one of the most successful commercial poultrymen in the State. He breed, hatches and develops his laying stock carefully following the five point clean chick program, namely: (1) clean chicks, (2) clean brooding equipment, (3) clean ground, (4) balanced rations and (5) careful management. Plans of the Clean Chick Program in Poultry Leaflet No. 4 are available at the County Office.

CORN BREEDERS

Boone county hybrid corn seed producers report splendid success in the sale of hybrid corn seed. The breeders, last year, produced approximately 360 bushels of approved double crossed seed. To date practically all of this has been sold. A large amount was sold to growers in adjoining counties.

Charter members of the Boone County Hybrid Corn Breeders Association are B. G. Stephens, Wilton Stephens, William Moore, John E. Crigler and Lloyd Siekman. The association plans to grow 13 acres of hybrid seed in 1939. The varieties to be grown are U. S. 13, U. S. 44, Indiana 820, Indiana 845 and Kentucky No. 69.

SPELLING CHAMPION

Kentucky's Fifteenth Spelling Bee Champion is Mary Hildegrade Wedding, 12, who is in the eighth grade of St. Jerome School at Francy Farm, Graves County. Mary Hildegarde is the second speller from that county to win the State Spelling Bee, which has been conducted since 1925 by the Courier-Journal.

Mary Hildegarde won the match only after she had eliminated 106 other city and county champions. Sixty-five of the spellers were eliminated by a written test. After a luncheon in their honor, the oral finalists began spelling at Memorial Auditorium, as a programmed feature of the Kentucky Education Association convention.

After two and one-half hours, only Mary Hildegarde and Ann LaFollette, Louisville Parochial School entry, were left. Both missed the word "'hartebeest" and both continued in the match. After a thirty-minute world duel, Ann missed Sidereal", which was corrected by the champion who then spelled sapphire to clinch the match.

Mary Hildegarde will be sent with her chaperon to Washington by the Courier-Journal to represent the State in the National Spelling Bee, May 29. The champion was third in the 1938 match. Ann received a check for $100 for finishing second. She also was second in 1938.

GATEWAY TO SOUTH

Those civic promotion fellows who go around carrying the torch for Northern Kentucky — and why shouldn't they—have for years advanced the idea that Covington and Newport are gateways of the South

It is a good idea, everyone in Northern Kentucky agrees, but it has lately become an idea only. In other words, especially those of motorists, Northern Kentucky can't be the gateway to the South, beacuse there is no road from Northern Kentucky to the South.

One who has attempted to drive over the Dixie Highway this spring is forced to agree with the motorists. The road has been pounded to pieces. There is not another like it even in rural Edmonson County where they still use jolt wagons when they want to put on the dog.

Tip For Candidates

There recenty has been organized an association to keep the Dixie Highway between Covington and Williamstown approximately where it is. Another rain or so and a few more trucks and the members of the association will have to roll up their sleeves and drive stakes or piles is order to keep the road at all

Since roads are mixed up with politics here is a tip for all candidates for Governor: Promise and deliver a road from Covington south and one from Newport south and wrap up the Kenton and Campbell County vote.

Seriously, it would behoove all Northern and Central Kentucky to get behind a movement to rebuild the Dixie Highway immediately. Otherwise Kentucky stands ready to lose most of its tourist araffic.

Thieves recently stole eighteen sewing machines from the United Shirt and Blouse Company plant at Shelton, Conn. As a result, 125 women employees were kept out of jobs until new machines could be obtained.

Former U. K. Star Expected To Strengthen Beecos Nine

That the Covington Beecos will be well fortified on the mound when they open the Tri-State League season. April 30 at the Covington Ball Park, became evident this week when Beck officials signed "Frenchy DeMoisey, formery Walton, Ky right-hand flipper, to a contract, according to Gene Kennedy.

DeMoisey, who starred at the University of Kentucky before he tacked his moniker on a Louisville Colonel contract, will share the hill burden will Alex Hess, a portsider who has bene pitching good baseball for Cincinnati for the last several years.

In addition to DeMoisey, the locals landed Vernon Hauser, former Covington Hi luminary who spent last summer wearing the mask and chest protector of the El Dorado team, a Cincinnati Reds' farm Hauser will round out the battery combination in good style.

The Beeks open against the Ciney Box Lunch team, three of whose mainstays are from Newport. They are Marty Kehoe and Doc Morris, the reversible battery, and Eddie Meyers, a shortstop, who played last year with Nashville in the Southern Association.

Kehoe and Morris startled fans last summer by alternating with each other on the mound and behind the plate.

Cold weather has hampered Beeco practice sessions so far, but Sunday if the sun shines with any degree of consistency they will try to get in some good conditioning 'licks. Approximately 20 ball-tossers are expected to take part.

Hopper-Dickerson

A very pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. Roy Johnson at the home of Mrs. Lucy Ryle and Mr. Amos Sisson near Warsaw, on Sunday afternoon, April 2, at 4:30 p. m. in the presence of relatives and near friends, when Miss Dorothy Mae Hopper became the bride of Mr. Harold Dickerson.

The bride was very attractive in a navy blue outfit, her flowers being talisman rose buds and white sweet peas, while the groom was attired in brown.

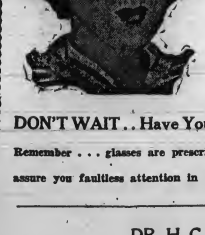
KY. SOCIETY

Citizens throught Kentucky have an opportunity again to give the State's crippld child a "lift", as the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children mails to its contributors a letter telling of work accomplished during the past year and asking for a renewal of membership. Memberships range from $1.00 to $100 and upon the support gained in this manner the Crippled Children Society dedends for its existence. Upon the result of this annual appeal also dedends the amount of supplementary funds turned over to the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission for extension of its work.

LEO GROGER



Leo Groger, aged 44, passed away at his home on the Three-L Highway, Saturday, April 15, following a long illness.

Mr. Groger was a native of Kenton county and a member of the Christian Church, which he regularly attended. Funeral services were held from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theo Groger, of Florence on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Raymond Simpson conducting the services.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theo Groger; two brothers, Ralph and Elmer Groger; two sisters, Mrs. Charles Miller, of Ghent, Ky., and Mrs. Mabel Miller, of Big Bone, Ky., and 14 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of arrangements.

ACCURATE DATA

Collection of Social Security taxes is making it possible to get the most accurate data yet available on earnings of American workers. Final returns for 1937 show that the 29,107,034 workers covered by the Act had total earnings of $26,825,366,241. That's an average of $920 a year, or $17 a week. About one-third of this group earned less than $500 in the year.

The figures clearly show that earnings run highest in the more industrialized sections of the country with the average for New England, the middle Atlantic states and the Great Lakes region above the national average. Workers in Michigan, with its automobile and steel plants, led all others, their average annual wage being $1,102. New York workers were second with $1,042 and Illionis workers third with $1,102.

A FAIR SWAP FOR COTTON

Of all the numerous and sometimes fantastic plans advanced proposing to rid this country of at least part of the 11,000,000 bales of cotton now held under government loans, the only one advanced up to this time that seems to have any chance of success is the one announced by Senator Byrnes of South Carolina.

It is entirely possible that some "bugs" may develop in the plan, which simply stated, would swap several hundred thousand bales of cotton for several hundred thousand tons of raw rubber and tin. But we can't detect any flaws now.

The plan is at least logical. The United States has some 11,000,000 bales of cotton which it can't use. Great Britain, Belgium and the Netherlands have surpluses of rubber and tin which they can't get rid of. Those countries are our friends, and in the event of war they'll be needing that cotton even more than now. And our demand for rubber and tin will be more imperative.

We hope this plan may be tried successfully. It seems to fit exactly the best definition of trade we've ever heard:

"Trade is the process by which two men get what both men want, each parting with what neither needs, both profiting by what neither loses."

CIVILIZATION

The dawn of civilization may be said to date from the moment prehistoric man discovered fire, and since that time, for many a human being, civilization, as far as he was personally concerned, has end with a fire.

Fire, it may be said, is a sort of Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde servant of mankind, on the one hand being his most essential aide, and under other circumstances, one of man's worst enemies. Controlled fire is a boon of incalculable value—uncontrolled fire is a ravening, destroying demon.

The problem of controlling fire is as old as history. Astounding progress has been made in the direction of perfecting fire-fighting equipment and developing materials to resist fire. The fire-fighting equipment of yesterday is a ludicrous array in comparison with the efficient equipment of today, even as building construction of yesterday offered a veritable invitation to fire.

Aggressive effort has been made in recent years toward educating the public in preventing fires—and here, too, progress has been chalked up, but on nowhere near a comparable scale. Some of us have learned the simple lessons that will eliminate most hazards—many of us have not. It is a safe bet that at least one home out of two—and this includes new as well as old ones—contains flagrant hazards which the owner disregards.

In law, ignorance is no excuse, and it would be a fine thing if that same principle were extended to cover the harboring of fire hazards. Each year, losses running into millions of dollars, to say nothing of the loss of human life, results from improper storage of inflammable liquids, from needless accumulations of wastes, from amateur tampering with electric fixtures, from carelessness with smoking materials of wastes, from amateur tampering with elecfor a majority of all fires.—WATCH FOR THEM!

When the next count is made, we expect that just as many of us will have lost money as we did in the old days before the Government took charge of the stock market.

OUR WAY IS ADEQUATE

Before we spend too much time and money on a plan for this country, it might be profitable to check back through history and find out just how we got along in the past.

Since this government was founded, important things have usually been done at unexpected times and by unexpected people. We didn't designate anyone to develop our important inventions, as they claim to be doing in Russia.

The lightning-rod was invented by a printer named Benjamin Franklin. The cotton-gin was invented by a teacher named Eli Whitney. The telegraph was invented by a painter named Morse. The electric light and the phonograph were invented by a telegrapher named Thomas A. Edison.

We chose a Virginia aristocrat named George Washington to manage our experiment in democracy. We sent the unsophisticated Franklin to represent us at the elegant French court. We let the dilettante intellectual named Thomas Jefferson define the rights of the common people under democracy.

When the slavery problem pressed for a solution, we turned to a lawyer named Abraham Lincoln, and when the World War was upon us we chose a college professor named Woodrow Wilson.

"Surely," says a writer in the New York Times, in his best ironic vein," "there's a better way to do things. If Stalin wants artificial rubber he turns to a plant biologist and tells him to get busy. If he wants a dead man revived he turns to a biochemist. If he decides on a hydro-electric plant, he imports foreign engineers."

"But here," he continues, "everything is in the

Before we spend too much time and money on a old, confused haphazard tradition of Christopher Columbus, who was looking for China when he discovered America."

There may be a better way to get things done, but past experience indicates that the Russian way is not the right way.

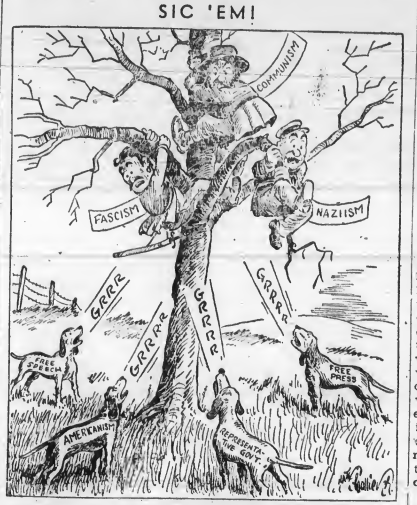
DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

I will never forget my good friend Chaplain Hughes' version of the League of Nations. Chaplain Hughes was a real chaplain all through the World War. He is now chaplain at the Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio.

He was not a tenderfoot during the war, staying in his headquarters and waiting for the wounded and dying to be brought to him on stretchers. He was on the battlefield in the midst of the shell and shot and gas with his boys. When they went down he was the first to go to them to help relieve and bind their wounds, as well as to give them spiritual guidance in their dying hours.



In these trying times he learned his lesson on the League of Nations. I heard him say he had the League of Nations shot into him when he went down on his knees and took the little trinkets and keepsakes from the pockets of the dying boys, with their life's blood trickling thru his fingers. He would write their names and last dying words they would send to their parents back home.

He repeated it with great emphasis: "I am for the League of Nations, for I had it shot into me." Chaplain Hughes kept and guarded all keepsakes and memoranda entrusted to him with a holy sacredness. When he came back to the United States he never ceased to do what he considered his God-given task until he, found every parent and told them the story of their dying boy, who had died for a cruel war that turned the world upside down.

We are still upside down, and it is a big question when we will get back on our feet. While many try to shift our troubles on other things, the World War is the greatest part of our present trouble.

SIC 'EM!

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

The moral of this story is an old one: Never sign on the dotted line until you've read what you are signing.

Apparently, though, it is a moral lesson that about half the United States Senators have forgotten, or are just learning. And a first-hand experience with the moral is causing these Senators some embarrassing moments right now.

Center of the embarrassment is a far-reaching tax bill, with a sugar-coated title saying it would "take the profits out of war," which recently appeared in the Senate bill hopper. It bore the names of 50 Senators as sponsors.

Offhand, the bill appeared one likely to be favored by the public. After all, nobody likes war. But careful reading of this bill with the "take the profits out of war" title has revealed the title to be a misnamer.

In reality, the bill goes far beyond the so-called "profits of war," and reaches right down to the bottom of everybody's pocket. So broad is the bill that low income groups who now escape paying income taxes but of course still pay heavily through indirect taxes) would have to give up a good part of their earnings during war time as a "profit of war." The tax scale, under this measure, would be graduated to 99 per cent for some income groups, meaning that for every $100 earned, $99 would have to go to the government as a "war profit."

But all this, apparently, was not known by these 50 sponsoring Senators when they signed on the dotted line. When the real purpose of the bill became known, a survey by newspapers at the Capital revealed that 40 had not even read the bill before agreeing to sponsor it. Now they are having a difficult time trying to make gracious explanations. And the explanation appears to be that they had not read beyond the title.

When the Supreme Court recently sat down on the sit-down strike, declaring it an illegal practice, the question naturally arose around the Capital City as to the future prestige of the parent of the sit-down strike (the CIO.). Can CIO influence survive this legal spanking? was the question.

Perhaps the question has not been fully answered, but some Washington observers believe that it has been partially answered, at least as far as some Congressmen are concerned. And the answer appears to be NO.

This answer came about recently when a Senate committee was debating the question of holding public hearings on proposals to amend the National Labor Relations Act. The CIO vigorously opposed the idea of public hearings. CIO representatives were on Capitol Hill daily pressuring Senators to drop the idea. CIO Leader Lewis was even quoted in a news story as saying that if hearings were held his organization would bolt the labor conference.

Final outcome was a unanimous vote by the committee to hold public hearngis, which was interpreted by the observers as another spanking of the CIO and a blow to its influence.

Another confidential report, based on a secret investigation of living-standard claims of the dictator countries is being circulated among employment in Germany, where it has been claimed that the Nazi unemployment. It follows by a few weeks a secret study of living comfor mof government has abolished high Federal officials.

This one is based on a study of ditions and living costs in the "ism" lands, which struck a hearty blow at the dictators' claims that Utopia had come to people under their leadership.

Actual German employment conditions were found to be quite different to the official Nazi claims, the current report points out.

The investigator who wrote the confidential memo reported that he found the official German employment figures "doctored." Even persons imprisoned in concentration camps were listed as "employed," he said. Also, the many millions working on relief work projects (most of the military) were considered "employed" by the Nazis. In the U. S., work relief employees the counted as unemployed.

TO OBSERVE 25TH YEAR OF WORK TO IMPROVE FARMING

Twenty-four Kentucky counties which have had farm agents since the inauguration of agricultural extension work in 1914, will this spring observe the 25th anniversary of the establishment of thi swork to help improve conditions on the farm. In most counties there will be a dinner for farmers, homemakers, 4-H club members and others interested in agricultural improvement. The progress of a quarter century will be reviewed and the improvements in the farms and the farm homes noted.

Many farm practices have been improved as a result of the farm agent and the agricultural extension work, it is pointed out. Some of these developments in Kentucky include the growing of large acreages of korean lespedeza, the extensive use of limestone, marl and superphosphate, the seeding of winter cover and pasture crops and of grasses, the improvement of beef cattle, sheep and hogs, the development of dairy and poultry raising, the control of livestock diseases, the conservation of the soil, and the development of 4-H clubs.

All of the 120 Kentucky counties now have farm agents and more than half of them have home demonstration agents. Farm women have organized homemakers' clubs to study better methods of homemaking, with emphasis on health, improved diet, the home production of vegetables, fruit and meat, and better living on farms.

CUTTING SPROUTS

When I began to doubt the facts that I talk about in this rambling column, I turn back to my old diaries, kept when I was a teen-age boy, and find all the material that I need and confirmation of everything I have thus far written. The dairies were written with no thought of their ever becoming of value; they merely recorded the day's weather and told what I did or where I went, with very rare a few other things. Just now, in a diary written in 1905, I found this simple entry: "I have been cutting sprouts in the newground today." To many of the younger generation that maens nearly nothing; to the oldtimers it chronicles a whole cycle of life.

Sprouts were of several varieties. The kind I spoke of in my diary were those that had come up from stumps that still retained enough life to send up sprouts for a season or two after the clearing was cultivated. Sometimes these sprouts were a nuisance for years, particularly in the clearings in the creek bottoms, where the soil was rich and the moisture plentiful. But for the cutting of these sprouts it would have been pretty hard to see the corn in the newground after the last plowing was done). I have gone by fields that looked like young orchards with corn growing among the trees. Our fathers warned us against just such places and tried to cheer us in one of the most tedious jobs I ever engaged in.

Newground sprouts, though, were only a small chapter in this annual cuttin. Upland fields that may have remained in pasture for a year a more grew up in sassafras and persimmon sprouts. I verily believe that these shrubby trees have the most vitality of any of our native plants. The labors with the axe or the grubbing hoe, followed by the plow, seem to cultivate the deeplying roots, so that the next year state of the sassafras or persimmon brings as a big a job of clearing the land for the plow as ever. The sprout is like that of the man in the Bible, wore at last than at first. It takes philosophy like this or even more to keep the boy clearing his young newground with axe and grubbing hoe.

Orators used to tell us that cutting sprouts, like turning the grindstone, produced great men. I have looked in vain for a large crop of geniuses from the rugged hillsides around old Fidelity.

Even worse than cutting sprouts was and is cutting briars. Sprouts may whip you in the face when you hit them, but they leave no barbs. Long ago I learned the way to prevent briars from hitting you is to hit them hard licks, severing them completely; blackberry briars are not to be coddled. But when briars are all grown up with weeds and grapevines, expect the worst. If you escape without bloody marks, you are a better briar-cutter than I have ever been.

There is one thing that a boy who is cutting sprouts can do to make time pass: he can sharpen his grubbing hoe or his briar blade. In theory, at least, he is making time. I am afraid that in practice he is using precious hours. A sharp scythe usually means potential rather than actual bushes or briars cut.

Chevrolet News

William E. Holler, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Division, who was the principal speaker at the National Automobile Dealers Association banquet Wednesday night, April 19, left Detroit for San Francisco on April 13. He boarded the "Forty Niner," crack train of the Union Pacific Railroad, at Chicago on Friday, arriving at the Golden Gate Sunday morning.

Mr. Holler has achieved national recognition for his work in better-in dealer-factor relations in the automobile industry and his talk to the dealers at the N. A. D. A. convention banquet will include his experiences in pioneering improved dealer-factor relationships in the Chevrolet Motor Divison. The subject of his talk to be given at the Palace Hotel, will be "My Conception of a Quality Dealer Program."

The essence of the Holler policy is that there are too many automobile dealers for the good of the customer, the community and the dealer body; that a lesser number of permanent, financially-sound automobile dealers will serve customers and community better and that it is impossible for a company to arrive at the proper number of dealers for anyera unless scientific research is made by trained field crews to determine the potential of each area as to customer needs and sales.

The foundation of the Chevrolet Quality Program is painstaking research in each community to determine scientifically the potential in customers and sales which govern the number of dealers for that area. A ten-year period is examined, with its ups and downs, before an average is struck that will carry through good times and bad.

To bring the customer closer to the manufacturing company, Holler evolved the Planning Partnership with the 8,600 Chevrolet dealers, whereby they make recommendations and suggestions each month as to sales policies and plans, the product, advertising and service. more than 63 per cent of the recommendations of the dealer committees have been incorporated into the programs and adopted by the company.

In business, practical results count heavily, and theories, no matter how idealistically projected, must run the gamut of everyday life with its competitions and difficulties, and showresult s or be rejected. It is claimed that Chevrolet has produced outstanding results.

During the last five years, Chevrolet dealers have led the industry four times and they are leading it so far this year.

Their national number has been reduced to approximately 8,600 from a former high of 10,800. This lesser number of dealers has shattered all company records of selling. The lesser number has served the public and community in every way, according to company officials.

The results attained by the Holler type of operation have attracted the attention of business men nationally. Automobile dealers in other companies have see the program work out in their areas and have talked with Chevrolet dealers in their trade associations as to company policies that aid or retard.

The Chevrolet dealers have become the strongest supporters of the Holler policies and through them and their relations with other dealers in the automobile business came the demand that Holler appear before the convention and present his ideas as to what constitutes a modern dealer-factory relationship as expressed in the Chevrolet Quality Dealer program.

FIRST TELEVISION PICTURE

NEW YORK—Amos 'n' Andy, famed blackfaced comedians, made television history at the New York World's Fair when they played the stellar roles in the first experimental television pickup of a commercial radio program. This is how they appeared on the television screen. Incidentally, that's Amos on the left. Later Mr. Whalen was interviewed on the national broadcast of the comedians.

CATTLE ON FEED, APRIL 1, 1939

The number of cattle on feed in the eleven Corn Belt States on April 1 was about 13 per cent larger than a year earlier, it is estimated by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This increase was equivalent to about 160,000 head, though the increase of 13 per cent this year follows an estimated increase of 20 per cent on April 1, 1938 over April 1, 1937. The number on feed in early April this year is not yet back to the number on the corresponding date in most of the 15 years prior to1934.

The number on feed on April 1 this year was larger than last in all of the States, with the largest increases in the Western Corn Belt. The moderate increases in the Eastern Corn Belt States bring the number on feed in those States on April 1 to the highest level for the past ten years. The number in the Western Corn Belt, however, is still considerably below the average for the pre-drouth years, 1929-1933.

Information as to the number of cattle still on feed in Colorado on April 1 indicates that the number this year was about 5 percent below a year earlier. The number in the Scottsbluff section of Nebraska was about 10 per cent smalleron April 1 than a year earlier.

The number on feed in the Corn Belt January 1, 1939, was estimated as 7 per cent larger than a year earlier compared with the increase of 13 per cent on April 1. Marketings of fed cattle during the three months from January through the month of March this year were smaller than during the corresponding months of 1938, although the number on feed January 1 was larger. This bears out the indication from the January report that an unusually large percentage of the cattle one feed January 1 would not be marketed until after April 1. Reports received from feeders in April shown that for the Corn Belt as a whole, 65 per cent of the cattle on feed April 1 had been on feed over three months. This percentage as reported was much larger in the Eastern Corn Belt than in the Western, averaging about 80 per cent in the former and about 55 per cent in the latter.

Reports from a large number of Corn Belt feeders giving the months in which they expected to market cattle on feed April 1 show that the proportion to be marketed during the three months, April through June, was a little larger than the ver yemall proportion reported last year, but was much below the proportion reported in any of the preceding ten years. The proportion to be marketed after August 1 was the largest, with the exception of last year, in the ten years. These marketing intentions reports would indicate that the supply of fed cattle would be larger than last year in most months from April through early Fall, with the largest increases in July and August.

The estimated numbers on feed April 1, 1939, as a percentage of the number on April 1, 1938, by States, are as follows:

Ohio	105	Missouri	112
Indiana	107	So. Dakota	135
Illinois	108	Nebraska	116
Michigan	106	Kansas	115
Wisconsin	110
Minnesota	110	Corn Belt
Iowa	108	(weighted	113

One of the hopeful signs of American democracy is that after 015 years the republic still has a few citizens who do not believe that the government should support them.

PUERTO RICAN TOBACCO PURCHASES BREAKS RECORDS

Puerto Rico's heavy purchases of cigarettes from Kentucky and other tobacco producing States are breaking all records during the current fiscal year, according to a statement bythe Puerto Rican Trade Council.

"The island, which ranks second as a market for cigarettes shipped from continental United States, purchased a total of 536,250,000 cigarettes from the mainland during the first eight months of the fiscal year, an increase of 6 per cent over the same period a year ago," the council reports. "Puerto Rico in recent years has been spending more than $3,000,000 annually for the American-made product, sales to the island having doubled in the last eleven years."

Although tobacco is the second largest crop in Puerto Rico, the output is used almost entirly in cigar manufacture, and the territory buys about 85 per cent of its cigarette from the mainland United States, the council states.

U. S. LUMBER EXPORTS DECLINE SLIGHTLY

Total exports of hardwood and softwood lumber (including boards, planks, scantlings, flooring, sawed timber) and logs for the first two months of 1939 totaled 163,216 M board feet, as compared with 165,504 M feet for the first two months of 1938, a loss of 1 per cent, according to figures just released by the Forest Products Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, received by its Louisville District Office. Of the total 1939 amount, sawed material accounted for 140,680 M feet, as compared with 148,442 M feet for the first two months of 1938, a loss of 5 per cent. On the same basis of comparison, exports of logs and hewn timber totaled 22,536 M feet as against 17,062, a gain of 32 per cent.

The names for spending have changed several times in the past three years, but the multiplication table has remained the same for centuries.—Rawmond Moley.

U. S. EXPORTS OF COIN OPERATED MACHINES

Exports of coin-operated commodity vending machines from the United States during 1938 totaled 5,496 units, valued at $203,880, while exports of other vending machines, except musical, numbered 32,011 valued at $1,239,383, according to the Specialties Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in a report received by the Louisville District Office. Owning to restrictive legislation in France, exports to that country from the United States decreased considerably below the 1937 trade. In the Union of South Africa similar restrictions caused a decrease ed in their imports of such machine. The United Kingdom increased its purchases of "Other Coin Operated Machines" by 5,870 machines valued at $230,259 but imported very few commodity vending machines in '38. Countries showing much larger purchases in 1938 than in 1937 were: Finland, an increase of 208 per cent; Norway, 340 per cent; Sweden, 132 per cent; Panama, 266 per cent; Cuba, 52 per cent; Colombia, 330 per cent; Philippine Islands, 45 per cent; Australia, 23 per cent, and New Zealand, 280 per cent.

This year, plan to see America

THIS land you live in is full of wonders to thrill you.

So let your imagination ramble when you plan a vacation this year.

Would you like to visit both World's Fairs?

Would you like to take a dip in the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans—or see rugged mountains snow-capped in July?

Would you like to fish in a trout stream—or the Gulf Stream?

Would you like to tread in the East and South, ground hallowed by your nation's history—see the National Parks—retrace the trails of the covered wagon pioneers—or visit spots in the West, belonging to a civilization so old it has been forgotten?

Somewhere in this nine-thousand-mile swing around the country from border to border and coast to coast you can visit the most modern cities in the world and cities quaint with old world charm—watch the gleaming rails retreat behind you through majestic aisles of northern pines or miles of tropical trees bending under their burden of Spanish moss.

And you can do all these things on one flat rate "grand circle" railroad ticket, starting from your home town and bringing you back again—with stop-overs anywhere you wish—your own choice of routes—and 60 glorious days of opportunity to see America!

Travel by air-conditioned train today is so delightful that your vacation starts the moment you step aboard.

The cost? $90 for a coach ticket—$135 in Pullmans plus the cost of a berth. Special Pullman charges for the Grand Circle tour have also been established—$45 for one or two passengers in a lower berth and proportionately low rates for other space.

It is truly the opportunity of a lifetime made possible by the coordination and cooperation of your railroads. Better talk it over now with your local ticket agent. He can tell you anything about this great travel bargain that you want to know.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL!
On every hand you see evidence that the American railroads deliver the finest transportation service in the world—a service essential to the daily lives of everybody. And everybody—the farmer, banker, salesman, worker, clerk—is affected directly or indirectly by railroad depression or prosperity. Railroads need, and ask, no more than an opportunity to earn a living under rules, regulations and conditions which give them an opportunity to meet competition on equal terms. This is the purpose of the proposed Transportation Act 1939 now being considered by Congress.

e reason being taht a high moisture content of the crop is very desirable in making molasses silage. Dry material is not satisfactory unless much water is added, and such material has already lost much of its original feed value during the dehydrating, or drying, process in the filed. It is a fact that more than 25 per cent of the feeding value of grass is lost in the customary way of making hay, even under the most favorabel weather conditions. In rainy weather this loss frequently reaches 50 per cent and sometimes more. In making molasses silage from the freshly cut green crop there is no such loss, rain or shine.

Second, because the green crop is much heavier than dehydrated hay (a field of alfalfa producing 2½ tons of cure hay will yield 10 tons of silage), the green material is much heavier to handle. It should therefore not be trampled during the loading operation. A rack with sides should be permitted to fill at the rear, and when level with the loader, the oncoming material should be pulled forward in inclining layers. The untrampled, forward part of the load can thereupon be unloaded rst at the silo with little difficulty. The idea of building a high, well-balanced, neat-appearing load as with dehydrated, or cured, hay can be discarded in the molasses silage method becaus ea sizeable load in weight accumulates much faster and in a smaller area.

Third, a word about applying the preservative. For best results molasses should be applied in proper quantities by a pressure pump system such as is available with the modern hay chopper. It is also important that the pump deliver the molasses to the crop at the right point of operation—namely, just as the crop enters the cutting mechanism of the chopper. Moreover, the pump should be automatically controlled so that the flow of preservative starts immediately when needed and shuts off when the machine runs empty. Should the pump continue to feed molasses into the chopper when the machine is running empty, serious clogging would likely result later. The designing engineers have solved this problem of an automatically controlled pump.

The preservative should be applied as follows: 40 pounds to the ton for grasses and cereals, 60 pounds to the ton for mixed grases and legumes, 80 pounds to the ton for alfalfa and clovers, and 100 pounds to the ton fo rsoybeans.

What Are Its Advantages?

1. It makes better feed. Silage keeps much more of the original feed value of the crop. It is more palatable tha ncured hay. Livestock eat all molasses silage feed. There is no loss of leaves and no leaching such as occur when partly cured hay is rained on.

2. Quality is uniform. Rainy weather does not reduce the quality of molasses silage. One does not have to wait for good weather to make this type of feed, and there need therefore be no delay in the regular program of farm work.

3. Fire hazard is eliminated. The fire hazard, which is always present when ew ha yis placed in the barn, is entirely eliminated with molasses silage.

4. Less storage space is needed. Much less storage space is required becaue four times as much feed can be stored in a cubic foot of silo space as in the cubic foot of mow space.

5. Less labor is necessary. While a greater tonnage of material must be handled when making silage than with making hay in the customary way, fewer operations are necessary when making molasses silage and the crop can actually be placed in the silo with less labor than is required to handle it as hay and place it in the mow.

6. It is easy to feed. In most cases grass and legume silage can be handled in a more convenient way than the equivalent amount of hay.

7. Silage is cleaner and eliminates waste. Silage is much cleaner to make and the stables are cleaner.

8. Less damage to crops. There is less damage to crops such as alfalfa when a cutting is removed at once for making molasses silage and fewer trips of machines are made over the fields.

9. Extra cuttings are possible. In the case of alfalfa and several other hay crops the protein content is much higher when cutting is done at an early rather than a late stage. Making molasses silage, therefore, permits making not only a high-quality feed regardless of weather conditions, but often enables getting an extra cutting of the crop.

10. Silage cuts costs. Under most conditions the cost of making grasses or legumes into silage is less than for making the crops into hay and storing them in the barn.

Takes the place of a large part of the grain ration. Takes the place of part or all of the cured-hay ration. Supplements pasture and replaces it when pasture is dried up. Provides the equivalent of fresh pasture as winter feed. Takes the place of cultivated silage crops. Makes use of corn silos in the summer. Utilizes all of the feed value of grasses and legumes. Legumes used for molasses silage are good soil-building crops.

Any Silo Satisfactory

The only structure necessary for storing such silage is the silo. Any type is satisfactory—temporary, pit, wood, tile, concrete, or metal. Silos hold 10 to 15 per cent more tonnage of grass and legume silage than of corn silage. A recent study on the subject of silo pressures showed that molasses silages develop pressures of 19 to 22 pounds per square foot of depth, as compared with about 11 pounds for corn silage. Hence, every upright silo used for molasses silage must be in good condition and preferably amply reinforced to withstand the greater lateral (outward) pressures. Such reinforcements are usually extra hoops or bands placed around the low sections of the silo, where the presure is greatest. New silos intended for such use should also have extra hoops to meet the need.

Results Obtained

Because all of the feed values of grasses, legumes and cereals are retained in molasses silage, thousands of dairymen and livestock feeders in all parts of the country are obtaining remarkable results from its use. Dairymen who start in the fall to supplement pasture with this feed find that milk production of the herd tends to remain constant; when pasturing season ends, body weight stays up and this leads many prominent dairymen to the conclusion that malasses silage is good feed during all seasons. A herd whose production has made theusual seasonal drop in the fall can be made to recover part but not all of the decline by adding molasses silage to theration Therefore, it is advantageous not wait for the decline in production but begin feeding molasses silage as soon as the pature begins to decline Molasses silage is ready for feeding immed.iately after it has been made

Comparable results have been noted with with other livestock and poultry, because ensiled grasses and legumes, in addition to being palatable, contain much protein. Such feed provides more protein than either cured hay or corn silage. Ten tons of afialfa silage provides 800 to 900 pounds of protein, while a similar quantity of corn silage produces only 400 pounds of protein. Protein is the highest feed farmers buy.

A wide range of crop utilization and crop rotation possibilities resulting from the use of molases silage, together with lowered feed costs and greater feeding efficiency, make the outstanding values of this feed readily apparent. Soil conserving drops. Morever, market control, particularly with reference to the cereals or grain, may also become an important economic result of wide-spread use of molasses silage.

BABY CHICK SHOW PLAN ANNOCNED

The fifth annual baby chick show sponsored by the Poultry Club of the College of Agriculture and the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, will be held at the University of Kentucky May 2. Prizes will offered on chicks of all of the principal breeds of poultry; also sweepstakes for the best all-round exhibits. H. L. Shrader of the United States Department will be one of the judges. A banquet will follow the show.

4-HERS HAVE 1,000 CALVES IN FEEDLOTS

One hundred and fifty members of 4-H and Utopia clubs in 35 Kentucky counties have approximately 1,000 calves on feed for the annual fat cattle show at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville next November. About 150 calves are being fed by older farm boys and girls enrolled in Utopia clubs.

Wayne county club members have 125 calves on feed, the largest number in any one county. Sixty calves are in feedlots in Garrad county, 55 in Grayson county, 50 in Shelby county, and 45 in each of Boyle and McLean counties.

In Taylor County, where baby beef club work is new this year, 32 calves are being finished by 4-H club members. Edmonson is another new county this year. M. S. Garside, field agent in club work for the State College of Agriculture, predicts an extra good cattle show this year.

STATE EXHIBIT FOR POULTRY CONGRESS

Kentucky's part in the World's Poultry Congress at Cleveland, Ohio July 28-August 7 will include an exhibit representing the poultry industry of the state, judging by the state champion 4-H judging team, an can exhibit by the Poultry Club of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The champion 4-H team to go to the Congress is made up of Maxwell Bolton, Orvel Cockerel, J. B. Huff and Kenneth Stinson of Grayson county. The Poultry Club, which is an organization of students specializing in poultry raising, is planning to have displays in the Youth Building at the Congress.

HOW TO CONTROL TOBACCO INSECTS

Recommendations for the control of tobacco insects, as made by a joint committee of representatives of tobacco states and the United States Department of Agriculture, are given in a new circular of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Insects for which controls are prescribed include flea beetle, hornworms, black European slug, cutworms, grasshappers, budworms, green June Bettle larvae and sod webworms. The committee was made up of men from Kentucky, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Florida, Connecticut and the Department of Agriculture.

AMERICAN HOMEMAKERS HELP DESIGN LOW-RENT DWELLINGS

The American housewife has at last been called in as a Government consultant. Representatives of the country's greatest industry, housekeeping, have just met in a conference at Washington to advise with the United States Housing Authority in its work of creating 160,000 new homes for low-income families. Eight homemakers from low-rent housing projects brought their experience to help decide such matters as the shape and size of rooms, the place to put shelves, where the family hould eat—matters that do so much to determine the ease of daily living. With their help the USHA is seeking to give homemaking the benefits of the efficiency studies which have long served American industry, farming, and business.

Early in its program the USHA set up in Washington a laboratory for the study of problems in the design and equipment of low-cost dwelling units. Results of these studies are made regularly available to the architects and engineers of local housing authorities all over the country who are now planning and building low-rent housing projects with the aid of USHA 90 per cent loans. More than half a million former slum-dwellers will be rehoused in such projects during the next two years, and all of them will live in homes reflecting the commonsense ideas of the housewife as well as the most recent achievement of technical experts.

These USHA homes will be efficient, modern worships for the housewife, as well as agreeable family environments. Laboratory experiments, conducted in the housewives' interest and frequently by the housewives themselves, guarantees the practical nature of every unit-plan. The laboratory, called "study house", is not really a house, but rather an eingenious arrangement of movable walls which permits duplication of conditions in dwelling-units of different sizes and varying floor plans. Here the installation of kitchen and bathroom equipment, the provision of closet space, the arrangement of furniture—all the thousand-and-one details necessary to convenient operation of the home—are practiced and perfected. Here the advicates of eating in the kitchen battle with the defenders of combination living-and-dining rooms, each faction supporting its belief by concrete demonstration. Here the double-bed and twin-bed continue their generation-long feud, as bedroom walls are extended and contracted to provide suitable space. Here cross-ventilation can be studied in operation rather than in blueprints. Here the woman of the house can realize her dream of standing by the sink and ordering the architect to "put more shelves here—wide ones!"

Local communitesi, financed and counselled by USHA, are building a great variety of low-rent housing projects in every part of the nation. The projects will range in size from 40 dwelling units to several thousand. The appearance and method of construction will naturally vary to conform wit local living conditions. But interior plans, dwelling-unit designs, will be far more constant, for tey will all meet certain standards of convenience, comfort, and efficiency. And these standards are evolve from "study house" experimentation. The American Standard of Living is becoming a fact rather than a slogan, insofar as it pertains to housing.

The housewife is doing a good job as a Government cunsultant. But her work has only started. The half million low-income people who will be rehoused under the current USHA program are only a fraction of the Americans badly in need of new housing at low rents. If that "one-third of the nation" which is ill-housed at present is to be providedwith proper homes, the construction program must be expanded and maintained for many years. And, as the scope of the work steadily broadens,the United States Housing Authority will have an increasing need for these consultants in homemaking. For it is really their program dedicated to their health, comfort and security.

The family that went broke trying to keep up with the Jones is still even with the Jones. The Jones are broke, too.

GROW FLOWERS IN VEGETABLE GARDEN

To save time and care in growing flowers around the farm, home many families find it practial to grow at least a part of their annual flower ing plants in rows in the vegetable garden, where cultivation by hoe or horse cultivator will be easier than in flower beds.

In suggesting this method, N. R. Elliott of the Kentucky college of Agriculture points out that it is often a work saver to fill most of the space reserved for flowers with plantings of small shrubs, transplanted wild flowers, and long-lived plants such as irises, peonies, daffodils, daylilies, coreopsis andgaillardia.

Other plants that go well in permanent flower beds are these that reseed from year to year—hollyhocks, petunias, shasta daisies, larkspurs, and coscos. With these it is only necessary to hoe cut surplus plants after cultivation has been delayed long enough to give the scattered seed a chance to sprout.

Many of the favorite annual flowers, such as zinnias, marigolds, calliopsis, verbenas, sweet peas and scabiosa, can be planted in rows like vegetables, convenient for cultivation, easy to gather for cut flowers, and pleasant to the eye when working in the agrden. Many of the annuals bloom most freely and for the longest period if kept closely picked and not allowed to ripen seed. If these are planted in the vegetable garden, it is easy to gather a wealth of fine flowers with out injuring the display in the flower beds and border plantings around the house.

DIVISION OF GAME AND FISH

Conservation and propagation of wildlife in Kentucky and the educating of all persons in the state to its value is meeting with decided success through the cooperation of the approximate 200 newspapers in the state with the Division of Game and Fish.

The weekly and semi-weekly papers, numbering 170 in the state, are always crowded for space but usually find some place in the issue to put something about either fishing or hunting and as a result of this widespread publication of Fish and Game news, the people in this state are becoming hunting and fishing conscious. The daily papers also use some material, but, having their own sports writers, they compose their own material an dedit their own fish and game columns. More people are observing the game and Fish laws, more of our citizens are protecting the wildlife and cooperating with the Conservation Officers on the Divison and omre men and women are buying their hunting and fishing licenses as the result of this publicity of wildlife conservation through the newspapers.

This Division gets out information and educational material once every week on some phase of the conservation of wildlife and a number of the papers carry this news regularly as a game and fish column. Others crowded for space, use articles which they think will be of local interest.

The hunters and fishermen and all others interested in the conservation of wildlife appreciate this information that they are able to get from their local papers an dthe Division of Game and Fish, through its director, Major James Brown, wishes to express appreciation for the full and heary cooperation given by the press of Kentucky in the wildlife conservation program.

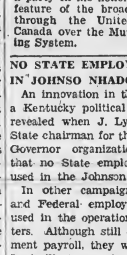
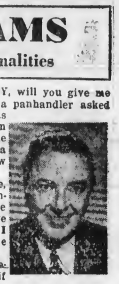
IN a record breaking tour of ten cities, Phil Spitalny and his Hour of Charm orchestra of thirty singing girls has played to audiences numbering close to 500,000.



Maxine Marlowe

The Hour of Charm Monday night broadcasts heard over NBC emanated from packed theatres in which Spitalny and his bevy of beauties made stage appearances. The highlight of the tour occurred in Cleveland when the Hour of Charm broadcast in the Public Hall before 14,000 people, thereby setting a United States record for the largest audience attending a visual commercial broadcast. When invading Atlanta, Ga., in a southern premiere, Spitalny and his girls took over the Capitol presenting a brilliant musical program at the invitation of Hon. John B. Spivey, president of the Senate, who argued that there wasn't enough harmony among the lawmakers.

LOTS of radio stars never eat before their turn at the microphone. They usually find they are more alert if they starve a little, and they also enjoy their dinner more thoroughly after the program.



IN April the Voice of Experience will complete fifteen years of consistent broadcasting; eight years of which were devoted to broadcasting over individual stations during which time all mail records were broken on 52 of the 54 stations over which he was heard. For the last seven years, the Voice has broadcast several times weekly over the Columbia, National and Mutual Chains.

The Voice of Experience

On Wednesday, April 19th—members of the famous Lambs' Club in New York—of which the Voice of Experience is secretary, are giving a party in his honor and will be a feature of the broadcast that day through the United States and Canada over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

"MR. HALEY, will you give me $1,000," a panhandler asked Jack Haley as the comedian was entering the studio for a Wonder Show rehearsal.

Jack Haley

Jack, of course, was rather nonplussed. "You've got a lot of nerve . . . You know I wouldn't give you $1,000!"

Came the reply, "No, but if I had asked you for only a dime to get some coffee, you wouldn't have paid any attention to me!" He got the dime.

YOU MAY WONDER why you never hear a really bad voice on audience participation programs. Different producers have different ways of making their checks on program aspirants, most of them effective in their way. However, Dave Elman, conductor of the Wednesday night "Hobby Lobby" opus on NBC, probably takes the most direct route of determining whether or not a person will be a fit for his show. Dave calls all of his prospective program guests by long distance wire—the main reason why, the Elman telephone bill is never less than $300 a month.

TEACHING history via the movies is fine, says Marge, of the Myrt and Marge team, but one thing worries her. "In the old days," says Donna, "children got their ideas of what famous men and women looked like from history books. Now they think all the great heroes looked like Tyrone Power and heroines resembled Norma Shearer!"

Donna Damerel

ALL of the shades in the color spectrum dominate the decorative motif of NBC's, new Hollywood studios, which to a lot of radio aspirants represents the end of the rainbow.

NO STATE EMPLOYEES IN JOHNSO NHADQUARTERS

An innovation in the operation of a Kentucky political campaign was revealed when J. Lyter Donaldson, State chairman for the Johnson-for-Governor organization announced that no State employees would be used in the Johnson headquarters.

In other campaigns, both State and Federal employees have been used in the operation of headquarters. Although still on the government payroll, they were brought to Louisville to remain throughout the campaign at the expenses of taxpayers.

BEAUTY AND MUSIC AT THE FAIR

NEW YORK—Ballet on land and water will thrill visitors to the New York World's Fair opening on April 30. In the Marine Amphitheatre which seats 10,000 persons, Eleanor Holm (inset), Olympic swimming and stage star, will head a cast of 100 girls in Billy Rose's Aquacade ballet. Two hundred others will dance on the stage. The show's production will cost $1,000,000, according to Grover A. Whalen, President of the Fair.

KENTUCKY POLITICS

By TYLER MUNFORD

Politics in the Kentucky metropolitan area took a back seat the past week when 7,000 school teachersinvaded Louisville to attend the annual meeting of the Kentucky Education Association and the Louisville Colonels officially opened the American Association baseball season.

At the ball park Thursday afternoon, the opening festivities sent Louisville's Mayor Sholtz, a hefty right-hander, to the mound to toss in the first ball. At the bat was Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson; who hits from th port side. The Mayor's pitch was high and on the outside, and Johnson fouled the ball. Sports commentators claimed that in view of the current Louisville political situation, the Lieut. Governor played smart baseball in not trying to get a safe hit off the Mayor's delivery. Both parties appeared to be highly elated over their efforts.

Brown and Rhea Ill of Flu

Over at the Seelbach Hotel both John Y. Brown and his No. 1 advisor, Thomas S. Rhea, were absent from their headquarters due to attacks of influenza. Mr. Brown recovered sufficiently to deliver a scheduled radio address Thursday night, in which he advocated a minimum $15 school per capita. Apparently recognizing the tremendous amount of money necessary to finance such a program, the Lexington attorney said: "We shall collect the money wher ethe money is and spend it where the children are."

With only two productive sources of revenue available, politicos here speculated on whether Mr. Brown intends to procure the millions necessady for a $15 per capita from a tax on farm lands or from the old general retail sales tax.

In addition to the school per capita increase, Mr. Brown pledged his support to a sound teachers' retirement law. Kentucky now has such a law. It was enacted in 1938, but because of a shortage of revenue and with the consent of the educators, the General Assembly made no appropriation for its administration. If put into effect, the retirement law would increase the budget by almost a million dollars.

Johnson At Owensboro

Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson spent two days at Owensboro in the Second Congressional District last Tuesday and Wednesday conferring with Democratic leaders from several counties in that area. As a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1935 he carried the Second by a tremendous majority, and observers there say that his ardent supporters in the Owensboro area in that race will again carry the Johnson banner in the current campaign.

Republican Harmony

Republican circles in Louisville are agog over the recent harmony meeting, where Charles Middleton and Charles Ryans, leaders of the city's two bitter G.O.P. factions, buried the hatchet deep in wood. This means that for the first time in several years Louisville Republicans believe they have a good chance of capturing city and county offices in the November election this year, and they make no attempt to conceal the fact that they are hopeful for 1940. In Louisville, Republicans showed a lead of approximately 12 to 1 over the Democrats in the number of voters who changed their party affiliation during the first four days of last week.

C. I. O. Reference May Be Cue to Logan Attitude

While speculation as to the position of certain Democratic leaders in Kentucky's always turbulent politics has been rampant, one important figure, abel Senator Mills M. Logan, has maintained a consitent silence. The only available inference as to how the Senatord is thinking about Kentucky politics came from a recent statement in which he asked the Senate to write into the National Labor Act a definition of agricultural labor which would exclude from Federal jurisdiction a variety of workers employed in the preparation of farm products for the market.

An explanatory statement, which Senator Logan filed with the bill contended the legislation was necessary because the CIO was attempting to organize such workers and thereby "gain control" of the Nation's food supply. "The real issue is not the wage or working conditions of the laborers. The real issue is one of gaining control of the food supplies at their source, even though the farmers' crops are destroyed," he told the Senate.

Referring to the activities of the Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, an affiliate of the CIO, Senator Logan observed that "with this type of organization fomenting trouble and producing the evidence, and with the National Labor Relations Board supporting the union in its contentions, agriculture faces a grave immediate nation-wide crisis."

"The farmers are fighting to save their farms against this insidious and ruinous procedure," the Senator said.

While Senator Logan undoubtedly did not have Kentucky politics in mind when he made the statement, political observers here were quick to place important emphasis upon it because of Mr. Brown's connection with the CIO in this State.

LIBRARY SPONSORED BY 4-HERS IS POPULAR

During three winter months, farm boys and girls, parents and other adults read 320 books from a traveling library sponsored by the Boston 4-H club in Butler country, Kentucky. Twenty-seven 4-H club members read 193 books. Several read 10 books each, and 11 year old Marporie Givins read 24 books. The library was kept at the Boston school. The total cost during the period was $2.10.

THE GARDEN

BORDEAUX MIXTURE

By John S. Gardener,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

First- aid for all harassed gardeners is Bordeaux mixture, because it accomplishes so many ends on so many different vegetables. It is unique; there is no substitute.

Its good works begin with the coming up of the early potatoes when the black flea-beetles first first come and for it is a repellant and a control for these insects, whose injury, riddling the leaves with many fine holes is passed light by because the damage seems so remote. That is it not, any experienced potato-grower who strives to prevent it, knows for he has found that more and better potatoes result when the flea-beetle is taken in hand, an dearly.

Bordeaux mixture is a control for, at least a deterrent for the various leaf spots collectively called 'blight.' Any vegetable that is enabled to retail its foliage intact bears for a longer time (e. g. the vine crops; sometimes beans; tomatoes) or, as in the instance of potatoes, may be made to continue green for as much as two weeks longer, giving the tubers just that much longer to make and consequently, more crop.

Bordeaux mixture is a combination of copper sulphate (blue vitrol) lime and water, or in the dry form called "copper lime dust," of powdered unslaked lime and monohydrated copper sulphate. The "dry Bordeaux" designed for making liquid Bordeaux is not suitable for use in Bordeaux dusting.

The effective agent in Bordeaux is copper sulphate; to prevent the leaf damage it would cause, the lime is added. The formula recommended for garden use throughout is "4-4-50" meaning 4 pounds each of the ingredients just named, and 50 nalons of Bordeaux. This amount of spray would cover between 1-2 acre and 1 acre, more area than any gardener would need spay at any one time. On the other hand, Bordeaux mixture must be used as made; it will not "keep" for even24 hours. Thus, gardeners find themselves in a quandary in arriving at the quantities of Bordeaux materials to use in making this spray in garden amounts, for fine arithmetic is involved. For aid to gardeners who wish to make as little as 2 1-2 gallons of standard Bordeaux, this procedure has been evolved:

1. In 5 quarts of water, in a non-metalic vessel, dissolve 1 pound of blu vitrail (bluestone). Hang in a sack just into thewater, bluestone dissolves of itself in an hour or so. This a "bluestone tock."

2. In the tank of a 3-gallon sprayer put 9 quarts of water, and a handful (4oz.) of screened, hydrated time; also one uart of bluestone stock.

3. Close the sprayer, and shake end-wise 10 to 15 times. What results is 2 1-2 gallons of 4-4-50 Bordeaux.

The rest of the stock may be put into a corked jug, ready to use when more Bordeaux needs be made. Except for evaporation, its strength stays constant. This jug, be it observed, is the only "special equipment" required.

Bordeaux spraying if effective in so far as the foliage is completely covered, top and bottom, the leaves copper-armored, as it were. No satisfactory job can be done with a sprinkling can or by splashing on the spray. The spray tank shuold be of copper or brass, for Bordeaux "eats" galvanized metal though the sprayer is washed out throughly immediately after it is used.

The time to begin spraying may be when the first sign of spotting or of flea-beetle injury is seen, but better is to anticipate any such damage, to start spraying when the seedlings are a few inches tall, and again in two weeks, and in two weeks, again.

DIVISION OF GAME AND FISH

The "Angler's" attention is called to the laws which cover the seining of minnows in this state, by the Division of Game and Fish.

In the first place it is lawful for any person to take minows with a seine from the public waters of this state to be used for bait for angling. Seines used in the taking of minnows must not be more than ten feet in length, four feet in width or height, with mesh not larger than one quarter inch.

The definition for "Minnow" is this: "All small fish used for bait for angling except black bass, trout, crappie and rock bass or 'goggle-eye' jack salmon or wall eyed pike, or, striped bass."

The law states that any fish caught which are excluded from the definition of minows must be without injury, immediately returned to the water from which they are taken.

Violation ofthis section of the Game and Fish laws, upon conviction, carries a fine of not less than $15 and not more than $100 for each offense.

Major James Brown, Director of the Divison of Game and Fish, urges all anglers to help preserve the minow supply in this state by taking only those that are needed for bait and returning the others to the water and to put all those minnows that are leftover after the end of the fishing tripback in some branch or creek where they can be taken later on when needed for bait.

TOBACCO SITUATION EXPECTED TO REMAIN ABOUT LIKE 1938-39

Tobacco growers probably will sell their 1939 crops under demand conditions about the same as prevailed during the 1938-39 marketing season, in the opinion of Dr. H. B. Price, of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

According to the spring outlook report on tobacco, issued by the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the prospects are for stable or moderately improved general business conditions throughout the remainder of 1939, and for a continuance of the present high level of cigarette consumption.

Burley growers report prospects for a decrease of a little more than 3 percent in their 1939 plantings, compared with the 1938 acreage. Assuming a five-year average yield, Dr. Price said, the crop this year will be about 324 million pounds compared with the present estimate of 335 million pounds for the 1938 crop. Burley stocks on October 1, 1939, are expected to show a slight increase over a year earlier."

Again quoting from the outlook report, Dr. Price said that the burley outlook favors about the same or slightly larger domestic consumption of cigarettes and smoking mixtures in the 1939-40 season, and demand for the 1939 burley crop "may be about the same as for the 1938 production." A large proportion of the 1938 crop consisted of smoking grades which brought lower relative to burley on the heavy side than in previous years.

The fire-cured acreage for 1939 is indicated at about 12 percent smaller than in 1939. Growers of dark air cured tobacco report intentions to reduce their plantings this year about 11 percent. With average yields on these acreages in 1939, crops would turn out about the same production as the record low of fire-cured and dark air-cured production in 1938.

These smaller acreages of dark types appear about in line with the downward trend in the demand and disappearance of these tobaccos, Dr. Price pointed out. Total supplies of the dark tobaccos probably will be even smaller in 1939-40 than in the present season. "It is reasonable to believe," he added, "that the average quality of the new crops will turn out out superior to the lower average of the fire-cured and dark air-cured produced in 1938."

HOME CONVENIENCES INCREASE IN NUMBER

An increase in the number of household conveniences has resulted from home demonstration work in Ballard county, Kentucky, according to a survey made by Mary Lou Jackson, county home agent. She found 151 farm homes with electricity; 195, running water; 58, telephones; 155, radios; 195, sanitary toilets; 70, sinks; 25, pumps. Only 25 had washing machines. Eighty-two of the women interviewed drive automobiles, 79 make their clothing and 37 the clothes of their children, while 97 buy their clothes.

Except on rare occasions the skunk is perfectly free from any unpleasant odor what ever; it is easily tamed and makes an interesting pet.

C. C. C. NEWS

Owners of more than 18,000 acres of land in the Falmouth Project area are under agreement with Camp SCS-5-Ky., Walton, Ky., of the Soil Conservation Service to replan their farms and establish erosion control practices, according to Ward T. Darnell, Camp Superintendent.

Replanning of farms under cooperative agreement will result in wiser land use, the reduction of erosion losses and preservation of the land for future generations," Mr. Darnell said. Cooperative agreements are limited to the project area and are limited to the project Kentucky.

Analysis of the cooperative agreements now in effect shows that the percentage of cropland in the replanned farms has been reduced from 47.1 to 32.3 percent; permanent hay areas increased from 7.1 to 10.7 percent; pasture increased from 36.9 percent to 49. percent; and woodland and wildlife areas increased from 1.4 to 2. 8 percent.

After the farms have been replanned tillage practices that will control erosion are established on the 32.3 percent of the farm remaining in cropland. In the Falmouth Project area the cropland acreage amounts to 6,000 acres. These erosion control practices, which are based on research supplemented by practical application, vary in accordance with the individual problems presented by each farm, Mr. Darnell said.

Erosion control practices are found to be necessary on only 5 percent of the cropland, Mr. Darnell explained. The remaining 95 percent of the cropland is cultivated on the contour, which is plowing and tilling with the natural curve of the land instead of up and own slope. Strip cropping, or alternating strips of crops and meadow in rotation, is practiced on about 65 percent of the cropland.

Fire destroyed 15 of the 150 chickens in a brooder on the farm of Raymond Yates, on Route 17 near Independence, Ky., early Thursday. The blaze which was reported by a neighbor, was extinguished by the Independence Fire Department.

Firemen said they believed the fire started from an explosion or from an overheated stove in the brooder. Damage was estimated at $75.

TOBACCO PAYS

Boone county farmers sold approximately 1,890,953 pounds of Burley tobacco under the 1938 AAA program for approximately $362,454.15, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent.

Farmers raised a total of 2262 acres in 1938, received an average yield of 830 pounds per acre. They received an average of $19.10 per hundred pounds for the crop.

The above pounds sold and dollars received will be slightly higher in that a few warrants on sales have not been received to date. Actual sales reports are on file in he county office for the above amounts.

Mr. Drake, Miss Gillespie, Mrs. W. W. King and Mr. J. G. Pennington were the adult leaders present. One visitor, Mrs. Pennigton., and 37 members were in attendance.

The people of Walton, especially parents of the members, are invited to attend the Spring Rally, May 13, at Burlington, Ky

NOVELTY REVUE

The Annual Kiddie Novelty Revue will be presented this year on Friday yevening, May 5th, at the new James Theatre by the pupils of Mrs. William Crouse. The performance will start promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

Three acts will be introduced. The first act is entitled "Barnyard Frolics," an act which will take you back to those good old days down on the farm. The second act, entitled "A Night in Hawaii," portrays one of those romantic scenes in the tropics, with soft palm trees swaying, and the pale southern moon gleaming down on native sons and daughters of Hawaii. The third act, "A Fountain Festival," will conclude the performance.

The settings, costumes and stage properties have all been carefully arranged, and it is expected that a large crowd will witness the forthcoming event.

An admission fee of 15 and 25 cents will be charged, and reserved seat tickets 35 cents. The reserved seat tickets may be purchased at the James Theatre at any time.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY ASKS FOR MAGAZINE DONATIONS

Woman's Auxiliary of Union Presbyterian Church, Union, Ky., requests all those having old magazines which they would like to discard to call Mrs. Joseph Huey, at Union. She will see that someone calls at your home for your contribution of old magazines. The Woman's Auxiliary is planning a sale of old magazines early in May, and asks all friends to donate old magazines in order to help the Auxiliary to raise funds.

CLUB MEETING

Thirty four attended the April Utopia club meeting held at Burlington Thursday evening, April 20. Mr. Moore, chairman of the small fruits project, rendered a splendid discussion on small fruits management. Mary Hood Gillespie instructed the girls on weaving.

Plans were made to have Dr Polk, field veterinarian of the University to speak at the next meeting. The next meeting of the club will be May 8th at 7:30 a. m.

Announcement

In announcing my candidacy for Representative from Boone and that I do not intend to make a lot of promises which I cannot possibly fulfill. But I will, if elected, do my best to serve the people of these two counties and the state as a whole, to their best interests.

I will gladly cooperate with other representatives from northern Kentucky in an effort to get some recognition for our part of the state.

To you people who have troubles with roads and various other community problems, I will gladly do my best to assist you. I have been working for these things for seevral years and will continue to do so but if elected may have a better opportunity to be of value.

JOHN JUETT

After a very delightful day, all left wishing Mr. and Mrs. Marsh many more years of happy married life.

BOONE COUNTY HOMEMAKERS TO ASSIST IN DISTRICT MEETING

POULTRY TOUR

The Boone County poultry marketing tour date has been changed to next Thursday, April 27th, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The date has been changed so Kenton and Campbell county poultrymen can take part in the all day tour of the Cincinnati egg and poultry markets.

8:30 a. m. Central time—Meet at Sears-Roebuck Store in Covington.

10:00 a. m.—Ebrle & Sons, Commission Firm in Cincinnati.

10:00 a. m.—Peters Poultry Co.

12:00 Noon, or 1:00 p. m. Eastern Time—Cooperative Pure Milk Association Egg Room.

The Poultry and Marketing Departments of the University of Kentucky are assisting in plans for the tour. Special study will be made on how eggs and poultry are handled when they reach the market and and the channels they follow in reaching the consumer. Demonstration in egg grading and producing quality eggs that bring premium prices on the market will be seen. Plans have also been made for a visit to the killing rooms where poultry is dressed for retail trade.

Every poultryman and others interested in poultry marketing problems are invited to attend. The County Agent's Office in Burlington would be glad to know those who planned to attend.

This is the first time that Northern Kentucky has had the oppourtunity to serve as hostess for the district meeting, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Homemakers of Boone, Campbell and Kenton Counties are making all arrangements for the meeting. Lunch will be served by three churches near the Baptist Church. Boone county Homemakers who want luncheon reservations are aske to notify Miss Gillespie by Saturday, April 22nd.

Home Improvement Leaders of the twelve Homemakers Clubs will start making slip covers at their next training class. The group will meet next Tuesday, April 25th, 10:00 a. m. to 3:00 p. m. at the courthouse in Burlington.

Miss Ida Hagman, Home Improvement Specialist, University of Kentucky, will direct the leaders in cutting slip covers for straight back chairs, rockers and overstuffed wing chairs. Instructions will be given on the sewing of the covers.

Selection of materials for covers was discussed at the March meeting of local clubs according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demnostration Agent.

Each Homemaker in the county is planning to make slip covers or boxed cushion.

BLUE MOLD

Twenty control demonstrations on Blue Mold in tobacco plant beds have been planned in four community programs of work, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The Assistant County Agent will personally conduct two demonstrations on beds in each of the four communities. Leaders will be supplied with plans to follow in the the other eleven demonstrations.

Blue Mold in tobacco plant beds first appeared in the United States in 1921. The first serious outbreak occurred in 1931 in Florida and Georgia. The disease has gradually spread north until the past year an made its appearance in several communities in the county. The disease when it hits often destroys a large part of the plants.

The two control measures that will be followed this year include light seeding of plant beds and the spraying of plants with Bordeaux mixture and copper oxide sprays.

MAY DAY

"The Health of the Child Is the Power of the Nation." This is the slogan has ever expressed so May, 7939. Perhaps no slogan has ever expressed so clearly and comprehensively the importance of protecting child life from infancy throuh adolesnoence.

For the fourth consecutive year the Children's Bureau has been requested by the State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America to sponsor the celebration of May Day—Child Health Day. The Children's Bureau appreciates the privilege of leadership in a celebration which depends for its success upon the cooperation of State and local units of government, public and private organizations, the schools, civic organizations, and, what is of equal importance, the children themselves.

Many communities this year are emphasizing the importance of good nutrition in developing their May Day programs. We know that children must be well nourished if they are to be healthy in every way. This does not mean that well-nourhised children cannot get sick. But they usually have more resistance to many kinds of disease and a better chance to get well quickly if they do fall ill.

Mothers and fathers have a responsibility for the health of their children that starts before the children are born and lasts until they are fully grown. Mothers who eat the right foods and who obey the rules of health give their babies a good chance to be born healthy.

Parents who take their children regularly to the doctor for a physical examination, for advice on food and health habits, and for protection against such diseases as smallpox and diphtheria, give their children the best chance for a healthy childhood and for normal growth and development."

The day-to-day care that children receive at home and at school is equally important and should be based on reliable information on nutrition and health.

Mothers and fathers can see to it that children form habits that will help to keep them in good health throughout life.

The last years have brought many advances in the welfare of American children. The death rate of babies in 1937 was the lowest on record. The death rate of mothers is declining. In the state with the lowest baby death rate only 39 babies died out of every 1,000 born alive in 1937. In the state with the highest rate 124 babies died. We must do more than we have done to give our babies an equal chance to be born alive and to be protected in health and growth.

Reports of progress and activities of the maternal and child-health services set up with Federal and State funds under the authority of the Social Security Act, show steady improvement in both the extent and quality of services rendered. In a single year these services made possible the medical examination of nearly a million and a half school children; more than 770,000 visits of babies and pre-school children to medical child-health conferences; nearly 1,000,000 diphtheria immunizations; more than 1,000,000 smallpox immunizations, and more than 1,300,000 dental inspections. Reports on services for crippled children also indicate great progress in restoring to a life of physical well being and usefulness many young people who might otherwise go through life with disabling handicaps.

As communities prepare to celebrate May Day—Child Health Day, 1939, they should consider the outstanding needs of the community and the possibility of meeting those needs with the resources at hand. Where emphasis is being placed on nutrition, it has been suggested that the community survey what is being done to promote good nutrition of mothers and children. But it is not enough to survey what has been done or what is being done. It is important to determine what nuthrition projects can be carried on during the coming year. In some localities the great need may be that of devising means to help families improve their food supply without added expenditure through home and community gardens, canning projects, and cooperative buying. In other communities the needed emphasis may be on education or on lunches for school children or some other aspect of nutrition.

The May Day chairmen appointed by the State Board of Health will help local communities to plan programs adapted to suit local needs and conditions. But May Day—Child Health Day celebrations will serve to advance the interests of children only if they serve to stimulate a year-round program and to enlist the cooperation of all elements of the community. — By Katharine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau.

UNRECOGNIZED KING

When Sergeant Faustin Wirkus of the United States Marines was assigned to duty on the Island of La Gonave, a part of the Republic of Haiti, in 1925, he did such a good job of pacification, or whatever he was supposed to do, that the black natives elected him as their king.

He really rule the island for quite a while, but as a Marine sergeant, rather than as a royal personage. In due time "King" Wirkus was withdrawn from La Gonave, and later was placed on the retired list as a gunnery sergeant.

Among those who admired his record as a sergeant and ruler was Congressman Flannery of Pennsylvania, who has introduced a bill in Congress to promote Wirkus to the rank of captain on the Marine Corps retired list. But Admiral William D. Leahy, as acting Secretary of the Navy, objected, saying in a report to the House Naval Committee:

"While Wirkus rendered valuable service to the Marine Corps, there appears to be no good reason for singling him out and placing him on the retired list as a captain. It might be used as a precedent for similar claims by others."

So it seems likely that the ex-king will have to be content with his present status as a retired gunnery sergeant.

THE FIRST CENSUS

Provision for the taking of a census of the United States every ten years is made in the Constitution, and this was intended originally for the purpose of determining how the representation in the House of Representatives should be apportioned.

The first census was taken in 1790, in accordance with a bill introduced in the House by James Madison, who later became President. This simply provided for a count of the population, divided into the following classes: White males over 16, white males under 16, while females, free blacks, and slaves.

Madison at first wanted to list the occupations of the people, but fear of opposition by the citizens who might suspect that the government was trying to get a line on their incomes so as to levy higher taxes, caused the Senate to strike out that provision.

Six months was allowed for the taxing of the first census, the total cost of which was $44,377. In some sections a good many people objected to giving the mere information concerning age, but a fairly good job was done and it was shown that the new nation had a population of 3,929,214.

The taking of the 1940 census will probably require the services of 150,000 persons, and the enumerators will be expected to complete their part of the work in thirty days. The count is expected to show a population of about 132,000,000. The population shown by the census of 1930 was 122,775,046.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5562 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

An Estill County, Kentucky man bought a side of bacon from his neighbor and did not seem inclined to pay for it. The neighbor would mention the debt to him from time to time, finally saying to his debtor that if he did not pay him for the bacon, he was going to take it out of his hide by giving him a sound licking.

The man who owed the debt retorted:—"I know no better time than right now to settle the debt."

Off with their coats, they went at it in good fashion rough and tumbler After a spell of good hard fighting, the man who had sold the bacon hollered "Nuff." He had received by far the worst of the fright. He said:

"Call the fight off and I'll call the debt settled and paid."

The debtor said to the creditor: Any time you have any more bacon to sell at the same price, just send me word."

LOCK THE STABLE BEFORE THE HORSE IS STOLEN

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

Memories of the sit-down strikes are being rekindled in Washington. Revived also are the stories of men picketing factories by which they had never been employed and of refusing to permit actual employees to go to work.

The reason they are thought of again is in connection with efforts to revise the Wagner Labor Act. It was after enactment of this statute that the sit-down strikes took place.

But the struggle to amend this law, which among other things prohibits an employer from talking to his employees about union matters, promises to be protracted.

The CIO has flatly announced opposition to any revision. And some administration leaders in Congress were active in delaying hearings.

But in both the House and Senate groups of members are demanding that hearings be pushed. They contend that business recovery is being retarded as the law now stands. They also argue that the law should be changed to protect workers from coercion from any source, which would include protection from persons who prevent them from working unless they join a union.

Against these groups the friends of the law as it now stands are battling hard. It is a struggle of major proportions. It looks like a long, drawn-out fight.

As an example of the intensity of the battle, one member of Congress was prevailed upon to delay a speech for two days. He favors a revision of the law. Those in the opposite camp pleaded with him not to make the speech. Forty-eight hours later he did speak, but he had toned down his original remarks.

A prominent business man stopped off in Washington recently.

He called at the office of an administration Senator. The conversation in substance follows:

"About the time I left for the South," said the business man, "I read in the newspapers about the administration's plan to appease business. How is that move getting along?"

"You know as much as I do," replied the Senator. "All I know about it is what I read in the papers."

The Brain Busters in the Capital were the ones who nipped the appeasement talk. They didn't like the idea. They were fearful that to bring actual appeasement(which means business recovery) some of their pet laws might have to be changed. And Brain Busters would shudder at the thought of ever having been wrong.

The "real" cause of war has at last leaked out. Lots of people have been blamed unjustly for it. And it would be a tough job to guess who. But now it is known. It's the old brass band. No country fair would be complete without one. No city parade would be worth watching unless headed by one. But a prominent Senator has implied that the brass band is the "real" root of the trouble. Smilingly, he recently said he would legislate all brass bands out of existence, and added:

"Every time I see a parade and hear a band play, I'm not sure I want neutrality legislation after all."

Six hundred thousand dollars more is to be spent in the monopoly investigation. Books of testimony already have been compiled. The record is being developed by young government employees with either no, or at the most, limited business experience. They are the ones trying to find out what is wrong with a business-industrial system of free enterprise which has provided the highest living standards in the history of the world.

To date not one dollar of the $503,000 already spent has been used to examine the effect some Brain Trust-sponsored laws are having on business. Neither has there been any announcement that any part of the additional $600,000 is to be used for that purpose.

But it does appear that little else is being overlooked. In a formal statement the Federal Trade Commission has assured the public that "the length of spaghetti and macaroni is not a true criterion of its quality or genuineness."

HAYRIDES

Often I have mentioned style in this series of little essays about folk customs. Hayrides once stood at the head of the column. Automobiles were still far in the future, but no car can ever bring quite the thrill that we once experienced on a hayride. There is nothing very elaborate about such a celebration. All you need is a hay frame on the wagon, some hay, and a tarpaulin or wagon sheet stretched over it. Then sit with your legs dangling off and bump over rough roads for five or ten miles, and you will have a hayride.

Any place will do for an excuse for a hayride. If you can find a river at the end of the road, well and good. Then you can row the girls in paddle boats or engage a a ferry boat to take the entire party on a trip up or down the river. A spring is another place that should be found on a hayride, for dinner goes with this custom, like cranberries with turkey. Chestnuts or hickory nuts or blackberries, whatever the season, may give some spice (and chiggers) to life. Even a church or an outdoor meeting can be attended on a hay wagon.

New-timers may think that their ancestors were very pious folk by the way they went to church. What they can never know, except by hearsay, is that church services comprised most of the events in our very drab lives. A church service can be as good an excuse as any for a trip on a hay wagon with a merry crowd. The gang may be well enough bred to behave themselves while the eervices are going on, but on the way anybody can mock the preacher or the singers or parody the most sacred songs.

Not to play practical jokes on some of the gang would be to admit that the hayride was not genuine. It is nearly impossible to get up a crowd without having at least one very loving couple, far gone in romance. These can become the butt of all the jokes, especially if they are in the silent, languishing stage. Some one of the crowd is sure to be just breaking into society; he needs frequent roasting from the more experienced. By all means there must be a mimic, who knows how to imitate animals and people, to laugh or chew or spit like the dignified members of his social group.

The wagonette, now completely lost as an institution, was good for small parties. This strange vehicle was a long covered cart or wagon, with seats along the sides. The ones I knew best would seat about six couples, enough for a very merry having a roof against the sun or possible rain. Sometimes it was the custom for the boys to furnish the vehicle and the horses, the girls to furnish the food, now called "eats," but then often called, quite innocently, "grub" Such Dutch treats are good things and should not be allowed to pass away. I have shared many a one and have no horror of seeing them return on a grand scale. There were no gold-diggers in those days: the girl regarded herself as part of the partnership.

Since peanut butter and baker's bread have come into general use, I fear I could not make you hungry by telling you what we ate. One thing I know: no cook of today can beat the cakes we had then. However stylish a trip by car can be today, it still lacks something of the hale-fellow-well-met feeling of the old-fashioned hayride.

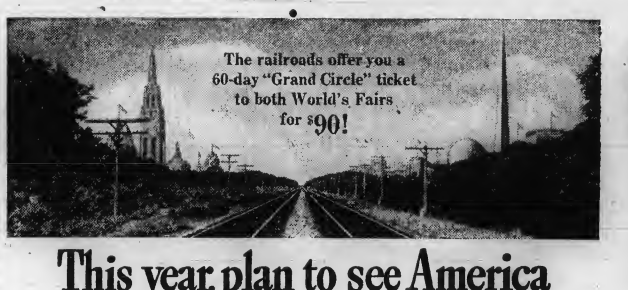
The work of releasing approximately 18,000 Bob White in the fields of Kentucky is completed and now the hunters can only hope that nature will be kind to the Bob White for the next six months and allow them to hatch their coveys.

Barring a long drouth or unusually heavy rain during the nesting season, the quail will reproduce heavily and next fall should prove one of the best quail-hunting seasons in the history of our state.



The Division of Fish and Game purchased and released approximately 15,000 of the birds and this number was supplemented by 3,000 birds purchased by individuals and clubs and released at the same time.

All Game and Fish clubs in the state cooperated with the Division in the releasing of the birds this year and the quail were placed on farms where they will be given careful protection and where there is ample food and cover for them.

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, urges all sportsmen and farmers to protect the quail through the nesting season and up until next November, 24th, when the birds may be hunted again.

SHORTHORN COW SETS MILK PRODUCTION RECORD

The American Shorthorn Breeders Association reports that an eight-year-old Shorthorn cow in England recently set a new world's record milk production of 41,644½ pounds, or an average of 57 quarts a day. An American Holstein-Friesian was the previous record holder, with a production of 38,606 pounds.

This year, plan to see America

THIS land you live in is full of wonders to thrill you.

So let your imagination ramble when you plan a vacation this year.

Would you like to visit both World's Fairs?

Would you like to take a dip in the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans—or see rugged mountains snow-capped in July?

Would you like to fish in a trout stream—or the Gulf Stream?

Would you like to tread in the East and South, ground hallowed by your nation's history—see the National Parks—retrace the trails of the covered wagon pioneers—or visit spots in the West, belonging to a civilization so old it has been forgotten?

Somewhere in this nine-thousand-mile swing around the country from border to border and coast to coast you can visit the most modern cities in the world and cities quaint with old world charm—watch the gleaming rails retreat behind you through majestic aisles of northern pines or miles of tropical trees bending under their burden of Spanish moss.

And you can do all these things on one flat rate "grand circle" railroad ticket, starting from your home town and bringing you back again—with stop-overs anywhere you wish—your own choice of routes—and 60 glorious days of opportunity to see America!

Travel by air-conditioned train today is so delightful that your vacation starts the moment you step aboard.

The cost? $90 for a coach ticket—$135 in Pullmans plus the cost of a berth. Special Pullman charges for the Grand Circle tour have also been established—$45 for one or two passengers in a lower berth and proportionately low rates for other space.

It is truly the opportunity of a lifetime made possible by the coordination and cooperation of your railroads. Better talk it over now with your local ticket agent. He can tell you anything about this great travel bargain that you want to know.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL!

On every hand you see evidence that the American railroads deliver the finest transportation service in the world—a service essential to the daily lives of everybody. And everybody—the farmer, businessman, worker, alike—is affected directly or indirectly by railroad depression or prosperity. Railroads need, and ask, no more than an opportunity to earn a living under rules, regulations and conditions which give them an opportunity to meet competition on equal terms. This is the purpose of the proposed Transportation Act of 1939 now being considered by Congress.

Fire In North Walton

Monday evening about 5:30, the residence of Thomas Perceval, in North Walton, was damaged by fire. The alarm was sent in and the valiant volunteer fire department responded promptly. When the engine arrived, neighbors had formed a bucket brigade, and were attempting to subdue the blaze which was on the rooff. The chemical engine was brought into use and soon extinguished the fire. It is not known the orgin of the fire started, but it is supposed to have been caused by a defective flu as the fire was first discovered on the roof.

J. E. McCormick who recently sold his merchandise store at Bracht and purchased another establishment of the same kind at Butler, Pendleton county, has sold the latter store and has purchased the store of Starns & Caldwell, in Williamstown. The stand is in a prominent part of town and enjoys a good trade.

J. H. Tipton returned here Sunnight after a business trip to Chicago and a visit with relatives at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Owing to an extra amount of advertising in last week's paper, considerable correspondence was left out, but appears this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Brown, who lived on High Street, moved to Belleview, Saturday, where Mr. Brown will farm with his father the coming season.

Sunday about thirty relatives and freinds assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevens, on High Street, in honor of Mr. Stevens seventy-ninth birthday. All brought well filled baskets and a most pleasant day was spent with Mr. and Mrs. Stevens. In the evening all left, wishing Mr. Stevens many more such pleasant birthdays.

Last week James Finnell, aged 80, died at his home in Georgetown, Ky., from ailments incident to old age. Mr. Finnell was a very learned man, a lawyer of ability, an author and a man well known both at home and abroad. He wrote many interesting articles under the nom de plume of "Jeemes Giles." He was born at Verona and was a brother of Dr. R. L. Finnell, of Verona.

There will be a pie, cake and candy sale, Saturday, April 29, beginning at 10:00 a. m., at Stamler's meat store, held by the Yound Ladies' Sunday School Class of the Christian Church.

W. W. Rouse began work on the Farmers' Union Warehouse at Florida last week. He has the foundation of concrete completed and began the upper structure this week.

The minstrel given by the scholars of the Walton Graded School, Friday night, was greatly enjoyed by all who attended.

Kentucky Politics

By TYLER MUNFORD

The political peace of Louisville, nerve center of the current Democratic gubernatorial fight in Kentucky, was temporarily disturbed last week by the untimely death of Patrick J. Welsh, a lovable Irishman who, twelve days earlier, had been named to succeed Judge Shackelford Miller, Jr., as chairman of the Jefferson County Democratic Executive Committee.

Mr. Welsh won the postwith the backing of Mayor Joseph Scholtz and five of the eight members of the committee. Three days after his death the committee named County Tax Assessor Thomas Burke as his successor, thus giving the Louisville Mayor his second consecutive victory in the fight to control Democratic affairs in this metropolitan area.

While Keen Johnson-for-Governor strategists remained aloof from any interference in the Louisville contest for party control, they were nevertheless elated over developments that resulted in the election of Mr. Burke. They were in the same attitude following the election of the late Mr. Welsh, and expressed complete accord with the Welsh policy of neutrality by the Louisville organization in the gubernatorial primary. Immediately after his election, Mr. Burke pledged a similar policy of neutrality.

In view of last year's open endorsement of Senator Barkley and the resultant Jefferson county majority for the Senator, Keen Johnson's advisors, without a doubt, have good reason to be elated over the organization's new policy here in Louisville. It is no secret that the leaders of the Tom Rhea faction were confident of securing the open and unqualified endorsement of their candidate by the Louisville group. Actually, they based much of their hope for a Brown victory upon receiving the support of the strong Jefferson county organization. So the policy of neutrality can be accurately analyzed as a major break for Keen Johnson. It's not too far fetched to assume that the outcome of the Jefferson county fight for control of the local party organization will have a definite, if not decisive, effect upon the outcome of the gubernatorial primary.

Democratic leaders outside of Jefferson county have been much concerned over the Louisville situation, and the psychology of the Louisville neutrality policy is likely to have a very definite effect in favor of the Keen Johnson candidacy, as it is generally accepted that the Richmond publisher possesses far more personal appeal with the rank and file of organization Democrats in Louisville than his opponent. Certainly, it does not take a political analysist to discover a trend approaching overwhelming sentiment for Keen Johnson in Jefferson county.

This situation is partly due to the fact that Keen Johnson has never meddled in Democratic affairs there. Another and important angle is the well known fact that leaders of Louisville's now apparently united Republican party believe their chances for victory in local races in Louisville this November would be enhanced by the nomination of Mr. Brown. Many Louisville Democratic leaders, while uncommitted in the big race, are known to be thinking along the same lines. Their first interest is in the local races, but they immediately recognize the benefits that will accrue to the Louisville organization from a state ticket headed by a strong, steady, capable and well liked leader.

If state newspapers can be accepted as reflecting public sentiment in their localities, there is a decided trend in Kentucky against any new legislative program calling for increased or additional taxes, an unbalanced budget or an increase in the state debt.

Commenting on new expenditures advocated by one of the announced candidates for Governor, J. H. Moore, of the Fulto Daily Leader, observes that "I have enough cussedness in me to wonder where the money is coming from and who is going to pay it."

Discussing the Brown platform, the Falmouth Outlook says, "The taxpayers of the Commonwealth are wondering where he is going to get all of this money for increased charity unless he expects to increase taxes."

The Carlisle Mercury points out that "With Mr. Brown as Governor, Kentuckians could reasonably expect to see the state debt again mount."

The Kentucky Times-Star suggests that "When candidates say they propose to do this or that, citizens will be asking what they propose to use for money in the process."

In a recent speech on education, Mr. Brown pledged support of "Whatever appropriation is necessary to pay a minimum teacher salary of $75 a month." He did not indicate from where he expected to get the money to provide such an appropriation, but he did assert that on a basis of a full year, teachers drawsalaries ranging from $6.75 to $8.75 a week, while a miner, under union wage scale, earns $5.60 a day.

It's difficult to gather from the Brown statement whether he thinks teachers should be paid $5.60 a day or whether miners are overpaid as compared with teachers. It might be that Mr. Brown has in mind a unionization program for Kentucky teachers with possible CIO affiliation.

PROLIFIC RECORD FOR KENTUCKY SOW

A sow that has farrowed 132 pigs in four years is owned by O. W. Breeding in Adair county, Kentucky. Her first 1939 litter of 11 pigs has been entered in the state ten-litter contest, which has for its goal making a litter weigh at least a ton when six months old. Of the 132 pigs farrowed by this sow, 97 were raised according to County Agent O. B. Rankin. Eight were butchered for home meat, 11 are still on the farm and the rest brought their owner $1,186.

Interest of Powell county farmers in meadow and pasture crops is revealed by the sale of nearly 50,000 pounds of korean lespedeza seed this spring, and the establishment in Marc hof five Italian ry grass demonstrations

GAME AND FISH DIRECTOR POINTS OUT REGULATIONS

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, wishes to remind all anglers of the fact that they will be permitted to fish during the month of April "only" in any navigable stream in Kentucky and "only" with pole and line and not above the last lock and dam.

Taking fish in any manner from streams outside of the ones that have locks and dams will be unlawful during the month, and anyone caught violating this particular section of the law is liable to a fine or jail sentence upon conviction.

Attention is again called to the fact that all persons, both men and women, sixteen years of age or over, must possess a fishing license.

THE NETHERLANDS SLUM CLEARANCE SIMILAR TO U. S.

Nearly one-sixth of all the now-income families in the Netherlands have been rehoused in decent, safe and sanitary dwellings under a movemet similar in many respects to the slum-clearance program of the United States Housin Authority, Jan Bommer, famous Dutch housing expert, recently told Nathan Straus, Administrator of the United States Housing Authority.

Holland was among the first countries in Europe to undertake the comprehensive program of slum clearance which is now going forward in almost every other nation on the Cintinent.

Mr. Bommer, a member of the City Council of Amsterdam, pointed out that in this city atone, nearly one-fifth of all low income workers and their families have been provided with new homes at rentals sufficiently low to meet their slender purses.

Mr. Bommer also is executive director of Public Housing Societies of the Netherlands.

Mrs. A. C. Marsh returned home with her daughter, Mrs. Curtis Pennington, and Mr. Pennington, of Dayton, Ohio, to be their guest for the week.

EGGS PLENTIFUL; USE MORE OF THEM

With eggs plentiful and cheap in Kentucky, many homemakers are making more elaborate use of them in cooking.

Eggs always have been been used in making the old standbys, angel food cake, egg omelets and corn bread. From tiny tot to grandpa, eggs for breakfast are routine in many homes — coddled, poached, soft-boiled or fried in butter. The Kentucky College of Agriculture also suggests the following:

Southern Spoon Bread:

Ingredients are one cup of cornmeal, one and one-half teaspoons of salt, two cups of scalded milk, two and one-half teaspoons of baking powder, and two eggs separated. Mix the meal and the salt, and stir into the hot milk. Cook over hot water, stirring from time to time, until smooth; then cool slightly. The egg yolks, well beaten, and the baking powder should now be stirred in; then fold in the stiffly-beaten egg whites. Turn the mixture into a well-greased casserole and bake for 35 minutes in a moderate oven, until the bread is firm and the crust browned. This makes twelve servings, and guaging by the bread's usual popularity, enough for four to six people.

Omelet always isgood, but try adding Worchestershire sauce of any standard brand, just as the omelet is served. In very small amounts, this gives an enticing flavor.

Unsweetened custard ring also requires eggs and is an excellent way to serve peas and other vegetables.

USED CAR BUSINESS NOW A MAJOR INDUSTRY

No one can fail to be impressed at the tremendous sales volume which used cars and trucks attained in this country each year. Chevrolet dealers alone have averaegd more than 100,000 of these units a month, over a period in excess of three years. Extend the count to include the whole industry, and you arrive at a staggering total—one which identifies the used car business as a major activity today.

The explanation of this sustained volume, observers are agreed, lies largely in the efforts, which the industry has sponsored, to surround the purchase of a used car with the same degree of confidence as the buyer feels when he gets a new car. The program had to receive dealer cooperation in order to progress, and the best guage of the dealer cooperation it has been accorded is that used car sales have maintained their terrific pace month after month, year after year.

In the used car or truck, as it is offered today by the reputable dealer, the buyer obtains not only a large amount of unusued transportation, but also a certain measure —in proportion to the price he pays, of course—of the various extras which all cars embody today. Safety, performance, economy and dependability are the four prime essentials. But luxury, beauty, comfort and other qualities highly developed in recent years, are also included in greater or lesser degree, especially on late-model cars.

The used car's appeal is by no means restricted to the man or woman who must practice thrift, although to such buyers a well-chosen used car offers a splendid investment. Thousands of American home today are on a two-car basis, and the number of families requiring three or more is steadily increasing. The used car is often a good investment as a second or third car in a family.

The most important problem facing the prospective buyer of a used car is not the selection of the car itself, but of the dealer from whom to buy it. The purchaser should exercise the same care, in this choice, that he would put forth in any other transaction of similar size. He should look into the dealer's used car operations and satisfy himself as to whether the dealer is interested primarily in building future clietele or simply getting rid of used cars. From the standpoint of the buyer, there is a world of difference.

What is the dealer's reconditioning procedure? Does he operate a separate used car department, with trained mechanics who specialize in in expert reconditioning of the kind that will make for long, trouble-free service. Does he offer any assurance that the used cars he sells will turn out as represented by his salesmen? Is he, in short, a quality dealer—a solid, permanent member of the business community, whose interest in future business is as real as his interest in the profits from the sale he makes today?

The used car business, throughout a part of the indutry, at least, is now as scientifically organized as any other commercial activity. Basic in the new picture there is the recognition that customer satisfaction is the only real foundation for permanency. In tre Chevrolet organization, for instance, dealer' realize that the man who buys a used car this year can and should be a prospect, either for another user car or for a new car, later on. If his experience with this purchase is satisfactory, he will instinctively return to the same source when future needs arise.

It is the constantly-widening recognition of this fact—and the manner in which more ad more dealers are acting on the recognition—that accounts for the used car's present high standing as a commodity in trade.

U. K. TO HAVE ATHLETIC COACHING SCHOOL

With an understanding staff the University of Kentucky department of Physical Education and department of Athletics will hold their annual summer athletic coaching school on the University campus August 7-12.

Football classes will be under the supervision of Bernie Bierman, University of Minnesota football coach; Ab Kirwan, University of Kentucky football mentor, and Burt Ingwerson, Northwestern University line coach. Basketball will be under the supervision of theKentucky maestro, Adolph Rupp.

Up around Minneapolis, where the flat-boat fleets put in, Bierman Minnesota Gophers into one of the nation's annual grid powerhouses. For the past five years Minnesota has ranked toward the top in the national ratings and in that time has captured two Big Ten Conference titles.

Ingwerson, himself a former All-American guard at Illicnis, for the past four years has served as line coach at Northwestern. Last year Ingwerson was a member of the University of Kentucky coaching school staff and identified himself for his thoroughness and knowledge of all phases of line play. Kentucky's representatveis on the staff, Kirwan and Rupp, served in last year's school and need no introduction.

Further information concerning the University of Kentucky coaching school may be obtained by writing the physical education department at the state university.

After using the present state seal for 71 years, Alabama is to have one of new design, bearing a map of the state and showing its principal rivers. The Daughters of the Confederacy sponsored the new seal, asserting that the present one, adopted in 1868, "was designed by a carpetbagger."

Good Eyesight Depends On Intelligent Care

"YOU can buy fine, new, store teeth, capable of coping with the toughest steak. You can get wooden arms and legs that move and wiggle and function," says Maxine Davis, popular writer on medical subjects, "but you can never get any more eyes." In view of this it is especially unfortunate that eyesight is the gift we choose to ignore until the light dims, the printed page blurs or we have aches and pains, Miss Davis continues in an article, "You Have Only One Pair of Eyes," in Good Housekeeping Magazine for May.

The eye is an amazingly delicate and intricate mechanism set in an exposed position and yet it stands an incredible amount of wear and tear. Most people know appallingly little about eyes. They go to an oculist only when their eyes hurt them and they apply all the superstitious rules in an emergency.

Beefsteak is a time-honored remedy for "shiners" but the only real virtue of beefsteak is that it is a cold application. Flaxseed is a folklore specific for removing foreign substances in the eye. Flaxseed may be of some benefit if it doesn't deposit an infection while extricating the foreign substance. Oculists should be consulted immediately in all emergencies which involve the eyes.

There are two periods in life when the eyes should receive special care and attention—in infancy and early childhood and after the age of forty is reached. In the interim it is only necessary to exercise common sense. The first six years of life are especially important because that is a season of eye-growth and the chances of correction of defects in vision are the greatest.

Watch your child at play. Does he peer at his toys? Does he seem clumsy and apt to bump into things? Is he confused when you attempt to direct him toward a given object? Does he tire quickly or become irritable for no apparent reason? Does his body become tense and his eyes squinted as he watches a moving object? Does he make movements toward his eyes as if endeavoring to brush something away? All these things are manifestations of faulty vision and should be attended to at once.

Early middle life is a time when everybody should visit an oculist at least once every year or two. This is the time when eyes begin to grow old. The medical term for this condition is Presyobia and it is almost universal. At this age, degenerative diseases are also apt to make their onset and they often affect the eyes. Diseases of the central nervous system affect the optic nerve, and two serious eye afflictions may result: glaucoma and cataract. These can be treated much more successfully if they are detected in their early stages.

CHEVROLET SALES MAKE SUBSTANTIAL GAIN OVER 1938

Chevrolet dealers' retail sales of news cars and trucks reached 21,743 units in the first ten days in April, 24% above the total for the same period last year, it was announced recently.

This brings Chevrolet's year-to-date sales total to 213,427 units. A gain of 33.6% over the 159,697 sold through April 10, 1938.

Used car sales in the same period totaled 41,482 units, a gain of 4,856 over the sales one month ago, making an aggregate new and used car total of 63,225 for the period, the announcement said.

SAVE YOUR EYEBROWS AND SAVE YOUR VISION

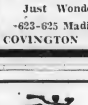
Don't shave your eyebrows, ladies, if you would see better as well as look better. This bit of beauty adyty than Mr. Perc Westmore, famous Hollywood make-up expert.

According to Mr. Westmore, which too much of the eyebrow is plucked away, the eye is deprived of one method of protection against excess light from the sun or artificial illumination. It is thus more subject to eyestrain and defective sight due to glare.

It is interesting to note the nummer of protective devices which have been provided for the eyes, observes the Better Vision Institute. The efficiency of each is nature's way of proving the importance of our seeing apparatus. For example, the eye, seeing an object approaching, closes almost instantaneously. Thsen, too, nature has provided the deep, bony socket into which the eye is flitted and the covering of lashes and eyebrows to protect the precious organ. Other forms of nervous protective development are the extreme sensitiveness of the surface of the eyball and th expansion and contraction of the pupil in order to control the amount of light entering the eye.

HENS APPRECIATE 4-H CLU BOWNER

Driven by the Cumberland River overflow to the back porch of the family home, 135 hens owned by Roy Asher, a Bell county 4-H Club boy, refused to quit laying, continued their production at the rate of 22 eggs a month, and returned a profit of 7 cents a dozen. One plucky biddy showed her appreciation by laying an egg at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and another at 3:30 in the afternoon. Her March production was 27 eggs. Believig suchegg-laying ability should be preserved, Roy rigged up a home-made electric incubator in which he placed 19 of ner eggs.



HARLAN 4-H CLUBS MAP BIG PROGRAMS

Seventy-four farm leaders and business men attended the annual 4-H Club conference in Harlan couty. The Harlan Kiwanis Club is furnishing 250 strawberry plants to each of 67 club boys and girls representing every community in the county. Twenty-five club boys also will grow an acre of corn each, on which they will use superphosphate, commercial fertilizer and limestone. Other 4-H Club projects in the county include poultry raising, gardening, pig raising and small fruit production.

The picture of a cat that never existed appeared on a Spanish postage stamp issued in 1930 honoring Lindbergh, also bearing a portrait of the flyre, his plane and the Statue of Liberty. It was erroneously reported that Lindbergh had taken a black kitten as a mascot on his Paris flight.

The Farm Bureau in Graves county and the Pet Milk Company made available $1,200 to help 4-H Club members buy registered stock.

HIGHWAYS OPEN

Rising waters of the Ohio River and its backwaters were busy submerging the usual flood-bound high ways bordering the main streams yesterday, but the county prolice reported the reopening of almost all county roads which had been blocked over the weekend due to the rise of Millcreek and the heavy rainfall.

The Sheriff's office said traffic had been resumed on all county highways with the exception of U. S. Route No. 52, inudated at Coney Island and many other points. State Route 74 flooded between the Union Levee at Beachmont Avenue and Newtown; U. S. Route 50 closed at Lost Bridge, near Elizabethtown, and the Harrison-Lawrenceburg Road, blocked between Elizabethtown and Supenskon Bridge Road, and between Addyston and Sayler Park.

Out-of-town highways still were in the grip of high water, however, according to the Automobile Club, which reported additional blockades in those previously listed. They are U. S. Route 35 west of Gallipolis, U. S. 50 east of Athen as Guysville and Coolville, and in other states. Stae Route 10 west of Vancsburg, Ky., and the main roads leading north out of Charleston, W. Va.

Other main routes in Ohio still blocked include U. S. 50 east of Chillicothe, U. S. 56 west of Athens, U. S. 52 in numerous low spots, State Route 25 at Friendship and Blue Creek, U. S. 68 a Wahlsburg, State Route 73 at Rarden and Otway U. S. 35 east of Chillicothe and north of Jackson and U. S. 23 between Waverly and Piketown as well as on the Kentucky side between Porsmouth and Ashland, Ky.

Meanwhile, the City Highway Department maintained the utmost serenity as waterfront streets began to take their usual flood bath. Besides the river streets, Front and Water which were partly submerged last night, low points no Gest St., Southside Avenue, Kellogg Avenue, part of Riverside Drive, and Spring Grove Avnue in Northside were due to be under early today.

Street railway high-water trestles are not used until the Ohio River stage is 58 feet. The trestles are expected to be needed sometime today.

Greene Line boats suspended operations yesterday, while moonlight dances on the Island Queen will be conducted with the steamer stationary at its wharf.

Railroad and airline officials reported no difficulties.

W. H. Alexander still has excellent yields of red clover on his Fleming county farm where the seeding was done in 1933.

DARK TOBACCO PAYS 4-H CLUB CHAMPION

Dark tobacco paid better than burley tobacco, for Robert S. Reisz, 17-year-old Daviess county boy who is Kentucky's state champion 4-H club tobacco producer. An acre of dark tobacco, recently marketed, made a net profit of $219., after allowing $10., for rent and deducting for such other expenses as fertilizer, seed, cultivation, harvesting and curing.

Reisz's acre of burley tobacco made him only $98., after deduction all costs. The acre of dark tobacco produced 1,462 pounds, which sold for $21.93, a hundred, and the burley acre made 1,146 pouds which brought $18.70 a hundred.

As a 4-H club member, Reisz has specialized in tobacco growing, and has won several county and district championships. In addition to learning about growing, he has accumulated knowledge of curing and grading.

CHANGE IN RATION CUTS FEED COSTS

A saving of 4,000 pounds of concentrated feed a month, worth $40, resulted from changing feeding methods in the 39-cow herd on the farm of E. B. Warrener in Warren County, Kentucky, according to Billy Morris, dairy herd improvement tester. He now keeps a card at each stanchion, showing the production and ration for the cow, and makes the necessary changes after each testing day. Not only are some of the high producers getting more, but some of the low producers are getting less.

In Spencer county, Tester Marshall Carpenter reports gains in production as a result of improved feeding and culling. Pem Whitesides' registered Guernsey herd led in prouction and also in economy of production. Feed in this herd cost 8 cents per 100 pounds of milk and 17 cents per pound of butterfat, compared to $1.12 and 24 cents as averages for the whole association.

Several carloads of superphosphate were spread in Campbell county last month.

Announcing the appointment of The TRI-COUNTY NATURAL GAS CO.
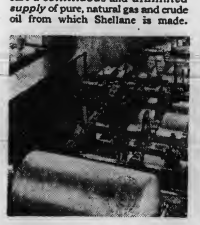
as distributor of
SHELLANE COOKING GAS

Shell has over thirty-three thousand oil wells such as these. They insure a continuous and unlimited supply of pure, natural gas and crude oil from which Shellane is made.

Here in these towers and tanks, Shellane is refined—made safe and clean-burning. A part of one of the large modern refineries in which millions of dollars have been invested to produce Shellane and other Shell products.

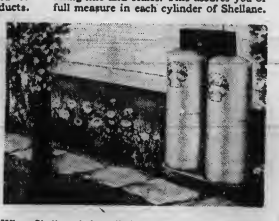


After the pressure regulators have been tested to prevent waste, the cylinders are then filled with Shellane. Here you see the filling line and scales. This assures you of full measure in each cylinder of Shellane.

YOU NO LONGER need to live in the city to enjoy the advantages of city gas service. For every home — no matter where it may be—can now have the same advantages with Shellane.

Shellane is a pure, natural gas just like the gas you get in the city. At the refinery, it is compressed into cylinders and shipped to us. We then deliver these cylinders to your home as needed and pipe the gas directly to your kitchen from outside the house.

This means that there's no longer a reason for any woman to waste her strength on hours of back-breaking labor . . . scrubbing . . . scouring . . . carrying coal . . . chopping wood. For Shellane puts an end to kitchen drudgery . . . banishes dirt and ashes. In fact, it doesn't even stain your pots and pans!



Shellane makes cooking fun . . . lets you discover the delights of modern menus. And you can have automatic hot water and automatic refrigeration, too. All at the cost of just a few cents a day! Come in and let us demonstrate the real economy of Shellane.

Each cylinder must be tested for perfect condition before it is allowed to leave the refinery. Here you see the "water bath," through which each cylinder must pass to be inspected for leaks. Another safeguard against waste.

In this one room you see over 1500 cylinders of Shellane, showing the tremendous supply of this pure, natural gas that is kept on hand. Shellane users need have no fear of exhausted resources or "discontinued service."

When Shellane is installed at your home, two cylinders are placed in some inconspicuous place outside the house and covered with a neat canopy. Through concealed copper tubes, the gas is then piped directly to your range, refrigerator, or water heater. When one cylinder is exhausted, we replace it promptly upon your order.

With a modern gas range, the housewife can perform all the miracles of modern cookery. No more oven-watching . . . testing . . . or fear of failure. The kitchen is always cool and clean.

With Shellane, you can have an automatic water heater at small cost. This makes it possible for you to have hot water on the instant for dish washing . . . shaving . . . bathing . . . for laundry work. No more waiting around while the water heats.

This beautiful automatic refrigerator operates on Shellane. It has no moving parts to get out of order—an important feature to anyone anxious to avoid repairs. It also guarantees continuous performance and permanently silent operation.

WOMEN CHANGE NAMES ON SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS

More than 1,000,000 applications to change the names women gave when obtaining their social security cards have been filed with the federal agency which issues these cards. This report was made recently by Frank B. Becker, Jr., manager of the Social Security field office in Covington, Ky.

There are three principal reasons why these million changes in womens' names have been recorded, according to Mr. Decker. "The first is, of course, marriage, which at this season of the year causes the number of changes for this reason to approach its peak.

"The second cause is the widespread use of so-called working names of women. This name, for various reasons, often differs from the real name of the woman worker. As all records of of the Social Security Board are strictly confidential, it is possible for a woman to work under a name not her own, if she so desires.

"Finally, there is a very large group of women who decide to change their names for personal reasons. Elizabeth may want to be Betty, Lisbeth, Beth, Bette or Lizzie, because her name is so recorded on the payroll. We frequently have applications to change names for this reason. Our office has the form which both men and women use to change the names appearing on their social security records. This is one of the services given by our field office. Women who are married this spring should change our records so we will have their married names," Mr. Decker advised.

4-H RALLY DAY TO BE LARGEST EVER HELD

The annual 4-H club spring rally to be held at the Burlington school May 13, will be the largest over, according to H. B. Drake, assistant county agent. Thirteen teams representing the farm project clubs have already signified their intention of entering the demonstration team contest. They will compete for the privilege of representing this county in the district contest at Williamstown. These teams are from but seven of the ten schools. Three clubs have not had their fourth series of meetings. Hamilton was forced to postpone their meeting because of high water and Walton and Verona each close later than the other schools.

These teams are arranging to demonstrate some good practice that may be carried out on many local farms. The control of Blue Mold in tobacco beds will be demonstrated by a team from New Haven while a team from Florence will show what can be done to make roadside stands attractive. Those and the many other demonstrations planned are sure to prove interesting to any who attend this annual event.

SHEEP GROWERS

Mr. R. C. Miller, Sheep X Field Agent of the College of Agriculture, addressed sheep raisers in a meeting at Burlington last Monday at noon at 1:30 p. m. He urged growers to cooperate in dog law enforcement, market lamb improvement and parasite control.

Northwestern range breeding ewes crossed on purebred rams were recomended as foundation stock. He advised that thousands of so called northwestern range rams sold in the state last years were south Texas ewes, not desirable for our conditions. A five point program including the following poits were recommended for parasite control.

1. Start Healty stock.
2. Pasture roation.
3. Treat flocks for worms once per month from May thru October.
4. Treat all lambs on farm after June 15th that are at least 8 weeks old.
5. Avoid bringing diseased sheep on farm thru purchase of rams, etc.

Plans were made at the meeting to supply all growers with written parasite control recommendations, for a number of rowers to attend the State Lamb improvement meeting at University of Kentucky, June 13th ad to hold a livestock marketing tour of the Cincinnati stock yards on June 9th.

CAMPBELL LEAGUE

Bob and Gene aggregation lost today to the strong Green Line team by a score of 6 to 3. Hoot Ryle, opening pitcher for Bob & Genes', allowing two hits and one run.

Relived by Elmo Steffens in the fifth inning, who gave up four hits and five runs to the opposing team. The regular lineup of Bob and Genes held the Green Line team to two runs to three until the seventh inning. Substitutes players were then put into the game for a work out and the Green Line team then staged a rally and forged ahead to win by three runs.

The outstanding feat of the day was a sensational catch made in left field by McClure, of Verona, a very promising young player. Mr. Eades, manager of Bob & Genes', predicts that he will have another championship team again this year, made up of Boone County boys, who are all looking good on the diamond.

May 7th will be opening day for the league. Bob & Gene's to play Heidleberg at Crescent Springs ball park.

The ceremonies of the opening game will be speeches by Judge Goodenough, Wm. Werner, Charles Riley, Judge Riddle and Sheriff Walton.

The game is to becalled at 3:00 p. m. (fast time).

Catchers:—Bob Dennison, and Rags Ryle.

They also plan to conduct test plot demonstrations in connection with the College of Agriculture to determine the best adapted varieties for Boone county soils.

Chairman Speaker

SHERMAN GOODPASTOR

Sherman Goodpastor, of Owingsville and Frankfort, will serve as chairman of the speakers' bureau for the Keen Johnson-for-Governor campaign, State Manager J. Lyter Donaldson announced today.

Born in Bath County, Mr. Goodpaster has for many years been a familiar and prominent figure in Eastern Kentucky and state politics. He comes from a old and prominent family. His father was the late Court of Appeals Justice C. W. Goodpaster, and his mother was Mrs. Claire McAllister Goodpaster. He recieved his early education in the public schols of Bath County, and later attended Transylvania University at Lexington.

After completing his education at Transylvania, he returned to Owingsville where he engaged in the practice of law with his father until his election as county attorney. He served one term in this office, and in 1912 was appointed State Inspector and Examiner by Governor James B. McCreary.

In 1915 Mr. Goodpastor made the race for State Treasurer on the Democratic ticket and was elected along with Governor A. O. Stanley and the other party nominees. During the early part of the Chandler administration he was named State Insurance Commissioner. Beginning this week he will take a leave of absence without pay to direct the speakers' bureau.

Mr. Goodpastor was an associate of the late Judge Allie Young, of Morehead, for many years one of the outstanding Democratic leaders in Kentucky.

He is married and has two children, Sherma Goodpaster, Jr., and Miss Claire Goodpaster. Mrs. Goodpaster before marriage was Miss Ann Johnson, of Mt. Sterling, the daughter of a Confederate army officer.

GLENCOE ECHOES

GLENCOE ECHOES

By Rev. I. E. Stephenson

Easter Sunday came again with its usual observations of religious services, egg hunts and so on.

The observation of this sacred feast of food things to eat, but rather a feast of Spiritual things, because it is the anniversary of the resurrection of the Christ, which the Christiao conceives to be the greatest day of all time.

In as much as eartly life ends, the coming again of life after death which the resurrection of Christ presages brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. It is not enough to just have a service. It is not enough to color eggs and to have baskets of candy bunnies, but far rather is it necessary to seriously think of the Divine Power. The Love of God, the Infinite Purpose which triumphed over all earthly laws and brought day out of night and joy out of sorrow and life out of death.

In apostolic days this that w as evidently so vivid and impressive that the apostles on the firstday of the week , not just once a year, met to observe the memorial feast, known as "The Lord's Supper," this keeping in constant mind the Vital Element: i e., The suffering and death of Christ necessary for the resurrection to be made possible.

Con we with propriety and safety do less than they did? I invite your consideration to the following lines which vaguely express my thoughts of this great day.

COVINGTON BEECOS

Covington Beecos, Kentucky state Semipro champions, got away to a fast start in the Tri-State League race Sunday afternoon when they turned back the Cincy Box LDuch team, 7 to 3 behind the steady pitching of "Frenchy" DeMoisey, former Walton, Kentucky lad, and thanks to the timely hitting of Eddie Arnzen.

Demoisey, towering right-hander, who served several seasons in the American Association as a member of Louisville's hill staff, was spotted to a four-run lead in the opening frame when Arnzen clubbed a triple against the fence in right center to score three friends ahead of him.

Throw Is Bad

The Beek thirdsacker came on to score when the throw to third baseeluded Hughes, Bix Lunch infielder.

The Covington Ball Park, scene of the opener, was filled to nearcapacity by the time Judge Rodney G. Bryson tossed the first pitch, a halting strike, to Judge Joseph P. Goodenough, who believe it or not, caught it.

Other pre-game ceremonies included demonstrations outside and inside the park by the drum and bugle corps of Kersten-O'Day Post, Veterans of Foregin Wars, addresses by Judge Dennis Ryan, vice president of the league, ad E. J. (Pat) Goodenough, president of the Covington Chamber of Commerce.

Given his four-run lead in the opening round, DeMoisey breezed along in easy fashion until the fifth inning, when the Lunchmen tapped the rubber for the first time scoring twice on a single and a brace of doubles. In the meantime, however, the Beeks scored their fifth run when Jostworth singled for his second hit and came home on banager Buddy Bloebaum's two-base swat.

TRAINING CLASSES

Home Improvement leaders of the Boone County Homemakers have attended two training classes during the last week. Miss Ida C. Hagman, Home Improvement Specialist, University of Kentucky led the two lessons on blocking and making of slip covers. Leaders from each of the twelve clubs in the county attended the classes according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, home demonstration agent.

Miss Hagman demonstrated how to make slip covers and cushions for overstuffed furniture, straight back kitchen chairs and rocking chairs. Leaders made the various type covers during the two days.

Mrs. George Casper, county project chairman of Home Improvement, reported that homemakers were interested in the slip cover lessons. She reported that everyone who attended the April meetings learned how to make the three most practical types of seam finishes for covers. Mrs. Casper asked that every homemaker make some type of slip cover, boxed cushion or channel cushion during the lessons in May and June.

POULTRY TOUR

Sixteen attended the our of the Cincinati poultry market on April market on April 27th, according to H. R. Forker, county agent. Principal places visited on tour included the Eberle Commission and Storage compay, Peters Poultry company and the Cooperative Pure Milk Association Egg Buying tour very much worthwhile and many helpful points for market improvement were studied.

SHEEP ASSOCIATION

The Boone County Sheep Protective Association to date has insured flocks of 100 farmers owning in excess of 5,000 old sheep. To date losses have been limited to 7 members and 25 sheep valued at$146.00. The largest single loss was in the flock of Howard Kelly at Florence the past week when15 lambs were killed and 35 head injured.

Despite the light loss by members has been unusually heavy the past three weeks. Most of the recent losses have been in spring lambs.

Wm. BOOTH HOSPITAL HOLDS ANNUAL MAINTENANCE WEEK

MUSICAL PROGRAM

Captain Buddy Brewer, field representative of the Salvation Army, will bring a group of musicans to Walton Sunday and present a special musical program at the Walton Christian Church at 730 p. m. Mr. Brewer is recognized as an outstading singer of gospel hymns, and will sing on the program. In addition, an orchestra will play a number of sacred hymns. This program is being sponsored in behalf of the Booth Memorial Hospital. Mr. Erewer will explain the work now being done by this institution, and outline its aims for the future. No special offering will be taken at this service. The public is invited to attend. If you enjoy fine gospel music, you cannot afford to miss this program.

GO TO SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY

Sunday, May 7th will be observed as Go To Sunday School Day at the Christian Church. A special effort is being made to have every member present, and a cordial invitation is extended to all those who are not members of other Sunday Schools to attend. The aim of the Go To Sunday School Day is to have every member of the community in some Sunday School. The Kentucky Sunday School Association is making a special effort to make this the greatest day in its

ICE AGED ANIMALS

Big-game hunting in the vicinity of Big Bone Lick, Ky., 50,000 years ago would have driven from cover giant bisons, wild horses, elephants and ground sloths, according to discoveries announced Wednesday by University of Cincinati authorities.

Basic of their attention is the discovery of several bones believed to have surged to the surface at Big Bone, Lick during the recent heavy rains and resultant flood. About 10 Cincinnatians under Dr. Kenneth Caster, curator of the university's museum, and Prof. Gustav Carlson, U. C. anthropologist made the find.

Visiting the area to explore what are belived to be several prehistoric human sites, the university's Evening College lecture-discussion group found the bones in a creek bed. The area is belived to have been a dangerous swamp when the big animals roamed it in the Ice age.

Salt springs are thought to have attracted the gigantic creatures which became mired in mud and quicksand. Dr. Caster and Prof. Carlson are preparing the bones for exhibition late this week in the Old Teachers Building.

Elmer Lee Abdon

Elmer Lee Abddn, age 11, of Hathway, Ky., died at his home, Saturday, April, 29, after an illness of only a few days.

He leaves to mourn this passing, his parent, Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Abdon; two brothers and one sister; his grandparents and a number of relatives.

Burial was in the Big Bone cemetery.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of arrangements.

George B. Black

Geo. B. Black, farmer, age 72, resident of Beaver Lick died suddently at his home Thurs., April 27 of heart failure.

Mr. Black was well-known and highly respected by everyone that new him.

Rev. Baldwin was the officiating minister at the services which were held from the Hughes Chapel. Burial was held in the Hughes' Chapel cemetery.

To mourn his passing he leaves two sons, Ed and William Black seven grandchildren; three brothers four sisters and a number of relatives and friends.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of fuperal arrangements.

Mrs. James C. Layne Accepts Chairmanship

The Wm. Booth Memorial Hospital is this week having their annual Maintenance Appeal. In this community, Mrs. James C. Layne of Florence has accpted the Chairmanship and will be assisted by Mr. Lee Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ransler of Walton have been asked to head up the committee in that community and other workers are being recruited throughout the county.

In a report released today by the Wm. Booth Memorial Hospital it showed that patients recieved 22,014 days care during the past fiscal year. Of this number 8,509 days, or 38 per cent of all care given was free. In addition to this, 7,270 days care, or 33 per cent were part-pay which the recipient paid from $1.00 per day or some other portion of their bills. The balance of 6,235 days, or 29 per cent were paid.

The Hospital at this time is seeking $25,000 to ehlp carry the large amount of charity work done by the institution. Because of the fact that the Hospital works on a 24-hour day, its overhead is naturally large. This is in line with every other institution of a similiar nature. No patient is everturned away because of lack of funds, and in no case refused because they are poor.

Mr. Henderson G. Hightower, General Chairman of the Advisory Board, stated the work at the Hospital has been increasing each month with the charity work climbing at a slightly faster pace that that of the pay patients. He stated that the good of the patient, yet ademany of the deportments are for quate charges cannot be made to cover the cost of these services.

Mr. Hightower further pointed out that a few years back the average stay of a patient in the hospital was 35 days. Today medical science has reduced that to 11 days. The Laboratory has contributed much to the shortening of the patient's stay at the Hospital. It is proven fact that tests and examinations made for the doctor by the laboratory enable him to establish firmly the correct diagnosis, and that, of course, is the essential factor to guide him in his treatment. The Laboratory has eliminated the 'hit or miss' diagnosis by the sure methods of science. However, the important point is that the patient gains there by and this is the important consideration of the Hospital.

TOBACCO DISEASES

Plans for the 1939 Blue Mold and Leaf diseases in plant bed control demonstrations have been worked out and are beig submitted to growers this week, acording to H. R. Forkner, county agent.

The plan briefly is as follows—lons per 100 linear feet of a Bordeaux mirture—X-3-4-50 strength at the rate of 25 gal-nine foot bed. Apply whenp lants have four leaves. Apply second treatment two weeks later.

This plan should aid growers in producing higher quality plant that should improve the yield and quality of crop produced.

A NATION OF BEGGARS

There is now every indication that the recent economy drive in Congress was made of the same stuff of which all economy drives in recent years have been made—ballyhoo and buck passing.

This is a paradoxical situation. On the surface, as recorded by numerous polls and speeches, the public is all for economy. But public office holders, quick to accept the views of public opinion, are extremely reluctant to do more than talk about it. They know that demands for economy are only "skin deep" as far as the public is concerned. Constituents back home, polls and speeches notwithstanding, still demand "free money" for this or that "worthy civic project." Economy is all right they say, in effect, so long as the fellow in the next state or the next county bears the brunt of it.

The next time you are tempted to curse the politicians in Washington for not pulling the drawstrings on the public purse, just remember this: The average public official won't buck public opinion. Therefore, until the public honestly demands economy and all of us are ready to grin and bear the resultant pinch, the country will have no economy.

Civic organizations, local politicians and business men who advocate economy on one hand and on the other beg like paupers from their representatives in the nation's capital, are a shameful menace to the welfare of the country.

Little Businesses Make A "Big Business"

Retail merchandise is an immensely important economic factor in our national life. A recent survey concerning a years' spending by a branch of the merchandising industry—the chain stores—indicates just how great a factor it is.

These stores purchased close to $5,783,000,000 worth of merchandise from American sources of supply in the year in question. They paid about $437,000,000 in rents to property owners in thousands of communities scattered throughout the 48 states. They spent over $560,000,000 for repairs, equipment, heat, light, etc.

Their thousands of employes received the gigantic sum of $1,314,000,000 in wages. Tax collectors—state, federal and local—came in for $255,900,000. And their advertising budgets, much of which money was expanded locally. In the cases of chain stores, for example, $141,000,000.

Figures are not available for the expenditures of independent merchants. But these merchants do about 70 per cent of all the retail business in the United States—so their spending would have been greater than the chains, making a tremendous total for merchandising as a whole.

Equally as important as the mere dollars and cents figures, is the fact that retail merchandising, whether done by single-unit or multiple-unit stores, is an intensely local business. Most of the payroll goes to local residents who spend it at home. A large part of the commodity purchasing is from local farmers and processors, who in turn support other payrolls. Practically all of the money paid for rents goes to local property owners. And a big proportion of their taxes go to local unites of goverment.

Going a step farther, the profits earned by incorporated merchandising outlets are mainly distributed locally. In the cases of the chain stores, for example, owners comprise 1,663,700 stockholders, living in cities, towns and hamlets from the Gulf to the Great Lakes and the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Yes, merchandising is "big business"—a big business made up of tens of thousands of little businesses in every center of population, however small, in this vast America of ours.

THE TIMES IS RIGHT

One reads with approval the commendation of "the local paper" in an editorial in the New York Times, which is often spoken of as the greatest daily in the world.

The local newspaper tells the story of the life of its churches, schools, merchants, sports, clubs, social functions, police, fires and everything, according to listings of its merits by the Times, which wonders: "Heaven knows how many hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers read every week the concerns of their home town!"

It is the same on all "Sides" of Chicago, and San Francisco, and in all places between the Atlantic and Pacific and North and South.

Nowhere is the local newspaper more in evidence than in the National Capital. Sacks of home papers are delivered to Senators, Congressmen and administration heads all about Washington—from the White House to the homes and boarding houses where government clerks live.

No people know better than Washington's political colonies that the local newspapers smashed the Presidential purges in the last election. Every once in a while The Power of The Press is found to be the power of the nation's local newspapers.

BUSINESS IN FARMING

The agricultural marketing movement has been given the widespread support of business leaders for two excellent reasons.

First, marketing cooperation simply means applying proven business principles to meeting agriculture's sales problems. And business men know that progress requires all persons involved in a given calling to work together.

Second, business is vitally interested in the welfare of agriculture. The farm population constitutes the greatest single market for the products of our factories. As a result, prosperous farming has a great bearing on prosperous industry.

Cooperation in farm production and marketing is going ahead, and rapidly, with industry's best wishes for success behind it. And the whole country feels the benefits.

Despite the growth of the "Stop Hitler" movement, we are reasonably certain that our farmers will not want to let his crops go to ruin, leave his family, put on a khaki uniform, take a boat to Europe and shoot German farmers just because Hitler has marched into a couple of countries 4,000 miles away.

A negro tried on a murder charge this week at paducah was given a life sentence by jury, and accepted it. Previously, a jury had fixed his punishment at death, but the judgement was set aside. It was only one of a thousand instances where the punishment fixed at a second trail, if there is one, is less than at the first. The offense, and often the proof remains the same, but the punishment is lighter. The excitement created by the crime has subsided, and either the jury is too severe at the first hearing or too lenient at the second.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

This story is about a man who came into my office. I took him to be a life insurance agent or automobile salesman, but he proved to be a ticket seller for a chance on an auto for the benefit of his church. In order to make what he considered a good impression on me, he said he was pastor of the church.

I could hardly realize that a preacher of the gospel who would be a moral leader of his congregation, and especially of the Sunday School boys and girls of his church, selling chances on an auto.

I could not refrain myself any longer. I said to him: "My brother, I am surprised at you, a minister of the gospel, coming down to such a low level as to be selling chances for your church, which is gambling. Your example of morals is lower than our civil laws, which are opposed to gambling, putting forth their efforts to abolish slot machines, hand books and other gambling."

He acknowledged some of his people were opposed to selling chances, but others said the church needed the money. I said to him, "I am not surprised at your church being hard up financially when you are setting such a poor example of trying to hold up the spiritual morale. My advice to you as a business man and a church layman is to stop selling chances and put your efforts on a higher level."

I have heard my father say scores of times that if a preacher would put forth his consecrated efforts in preaching the gospel and feeding his people spiritually, he would be supported financially. From my viewpoint, any church makes a mistake in conducting any kind of a gambling scheme to obtain money to support or build a church. There is a wrong somewhere when the church or parents set the example of gambling for children when the laws of our cities and government are against it and all kinds of money is being spent to stop and punish gamblers. My viewpoint may not be popular, but gambling is gambling. No difference when and how it is carried on; it is either right or wrong.

As long as the churches, mothers and fathers encourage gambling, so long will they have to suffer the concequences. Many an ounfortunate boy has become a embezzler or murderer through gambling, which has caused untold sorrow and heartaches to many a mother and father who are reaping what they have sowed.

By JAMES PRESTON

A three-letter word —WAR—dominates the mail pouring in at the Captitol. And this is one subject on which there is no division of opinion. The American people don't want it.

In many cases it is perhaps the first letter some persons have ever written to a Repdesentative or a Senator. And it's the kind of mail to which Congress listens. Some is in scratch paper probably taken from a school tablet. But it makes no difference. Congressmen know it doesn't require expensive, gilt edged bond to make expressions of this kind stronger.

The secretary of one Senator estimates that of every four letters received—three are pleas against war.

This is the sentiment being conveyed to Washington. And this same sentiment is being expressed by prominent people as well. The size of the pocketbook makes no difference in the love for peace and hate of war.

Among the protests, those from businessmen are stronger than any.

"I want to make it perfectly plain that American industry has no stomach for war. The colossal expenditures on UNPRODUCTIVE armament, it is true, would give added employment and temporary stimulus to our prosperity, but at such cost in human lives, suffering and DISLOCOATION of our future economy to be a tragic bargain indeed. We have learned by bitter experience that peace—NOT WAR—hath her victories for industry."

Best opinion in Washington is that as long as sentiment against war continues to pour in from the people, America won't be involved even if war comes. Congressmen, like their constituents, have sons. They don't want war either. And just as long as Congress knows their constituents are back of them, they won't vote for war.

When the floor was laid about four years ago, Austria, Albania and Czechoslovakia were countries in Europe. Today they are only memories of mapmakers. The mosaic, however, is a map that cannot be altered. Austria, Albania and Czechoslovakia appear in bright colored stones.

Officials dont' know whether it is better to tear up their $20,000 ornament, or let time and shuffling feet wear out the boundary lines—or wait and make these other alterations that the world fears will come.

Decision of the House Labor Committee to hold hearings on the Labor Act amendments simultaneously with the Senate Labor Committee had observers puzzled for a while last week. But then the strategy behind the story began to show itself, and the story is simply this:

There had been no reuest for hearings in the House (because hearings were already underway in the Senate) until a move was started for a Congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board, which administers the Labor Act.

Immediately the CIO, the NLRB and administration spokesmen began scratching their heads for a way to head off such an investigation. Finally, when it looked as though the planned investigation might become a reality, someone hit upon teh idea of starting hearings on amendment proposals.

The strategists reasoned that the House would not be likely to undertake hearings on both the amendment and investigation proposals.

And it worked—for the time being, at least.

Political Announcement

We are authorized to announce the candidacy of Ward Yager for the ocice of Circut Court Judge, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 5, 1939.

We are authorized to announce Charles A. Pettit, of Williamstown, as a candidate as a member of the House of Representatives from Grant and Boone Counties, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, August 5, 1939.

In announcing my candidacy for Representative from Boone and Grant Counties and I promise that I do not intend to make a lot of promises which I cannot possibly fulfull. But I will, if elected, do my best to serve the people of these two counties and the state at a whole, to their best interests.

I will gladly cooperate with other representatives from northern Kentucky in an effort to get some recognition for our part of the state.

To you people who have troubles with roads and various other community problems, I will gladly do my best to assist you. I have been working for these things for several years and will ontinue to do so but if elected may have a better opportunity to be of value.

MORE WEAR FROM YOUR STOCKINGS

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

We've spent many an hour in our textile laboratory investigating the wearing qualities of many well-known brands of hosiery, to find out what you can do to make your stockings wear longer. "Wear sounds," large groups of active girls and women, have helped us verify our laboratory findings on stockings in actual use. Here are the several things we've learned which will help you lengthen the life of your stockings.

First, buy a good brand of hosiery. Before buying, plan your hosiery wardrobe carefully, and buy the correct weight of stocking for the occasion for which you will use it. You'll find the following weights suitable:

1 and 2-thread for evening wear
3-thread for afternoon or informal w
4-thread for street or business
7-thread for service and sportswear
10-thread for extra service

O! course, the very sheer stockings do not wear as well as the heavier ones. But then you will want to wear them on occasion for their beauty alone.

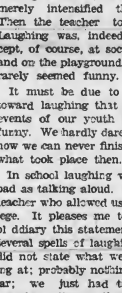
Buy at least 2 pairs of the same color at the same time. If one of each pair wears out, you will still have a whole pair left. Sometimes there is a price saving when 3 pairs are bought.

Be sure the linings of your shoes are smooth to prevent unnecessary wear. Rough eyelets or sharp-edged buckles may also cause snags and runs.

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

Put your stockings on properly. The best way is to first roll the leg of the stocking down and slip the foot through the roll into the toe. Then straighten the foot seam, and slowly unroll the stocking, smoothing it up over the leg with the finger tips and straightening the leg seam at the same time.

Don't wear garters after they have lost their elasticity. They should have plenty of stretch. The garter should always be clasped half-way down the welt or reinforced part of the stocking, never in the sheer part below the welt. Fasten garters while still seated in order to allow for knee action.



It is important, too, to buy the correct size and length of stocking. The size stocking to buy is the actual length of your foot in inches, from the back of the heel to the end of the toe, measured along the side of the foot.

The approximate length of stockings you require is from the point where you fasten your garters to the bottom of the heel, measured at the side. Variations in size of ankle, calf and top measurements make some difference in length requirements. The standard lengths for hosiery are 28 inches (short) 30 inches (average) and 32-33 inches (extra long).

Avoid contact with sharp or rough objects, such as rough finger or toe nails, hard callouses or corns, settings of rings, slivers of wood and rough places on chairs, and particularly desks, if you are an office worker. Short bristly hair on the legs may also injure the delicate silk thread in sheer stockings. Keep your toe nails smoothly pedicured. If you have dry skin on feet or legs, use a skin lotion on it as regularly as you do on your hands. If you are careful, many of the snags, pulled threads and runs which happen so quickly and are so disastrous, can be avoided.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

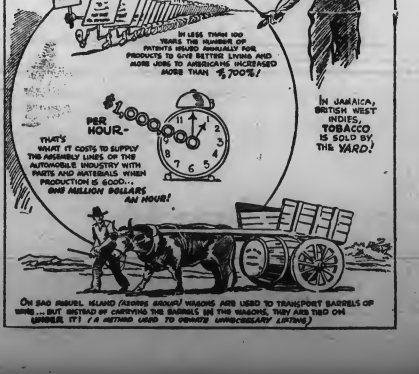
THE WICKEDNESS OF LAUGHTER

Today we laugh when we want to, at home or at school, and think little about it. In the more formal or more rigid days only the bad ones laughed; or so we were told. Consequently, things were funnier then than they are now. It took much more self-control to keep down a violent spell of laughing. Many devices were used, the common being holding the nose, which sometimes merely intensified the explosion. Then the teacher took a hand. Laughing was, indeed, wicked, except, of course, at social gatherings and on the playground, where things rarely seemed funny.

It must be due to this attitude toward laughing that many of the events of our youth seem now so funny. We hardly dared laugh then; now we can never finish laughing at what took place then.

In school laughing was almost as bad as talking aloud. It was a rare teacher who allowed us such a privilege. It pleases me to find in my ol ddiary this statement: "We had several spells of laughing today." I did not state what we were laughing at; probably nothing in particular; we just had the giggles, a prevalent disease then and sometimes now. Evidently the teacher had allowed us to laugh with impunity. Some of the little girls were victims of hysterical giggles. We said their tickle boxes got turned over. They laughed in a kind of nervous hysteria; we laughed at them. It is altogether possible that the teachers who called us to strict account for laughing had pleny of good argument on their sides.

The punishment for laughing at school was present and humiliating; at church we feared immediate and future wrath. The preacher, our parents, society in general, and then a fear of later retribution managed to keep us fairly quiet. Sometimes, though, human endurance gave out, and we cackled out as merrily as we might have done in our own homes, only to come to a sudden and unmsical halt when we discovered what we had done.



Sometimes I wonder whether our loud laughter in the fields and at social gatherings, often horse laughter, was not an outlet for more refined feelings that had been pent up too fiercely. While some of the things that used to tickle me until I was weak are still funny, most of them seem very commonpince and inane. Our sense of humor has been allowed to develop unfettered, so that laughter is no longer a stolen joy, with its punishment following just behind.

This same repression of humor may also account for the tendency to practical joking that was once more common than now. A rather drab life it was in the fields and woods, with only occasional opportunities for social life. How natural to scare some one, to play tricks on innocent children or unsuspecting older ones! If all the reputed haunted houses were properly inventigated, I would almost wager that they got their reputation from some mischievous boy who was probably afraid of scaring others, but who rejoiced at finding that he could create a legend or tradition in a community.

LIQUOR AGENTS SEIZE ANOTHER MOONSHINE STILL IN BOONE COUNTY

Federal officers from Covington, Monday seized one of the largest stills ever confiscated in Northern Kentucky, the apparatus having a capacity of 150 gallons. It was found by Safety Commissoner J. Mason Hawks, who accompanied Probition Agents, Correll, Walker and Wilson to a point near Constance, Ky., late Saturday in a house on a hill overlooking Constance, it is said with it, they charge, were 3,000 gallons of mash and 60 gallons of moonshine. Acording to the officers, the still was in operation when they appeared, though no one was about.

The newly organized Walton Ball Club in charge of Captain Matthews, went to Florence last Saturday afternoon to meet the club of that town. Matthews worked but 15 men during the game. Glinn doing the pitching. Score was 3 to 4 in favor of Florence club, a club of "Bloomer Girls" will play the local team on Walton grounds on next Thursday, May 11th. A large crowd is expected at the game.

Hybrid Corn Requires Careful Soil Preparation

CHICAGO.—The extra investment which farmers in the corn belt are making this year in hybrid seed will pay big dividends if growers will study the fertilizer requirements of their land and carry out a program of soil improvement.

In hybrid corn, farmers know that they have seed capable of yielding larger and higher quality crops. This ability to produce has been bred into the corn, but the stiffer stocks and better root systems will not develop unless conditions for a healthy growth are provided. No better insurance for a good corn crop can be taken than to make certain that the demands of high producing strains of hybrid are taken care of through adequate fertilization of the soil.

Undernourishment is one of the major causes of crop failure and crop losses, whether the corn grower is planting hybrid strains or open-pollenated varieties. Poorly nourished plants are more likely to be infested with fungus and bacterial diseases than healthy ones.

A plant stunted because of a lack of some soil nutrient needed for growth, may fail at maturity to produce an abundance of good seed or forage. Both quality and yield are thus adversely affected.

Corn gives tell-tale signs of distress when the proper plant food elements are missing. A light green or yellowish green color means that corn needs nitrogen. On good ground, corn with yellow leaves is usually the result of heavy rains that have leached out or diluted the available nitrogen. On better, richer soils, such corn will usually "green up" and produce a fair crop, if not later starved for some other nutrient such as phosphorus or potash.

On poorer soils the available supply of phosphorus is frequently so low that the plant becomes stunted and the development of a good root system is impossible. A phosphorus shortage may likewise show up at later stages of growth.

Though some soils have sufficient nitrogen to produce heavy foliage of a healthy dark green color, a shortage of potash will limit production both in quantity and quality.

It is possible before planting time to determine whether the soil is deficient in needed plant foods or whether the right kind and amount of fertilizer is being used. Agronomists at the state colleges or experimental stations are prepared to cooperate by providing informative material on the fertilizer needs of specific crops and soils and by analyzing samples of the farmer's soil to determine the presence or lack of essential nutrients.

WAGES PAID TO MEN IN 1937 TWICE PAID TO WOMEN

According to information received from Washington, D. C., by Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Social Security Board in Covington, Kentucky, women working during 1937 on industrial and commercial jobs covered by the old-age insurance provisons of the Social Security Act received an annual average wage of $523, as compared to an average of $1,027 for men, according to a survey of Federal old-age insurance wage accounts made public today by the Social Securit Board.

The number of women with earnings credited to their accounts was 8,251,036, or 27.4 percent of the total included in the study. The number of men for whom wages were reported was 21,906,658. The total wages paid to women, as reported by their employers, amounted to $4,335,445,432, while earnings reported for men totaled $22,469,920, 809.

The survey showed the average taxable wages paid to men and women for Kentucky were as follows: Male employees—294,028—amount of wages—$224,036,885; Female employees—80,332—amount of wages—$32,467,057.

The Follies Bergeres, direct from Paris, will be presented at the Golden Gate International Exposition on the Gateway.

COURIER-JOURNAL ASKS "WHERE'S THE MONEY?"

In a recent editorial, Kentucky's powerful and influential newspaper, the Lohisville Courier-Journal, reflects what apparently is the attitude of responsible Kentucky citizens on the subject of increased pensions, a higher school per capita and other social improvements.

"Mr. Brown asserts that he is 100 per cent in favor of the great social aims and accomplishments of our great leader, President Roosevelt." Well, so is this newspaper. It has, indeed, striven with all its might for New Deal objectives. It thinks $30 a month pensions would be fine, and so would be a $750,000 fund for teacher retirement, and minimum pay for teachers of $75 monthly. But where's the money?

"That is the nub of the question, and the Courier-Journal does not believe that the taxpaying public is going to be content with any such generality (again quoting Mr. Brown) as: 'We'll get the money where the money is.'

"In the circumstances, this phrase has to be peripatetic, in that it surries hither and yon and get nowhere."

While directed at Mr. Brown's platform, what the Courier-Journay says is applicable to all candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. Promises of huge expenditures without provison for additional revenue to take care of them are as worthless as a piece of Confederate currency after Sherman's march to the sea.

1110 BOONE HOMEMAKERS ATTEND DISTRICT MEETING IN NEWPORT

Homemakers from fourteen counties attended the annual Federation meeting Wednesday, April 26, in Newport. 110 homemakers represented Boone county at the meeting. Speakers on the program were Mrs. H. L. Crafton, Henderson county, President of the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers, Mrs. Sarah Holmes, assistant dean of women, University of Kentucky and Dr. Roberta Ma of China.

Campbell, Kenton and Boone counties served as hostesses to the 600 homemakers. The meeting was held in the First Baptist church of Newport. Lunch was served by three neighboring churches, St. Paul's Methodist church and Congregational church.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. J. A. Stevens, Director of the Bluegrass District. Community singing was led by Mrs. H. C. Robinson of Fayette county. Mrs. Albert Schabelle, president of the Campbell county homemakers, welcomed the the guests to the northern part of the state. The business meeting followed with Mrs. Earl Broaddus, Garrad county, reading the minutes. The following committee chairman gave reports—Citizenship, Mrs. T. L. Lloyd, Mason county; Publicity, Mrs. John Cox, Jr., Jessamine county and Speakers Bureau, Mrs. Graham Young Bourbon county. Dr. Roberta Ma, China, gave a report of conditions in China.

Mrs. Bluch Rich of Kenton county, led a panel discussion on "What a Homemaker can do to make Rural Life Satisfying." The following homemakers took part on the panel discussion; Mrs. West Dye, Lincoln County: Mrs. Will Tribble, Madison county; Mrs. John Combs, Jessamine County: Mrs. Sam Sleet, Boone County and Mrs. W. A. Brenegar, Clark County.

A vocal duet by Garrard county homemakers was the first on the afternoon program. Mrs. H. L. Crafton spoke on "Foundations", "The Homemaker in a Changing World" was the subject of Mrs. Mrs. Raymond Sayre's discussion. The meeting was adjourned after community singing.

Emory E. Smith, professor emeritus of Stanford University, is probably the only man who was connected with both the Midwinter Exposition of 1893 and the California World's Fair of 1939 in San Francisco.

Robert Young, famed film star, previewed Treasure Island just before the World's Fair of the West opened, and decided he'd spent a week at the Exposition to be able to see it all.

PROFITABLE CROP ROTATION LIES IN CAREFUL PLANNING

CHICAGO.—How to make crop rotation pay farmers more dividends in increased yields per acre and lowered production costs was explained by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"The key to successful rotation is careful planning," a report says. "If crop rotation had more definite beginnings and endings, farmers generally would do more planning at the start of a three, four or six year cycle, and they would be more likely to take stock of the results.

"In most rotation programs starting this spring corn will be the basic crop, largely because of the amazing production records of 'Hybrid' seed.

"In planning the rotation, the matter of fertilizer will be extremely important. Because of its high yield per acre, corn makes heavy demands on the plant food resources of the soil, particularly nitrogen.

"The only practical alternative to replenish the extra amounts of plant food removed from the soil is to use commercial fertilizer."

BALANCED DIET OF PLANT FOOD NEEDED BY GROWING CROPS

CHICAGO.—Growing crops need a balanced diet of plant food from the soil, the same as human beings or livestock need a balanced ration in their foods, a bulletin issued by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee points out.

"If certain plant food elements are missing from the soil, growing crops will develop weaknesses and a susceptibility to diseases," the bulletin declares.

"For the best crop yields and the rehabilitation of the soil, a careful balance of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash is necessary. Some soils require more of one element than another. Crops likewise vary in their fertilizer needs."

What analysis of commercial fertilizer is best for a farmer to use and how much he should apply will depend on a number of factors. The best way of finding out is to consult the soils and agronomy department of the state college and agricultural stations. They have information readily available and are eager to cooperate.

THE RESURRECTION MORNING

The Resurrection morning brings
Life and peace divine,
May I never forget Thee
O precious Savior mine
The light of my life—
My constant source of joy.
The child Jesus, the anointed Christ
The God-given boy.
The Resurrection morning,
The empty open grave
Gave proof that it was Jesus.
Who had made himself a slave.
The gloom of death he'd banished,
an the grave He'd robbed of dread
For living again He mocked.
The ones who thus thought Him dead.
The Resurrection morning,
The greatest day of all
Satan has lamentedit
Because it meant His fall
The Angels in the glory land
The souls of men redeemed
United to praise His name
Who eternally is the same.
The Resurrection morning
We butp artially comprehend
The pawer, glory and honor
And adding worlds on end
Is but a fait escription
Of its meaning length and scope
Of what I expect to learn of it
Which is my everlasting hope.

BROWN CAMP SEEKS FARM MAN FOR MANAGER

Aside from the Louisville development, the only major happening of the past week was the effort of the Brown-Rhea camp to secure the services of a prominent farm organization leader as state campaign manager.

This colum hears that the farm leader approached with the manager ship proposal turned down the offer. Another angle on the Brown-Rhea quest for a manager is said to be the immediate necessity of securing a state chairman, to act as a "front" for the organization.

Regardless of arguments for organization, it's extremely doubtful if Kentucky farmers are ready for unionization. Already on the Pacific coast and in neighboring Old Mexico farm unions have made their appearance with the result that organization there is a major problem in the agricultural setup.

Under the present arrangements, TLomas S. Rhea, the Russellville Gray Fox, is both the man-behind the scheues and also the "front". A smart manipulator and organizer, Tom Rhea is the prima donna in the camp of the Lexington attorney. Another familiar fugure who spends much time in Brown headquarters is the veteran Dr. Milton oBard, who gained political prominence years ago in his legislative fight to rip the State Board of Health. These the veteran Dr. Milton Beard who answers, but apparently the rrying need of the Brown headquarters is a "front" who fails from without the realm of practical politics.

KENTON COUNTY FARM NOTES

THE FARM GARDEN

By JOHN S. GARDNER
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Beets and Carrots. Both root crops, these can be described together. The soil should be fine and friabe, so that smooth roots may result. Fertility should be balanced; too much nitrogen as in fresh manure will cause them to "grow to top." If manure is used it should be balanced with superphosphate, or, if there is any doubt of fertility with high grade fertilizer, as 4-8-6 or 5-10-5. Superphosphate should be broadcast, one pound to each 50 suare feet of space, or sown where the rows are to be in a "ribbon" 12 inches wide, one pound to 50 feet. Complete fertilizer should be used in the same way, but at double these rates.

Seed should be sown in April or early May, in drills from 12 to 24 inches apart, one ounce of seed to 50 feet of row. Covering should be no deeper than one-half inch. The seedlings in each care should be thinned to stand 1 1-2 inches.

The best early beet is Crosby's Egyptian, and the carrot to use is Chantenay, for although this variety is a bit behind Early Orange or other extremely early ones, its shapeliness and color recommend it. Also, it is a splendid winter-keeper, sown in May, after which the weather and the soil become so warm, carrot seed sprouts with uncertainty.

Sweet Corn: Corn land must be rich, for to grow good corn, stalk growth should be lush. Stable manure is good to use, but better balanced with superphosphate, or a complete fertilizer at rates given.

The best early variety of semi-sweet corn is Early Adams, but those who want their sweet corn sweet should use Black Mexican. Next in season, and for "roasting ears," Pearl or Louisville Market or Paducah Market may be used. For really sweet corn, the new white Aunt Mary's or Stowell's Evergreen should be chosen, or the yellow kerneled Golden Cross Bantam, resistant to the root rot that so sorely afflicts the regular Golden Bantam. To be at its best, sweet corn should be pulled in the milk stage. In order to have it come at a splendid that the family can take care of it, plantings should be made every two weeks, enough to provide a two weeks' supply.

Beans. Although beans are considered a "warm" crop, the venture will pay to make the first planting by mid-April, using Red Valentine or Tennessee Greenpod. The land should be somewhat "poor"; certainly it should not be over-manured, for beans respond to too rich conditions by making splendid vines, but setting few beans. It is always well to supply phosphorus in superphosphate, as suggested above, or the same general fertilizers previously recommended may be used.

The seed bed should be deep and well prepared. The seed is sown in drills 24 to 36 inches apart, using one pound to 50 feet.

Beans, like corn, should be harvested at their prime. For that reason, successive plantings should be planted each time. Beginnig in May, the better stringless varieties, Stringless Greenpod or Full Measure should be the varieties. The plantsngis in June and July should be double those previously, to provide canning surpluses.

No discussion on beans would be complete without at least making mention of the Mexican beetle. Later, but in good time, its control will be discussed in full.

Soil Improvement Costs Less

An Investment in Soil Improvement.

CHICAGO. — Farmers now pay about 21 per cent less for fertilizer, compared with the pre-war price levels of 1910 to 1914, than they do for all other commodites used on the farm, according to a study compiled by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, based on statistics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"Fertilizer price levels today average about 99 per cent as high as they were in the pre-war days," says a bulletin summarizing the study, "whereas all commodities the farmer buys are 120 per cent of the 1910-1914 average.

"For instance, the cost of building materials is 150 per cent of the pre-war level. Farm machinery, not including tractors, is 160 per cent; clothing 126; food 107; and equipment and supplies 114 per cent.

"Since the low-ebb depression days of 1933 the prices of most commodities, including farm products and other things the farmer buys, has risen substantially. From 1933 to the fall of 1938, an increase averaging 22 per cent was recorded in the price of all commodities purchased for farm use. But farmers were paying only 9 per cent more for their fertilizer than they paid in 1933, U. S. Department of Agriculture figures indicate.

"Reason for the low level of fertilizer prices while other commodities have advanced is that research is being constantly carried on by fertilizer producers and the government to achieve better and cheaper methods of manufacture. These economies and improvements have been passed on directly to American farmers."

News dispatches from England indicate that Britain is taking another step in preparedness plans. The government is surveying and measuring all university and preparatory school buildings in order to speed up their conversion into military barracks. This step is considered highly significant, as Britain has never before made such detailed war preparations.

Eyes Make the Athlete, Sports Authority Finds

Continuing his assertion that good vision is a prime essential in athletic success, Mr. Kofoed says: "An athlete's legs may bog down under him, his arm lose its resiliency and his chin turn glassy. But he can still stagger through competition if his vision is all right. But—once he loses his keenness, he's done.

"Eyes, more than anything else, make a sport's star . . . perfect teamwork between eyes, brain and hand. But no matter how keen the mind or deft the hand, miracles of sport fall of achievement without perfect sight.

"Most famous athletes know how vital good eyesight is to them and go to great lengths to protect it. I know of ball players, for instance who won't read on trains or cars, because they want to avoid all possible strain.

52-POUND MUSKIE TAKEN FROM GREEN RIVER

The Division of Game and Fish has received a report of a muskie being caught in Green River, April 4, weighing 52 pounds.

According to records available, this catch is the largest ever made in Kentucky of the "fighting muskie.". Van Y. Greene, Morehead, Ky., held the record up to the present with a catch of 42 pounds, but this fis hexceeds that weight by ten pounds.

The fish was caught by Pat Stapher and Irvin Ragland, both of Elizabethtown, Ky. The specimen was caught near Greensburg and measured four feet and four inches in length.

Factory Machines Don Spring Hues

Chald up aother "streamlined idea" adopted by industry for greater efficiency. This time it ispastel shades for factory machines. According to reports received by the Better Vision Institute, several shbe manufacturing concerns have purchased machines whiche ar babyblue in color. Light orange and pea green are also being employed in connection with the making of steel.

These softer colors cut down on eyestrain, reduce glare, prevent accidents, increase efficiency and make for more congenial conditions of work, say leading employers.

Other restful shades used in this connection are orchid, Chinese pink, tea garden rose and California orange. The beneficial result obtained is two-fold. The subdued tones induce a feeling of clamness and release from nervous tension and irritability. And, since they are usually chosen to contrast with the materials manufactured, they impose less hardship on workers' seeing apparatus and make for speedier output.

LOUISVILLE POLITICS QUIET AFTER SCHOLTZ VICTORY

Mayor Scholtz's complete victory of last week in the fight to reorganize party machinery in Louisville left the situation here quiet. While the organization has adopted a neutral policy in the gubernatorial race, this does not preclude party leaders affiliated with the group from assisting the candidate of their choice and without question most of them are Johnson-minded.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Farm Careers For Youth

YOUNG people who are emerging into our crowded economic fields would do well to look toward the farm as a means of livelihood and a full and satisfactory way of life, according to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. When depressions come, hundreds of citizens leave the cities and go back to rural areas in order to live. This mute fact seems to indicate that the stability of the farm is preferable, in the time of disaster, to the insecurity of a wage-earner in the city.

Elsanor Roosevelt, America's much-traveled first lady, analyzes the problem in the May issue of Cosmopolitan magazine in an article entitled: "Security Begins Beyond the City Limits." She adds a plea for education along cultural and recreational lines which will compensate farm dwellers for the lack of readymade entertainment offered by cities. Mrs. Roosevelt also discusses opportunities for financial success in farming, cites developments in agricultural methods, new markets and experiments in the industrial use of farm products which will provide year-around employment and new avenues of profit for agriculturists.

"It is possible to have as much culture in the country as in any city and more wholesome community life and amusement, but it requires more personal effort and better training," Mrs. Roosevelt declares. "We must see that education is interpreted in a broader way than in the past. It is absolutely vital that people living in rural areas have access to books of all kinds and learn to enjoy reading. With the radio there is now the possibility of teaching appreciation of good music and of developing participation in community music projects. Federal art projects, music projects, theatre projects, murals and sculptures all over the country have laid foundations for varied enjoyments which can be built up in rural areas."

Mrs. Roosevelt does not hesitate to touch on the aspects of rural life which are definitely in need of change. Chief among these is the problem of health and nourishment. The high mortality rate among country mothers and babies due to the lack of competent medical attention, is marked. Education regarding health and diet habits for growing children needs widespread dissemination. In the country where it is possible to raise a wide variety of fresh vegetables, fruits and dairy products, children are often undernourished due to pure ignorance on the part of their parents. Such education can be accomplished.

In urging rural life, Mrs. Roosevelt also urges the development of home-spirit in children who live in rural localities . . . a sense of belonging and having roots in a particular community, a responsibility for the present and the future of that place. Children are always interested in the traditions, legends and histories of their homes and early instruction in these things will build a lasting loyalty to a locale. Such loyalties will often overshadow the tinseled lues of big cities later on.

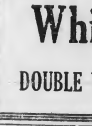
"One of the means I saw employed to inculcate this feeling was a project worked out by a progressive school in a rural community," she writes. "There happened to be a log cabin available for the use of the children and they were encouraged to restore this cabin which dated back a hundred years or more. They made it fairly livable with things they collected from their families and their neighbors, of the sort used in the cabin when it was originally built. They gave little plays which depicted the early life of a family in that cabin when the Indians roamed the countryside and the land was being cleared and tilled for the first time. In this way the children learned something of the past and what it had cost their ancestors to establish a community in the wilderness, thus acquiring a respect for the work accomplished and a sense of responsibility toward carrying it on satisfactorily."

Mrs. Roosevelt does not suggest in "Security Lies Beyond the City Limits" that we merely go back to the farm. Instead she insists that we bring the farm forward where it can compete with the city as a way of life.

RADIO COMMENTATOR TO LECTURE AT U. OF K.

Paul Sullivan, widely known news commentator on the staff of radio station WHAS, Louisville, will be a lecturer before the radio education course to be presented at the University of Kentucky during the first session of this year's summer chool. It has just been announced by University authorities.

The course, entitled "Problems of Radio Education," and sponsored jointly by the University of Kentucky and radio station WHAS, is intended to train school teachers who have as part of their duties the productio and arranging of school broadcasts.



Besides lectures by members of the WHAS and University staffs, covering details of the present radio set-up, each students will have opportunities to prepare original comunities under supervision, cast them, rehearse them, and finally actually broadcast them.

CHANDLER-HOPKINS MEET AT KEENLAND TRACK

Two prominent figures in last year's Kentucky senatorial battle, Governor Albert B. Chandler and former WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, met accidentally at the Keenland race track near Lexington Thursday afternoon. "Happy" greated the ex-WPA head with a smile, and a brisk conservation followed about horses racing and fishing.

Following the 1936 senatorial primary, Hopkins was under fire by the Senate investigating committee for activity of his department in the Kentucky fight.

With girlish inquisitiveness, members of Girl Scout Troop No. 41 holding weekly meetings in a Cincinnati church asked their scout-leaders to arrange an educational tour to know their community better. Using all means of conveyance from autos to railroads the girls made a 40-mile "get acquainted" tour of Greater Cincinnati. Like hundreds of other civic, fraternal and school groups they visited the new bottling plant of The Coca-Cola Bottling Works Company, one of the Queen City's show-places and a model for the industry. On a plant tour from "stem to stern" they saw all processes and operations conducted in a healthful, spotlessly clean environment, causing one awed scout-girl to remark: "Is it always this clean here? Assured by the guide that such was the inviolate rule, the little miss declared: "It sure is nice and clean out here."

THE WAR ON INSECTS

By John S. Gardner,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

To call insect control "war" is not being extravagant, for certainly the gardener may consider himself the attacted party, albeit the insects hold no real rancor against him, interests clash, as they do in this instanace, the word is "war."

It is not the purpose of this discussion to give detailed direitions for stopping all the garden insects, for that is so much better done in Kentucky Extension Circulars, 257, 262 and 309, copies of which may be obtained free from county agents or by writing the College of Agriculture, at Lexington. Rather, here are to be given the principles that apply.

There are two kinds of insects, those that suck plant sap and those that consume plant tissue. Those in the former group indicate their presence by stunted plants or curled under leaves. The leaf-eaters, on the other hand, make holes in the leaves or consume them completely. Thus, indentifying either kind of insect is easy.

For the sap-suckers, only one thing can be done, to spray or dust with material that corrodes their bodies or that releases paralyzing gas against them. Such material may be tobacco, rotenone or pyrethrum. Homemade "tobacco tea" may be used, or nicotine sulphate in extract from which to make spray or ready-mixed dust may be had. The same is true of pyretrum.

The control of the leaf-eaters is quiet as simple. It must be obvious that any insect that consumes foliage must take poison if it is put where the insect feeds. Most of these insects consume theentire leaf, but the Mexican bean beetle must be humored to the extent of applying the control material on the under side of the foliage.

For the most part, the control for leaf-eating insects is arsenic in some form, but where the tender foliag is involved, as in the instance of beans and cucumbers,appropriately gentle arsenates must be used. The circulars indicate the

One more general rule remains to be set down, which is to begin in or rather, to start control when the insect itself starts. Again the Mexican bean beetle serves as an example. One dare not walt until the leaves are cut in designs similar to those in lace curtains, but the control material should be spread when the first clusters of eggs appear so that the insects newly hatched (at which stage they are most easily and quickly killed) need not go far in any direction to get a killing dose. The cucumoer beetle, too, esrves to drive home this point. The time for the gardener to start campaigning in when the first cracks in the soil appear, made by the first seedlings, for there is where enter the adults, to lay eggs which hatch out the larvae that do the most serious damage to all the vine crops, damage that may not become apparent until weeks after. The same is true of the sap-suckers. The gardener may not walt until his cabbage, for example, is crusted over with cabbage lice but he should begin spraying or dusting wtille their number is still small.

To sum up, then, this is the rule. Identify, early, the kind of insect by the nature of the injury it does, and apply immediately even at egg-laying time, the appropriate control in the proper way.

Survey Shows Corn Belt Farmers Favor Fertilizer

CHICAGO.—How corn growers themselves feel about the subject of fertilizer was revealed in a survey of representative farmers in thirteen corn belt states.

A total of 17,195 farmers were interviewed about their experience in fertilizing corn. Of this number, 14,865 reported they had used fertilizer. Of these, 13,229 reported earlier maturity of their corn as a result.

Better market quality was reported by 12,343 farmers, which meant better feeding quality as well.

Out of the 14,865 farmers, 14,131 said that fertilizer gave corn a quicker start. Increases in the value of their crop as a result of using fertilizer ranging from $4.01 to $15.54 per acre, were reported by these 14,825 farmers.

ONLY ONE-SIXTH OF FARM ACREAGE IS FERTILIZED

CHICAGO.—Only one out of every six acres planted to farm crops in the United States annually is fertilized in any one year, yet the increased production from the fertilized land amounts to about 15 per cent of the nation's total crop output, according to a survey made by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Less than 60,000,000 acres of America's 360,000,000 annual crop acreage are treated with fertilizer every year," the survey sets forth. "Consumption for the entire country is about five pounds per acre.

"If America should stop using fertilizer, it would be necessary to farm at least 30,000,000 additional acres at a cost of about $550,000,000 annually. Fortunately, the necessity of an ever-increasing program of soil conservation and improvement on American farms through the use of commercial fertilizers is being more and more recognized.

"Through the efforts of agricultural colleges, state experimental stations and county agents, farmers are becoming increasingly aware that an investment in nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash will pay valuable dividends in replenished fertility."

AT CONEY ISLAND

Glamorous Kathleen Lane is the featured vocalist with Bunny Berigan and His Orchestra, coming to Moonlite Gardens, Coney Island, Cincinnati, Saturday and Sunday nights, May 6 and 7.

Bunny Berigan, "the miracle man of swing," will bring his famous dance orchestra to Moonlite Gardens, Coney Island, Cincinnati, during the first "Pre-View Days" of the season, Saturday and Sunday, May 6 and 7.

To those who like to dance in the modern manner, the name of Bunny Berigan is just about tops. That's why an announcement that Bunny Berigan, his trumpet and his orchestra, will be featured in Moonlite Gardens, Coney Island, Cincinnati on the first two "Pre-View Days", Saturday and Sunday, May 6 and 7, has aroused enthusiastic interest among dance devotees.

Berigan has won the sobriquet, "the miracle man of swing" and he has surrounded himself with an aggregation of young "fighting men" as he calls them, who know the full significance of "jam sessions" and play for sheer love of playing. Glamorous Kathleen Lane is his featured vocal soloist.

"Pre-View Days" at Coney Island are scheduled for the two week-ends preceding the opening of Coney's regular season on Saturday, May 20. Glen Gray and the Casa Loma Orchestra will be featured on Sunday night, May 14.

The "Pre-View Days" are intended to give Coney patrons an advance idea of the new attractions, as well as the old favorites, that will be available for amusement seekers during the coming season. The park has been thoroughly overhauled, repainted, redecorated and beautified, and new devices installed.

Moonlite Gardens, Coney's palatial summer ballroom, this been enlarged to add approximately 80 per cent to its table and seating capacity.

Foremost among the new amusement devices is the Stratoship, in which patrons can get all the thrills of stunt flying without actually leaving the ground. Rocket ships have been introduced on the airplane ride. Patrons will also find many other pleasing attractions.

Inasmuch as the steamer Island Queen will be away from its home port until the opening of the regular season, May 20, Coney can be reached only by automobile over U. S. Route 52, or by buses leaving Cincinnati's Fountain Square at frequent intervals throughout every hour of the day.

Thousands of Californians donned the garm of the six-shooter era of the Old West for a week to celebrate opening of the World's Fair of the West on Treasure Island.

Kentucky Politics

With Colonel Matt Winn's Kentucky Derby scheduled for Saturday, King Horse this week is stealing the limelight from the state political arena. Louisville's hotels are already packed to capacity and Derby visitors are arriving in the Kentucky metropolis by the thousands. Even politicians are forgetting campaign problems as the Derby Day spirit invades the headquarters of both camps. So from now until Monday, politicos are likely to be burning the midnight oil trying to figure whether to invest their two bucks on Technician, El Chico, Steel Heels, or some other flying knight of the turf scheduled to go postward in the Bluegrass classic.

In keeping with the Derby season, Wilmer G. Mason, the Cincinnati Enquirer's Kentucky political comment tor, lists the following "form" on the two principal contenders in this summer's gubernatorial derby:

"Keen Johnson—Favorite, but carrying top weight."

"John Y. Brown—In new hads; superior mudder.

TOM COOK DIES TUESDAY MORNING

The Town of Walton was deeply shocked to day when it was learned that Tom Cook, age 31, had suddenly passed away at the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Chapmans, of Locust street, this city, Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock.

It was known that Tom had n ot been in the best of health for some time, but it was not thought that the trouble was serious at the time. He had been resting at the home of Mrs. Chapmans for two weeks hoping that he could return to work in a short time. Calling the family, Tom told them that he was feeling cold and in a few short moments he had passed away.

To those who knewTom, he was very kind and generous and his passing will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

He was a part of this community and his work in the church of his faith will be greatly remembered by al who came in contact with him, allway ready and willing to lend a helping hand, never a deed to great or to small for him to undertake and a willing worker at any occupation undertaken by him.

Tom was employed by the L. & N Railroad Company, whose trains run daily through this city. Stationed at Linden, he had been onthe job about 8 months when death called him to that Land Beyond, where he will be greeted by the Greatest of Conductors of them all Who will beckon him to come rest his sweary soul in that Realm of Eternal Bliss.

He leaves to mourn his passing: hiswidow, Mrs. Lucille Cook and little son, Tommy Glenn Cook; his mother Emma Cook, aunt, Mrs. Violet af South Walton and a host of friends and relatives.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday afternoon at 2:00 'oclock at the Walton Baptist Church. Rev. Alford will conduct the services, assisted by Rev. Brown and Johnson Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of arrangements.

TO THE CITIZENS OF BOONE COUNTY

I hereby announce as a Candidate for the Democratic Nomination for the 15th Judicial District composed of Boone, Carroll, Gallatin Grant and Owen Counties, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary to be held August 5, 1939.

I am a graduate of the State College at Bowling Green, Kentucky, where I worked my way thru that school by doing various kinds of work. I served seven years as principal of some of the best High Schools in the State, two years being at Mason, Kentucky and two years being at Mason, Kentucky and two years at Campbellsburg, Kentucky. I was admitted to the Bar in 1927, and was elected and served two terms as county Attorney of Grant County, winning the last nomination by more than 900 majority.

A member of the Williamstown Baptist Church,the Williamstown Masonic Lodge, the Grant County Farm Bureau and the Williamstown Rotary Club. I am married and have threechildren.

If nominated and elected, as I believe I will be, I will discharge the duties of the office fairly and impartially and to the best of my ability.

The District is a large one, being composed of five good counties, however, I am planning to make an effort to see you personally before the Primary, but whether I see you or not, I will appreciate any assistance you may give me.

Trusting that I may have your support and influence. I am,

Yours truly,

R. L. Vincent

MOTHERS' DAY

Of all the special days that we Americans celebrate, Mother's Day stands along as the most glowing tribute to one whoes acheavements out shines any of our national heros.

Toiling, sacrificing from morning until night so her children might have the good things of life and be brought up in the right way.

Her brows were narrowed with worry, and her hands were hardened with work, her heart torn between joy and sorrow, she toils on, no deed to small, no task to great for those she bore, that she might give to the world some offering for the good of mankind.

And what shall be her reward! For those who's mothers are gone, Attending one of the churches will be one of the greatest tribute you can award.

Her hair of gray shall become a crown of gold, the tears she shed shall fall as diamonds, and the old worn out dress she wore shall become as shining raiment. The old rocking chair by the fire place shall be her throne and the old cob pipe will be a scpter with which she shall rule the world of motherhood with her tender care and loving kindness.

FIRE DESTROYES THREE HOMES AT DRY RIDGE

They Were Homes of Mrs. Anna Lindsey, Charlie Stephenson and Archie Crumble . . . . . .

72-year-old Grant county widow Mrs. Anna Lindsey, Bucktown, near Dry Ridge, and her son was burned three small frame houses were destroyed by fire and several others damaged when flames swept thru the tiny community early Sunday.

The fire started in the Lindsey home when a coal oil stove exployed as Mrs. Lindsey was preparing breakfast. Following the fire Mrs. Lindsey was removed to St. Elizabeth Hospital where her condition Monday was reported to be serious. She suffered severe burns on the face arm and body.

According to Dry Ridge authorities, the fire was discovered by a neighbro who called to Claude Lindsey, 50, a son. He ran into the house and found the entire kitchen in flames, his mother lying on the flood ad carried her from the building.

Before he or neighbors had time to remove furniture the fire had spread to the homes of Charles Stephenson and Archie Crumble. Their homes, were destroyed, too.

The Dry Ridge and Williamstown fire departments were summoned and kept the flames from destroying other homes, although fire broke out in nearby buildings and a barn across the road.

Water was obtained from a cistern of a new school nearby.

Mr. Lindsey was dismissed after treatment at the Covington hospital He was burned on the face, hands and arms. A nephew of the family was not at home at the time.

Tatal loss was estimated to be more than $2,500. The Stephensons and the Crumbles managed to save a portion of their funiture.

VERONA NINE HAVE OPEN 1939 SEASON

The Verona baseball nine opened their 1939 season by entertaining the Brayville nine at Verona ballpark last Sunday. The game got off too a good start when McClure retired the first three men to face him. The Verona team then took their turn at the plate, with Vest starting off with a double a single by Chapman, which sent Vest in to score the first run of the game. Successive hits by Petty, Carrol and Cluster accounted for two more runs before the side could be retired.

The Verona team held a close check on the visitors throughout the game, due to the accurate pitching of McClure and the inspired feeling of his teammates. McClure struck out six of the opposing players and made the hit where he wanted them to.

Hits Scored

The highlights of Sunday's game were two triples, one by Petty and one by Chapman. Several other hits were made, such as a double by Arnold and a single by Ryan.

One of the boys who played left field last season for Verona has signed up this year with Crescent Springs, however, Verona has secured the services of an able player to take his place of the one left vacant.

A game will be played at the same park next Sunday and it is hoped that a good attendance will be on hand to give the local boys their support.

SUCCESSFUL REVUE

The Kiddie Novelty Revue, staged each year by the talented pupils of Mrs. W. J. Crouse, was presented with great success last Friday evening at the New James theatre.

A large crowd was in attendance and the show was enjoyed by all present.

Heads Democrat Club

EUGENE MOSLEY

Eugene Mosley, of Louisville, who will head the state-wide organization of young Democrats for Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson in his campaign for the party gubernatorial nomination has for many years been one of the outstanding young Democratic leaders in the state.

While still a student at law school Mosley became president of the Young Men's Democratic League, forerunner of the Young Democratic Clubs of Kentucky. He held the post as president of the League until 1933, when he was elected president of the newly organized state group of Young Democratic Clubs of America for the district composed of Kentucky, Arkansas, Missouri and Mississippi.

Young Mosley was born in Trimble County in July, 1913, the son of Eugene Mosley, Sr., and Mrs. Effie Joyce Mosley. His father for 20 years served as county attorney of Trimble County and his mother at the present time is a member of the Democratic State Central and Executive Committee from the Fifth Congressional District.

He received his early education in Trimble county schools, graduating from the Bedford High School Te then entered the the University of Louisville and later the Jefferson School of Law from which he was graduated in 1929.

Since his graduation from Law School and admisson to the bar, Mosley has engaged in the practice of law in Louisville. He married Miss Elizabeth Smith, of Bardstown, shortly after his graduation from school. They have two children. Mosley resides in Louisville, where he maintains law offices.

Collins - Young

Miss Etta Lewis Collins of Ewing, a teacher in the New Haven School for the last two years, and (Bud) Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Young of this city, were married Saturday, May 6.

They motored to Carrollton Saturday evening, accompanied by Miss Patricia Richel, Miss Lucille Doan, Mr. Jack Howard, Mr. Sculve and Mr. DeShea McElroy. They were married at the home of Rev. Calvin Ribble, Christian minister of Carrollton, Ky.

The county ACP and county agent's office will be closed on Saturday afternoon beginning next Saturday, May 13th and carrying thru August. The office will also open at 7:30 a. m. central time and close at 4:00 p. m. central time.

INVESTIGATION

Removal of the body of Randolph Elliott, 2, Hebron, to Erlanger was made Wednes day as Frank Coppock, Jr., Hamliton county, Ohio, coroner, continue a probe into the Kentuckian's death.

Police said there was a wound in his right temple and a .22 caliber pistol lying beside him. Though police said the wound apparently was self-inflicted, they could find no motive for the act. The remains are at the Philip Taliaferro funeral home, Erlanger, pending funeral arrangements.

Elliott, police were told returned from a party to go on duty about 11 a. m. Tuesday. He asked the man he was to relieve for his key to the desk drawer, then took a pistol from it. Later, the other attendant returned to call Elliott, whom he supposed had fallen asleep, and found him dead. The attendant did not recall hearing a shot.

AUTO MISHAP

Misfortune befall Mrs. Rena Becker Respess, 50, Dixie Highway, Erlanger, Ky., in Covington, Ky., late Saturay, while her husband, Rome Respess, well-knwn horse breeder and racing stable owner, was in Louisville attending the Kentucky Derby.

Patrolman Richard Harlow was told that the boy backed into the street between two parked automobiles and was struck. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital.

The youth said at the hospital he did not know his address in Ludlow, as his family had moved Friday from 123 East Eleventh Street, Covington. Police were attempting to locate his parents.

Mrs. Respess's daughter, Mae, was riding with her when the accident happened. The woman was cited on a technical charge of improper driving and told to appear in Covington Police Court Monday.

CONSERVE GAME IN BOONE COUNTY

The time is at hand for the bird and rabbit breeding season. Those who hunt or kill our fastly diminishing wildlife during this period should remember that even thought it is possible to evade the law and kill them during this season, it is the unpardonable crime of sportsmanship.

In days gone by, game of all kinds were tbundant in this section of Kentucky. As the years passed, it was killed at all times of the year, and often needlessly. Because no care was taken in the killing of game birds and animals, there is now a scarcity of birds in this section, compared to what were once here. Likewise, the supply of rabbits, possums, coons and squirrels have been greatly diminished.

If we are to have any type of game left in years to come, steps will have to be taken now to preserve it. Everyone will not consider this viewpoint and those who don't should be convinced that this is the case Even those of us, who were in this section ten years ago, can remember when birds were plentiful and when game was beter in Boone county than any other sections of Kentucky. Now, it is necessary to go to other states, and other sections of Kentucky to get a full bag limit after the first few days of the fall hunting season.

If care is taken in hunting, and during the breeding season and only in the right season, with a few years the supply would be replenished and there would be ample sport throughout the fall hunting season. The State Fish and Game Department is doing its part by raising and distributing game birds and the sportmen must likewise do their part by adhering to the strict letter of the laws, governing the killing of game. It is to their interest to do so, and a little thought over this matter will do more to stop illegal hunting than all the fines in the world could do.

Much has been written of friendship. Poets, philosophers, and historians have eulogized it in the past, and aspiring writers of today continue to find in it a copious subject. It lends itself to almost every form of writing, poetry, essay—and editorials.

Friendship is built by adjustment to personalities. It is not created by a simultaneous flare of affectionate understanding between two people who are meeting for the first time. Even though we sometimes feel that we have known a new acquaintance for a year, we hardly ever unburden our soils to them at the initial meeting, regardless of the novelists' opinion. The element of time enters into almost every true friendship.

But if time is important, proximity is doubly so. Proximity occasions mutual sharing of the joys and sorrows that are met in the natural course of existence. It makes recognition of faults and acceptance or rejection of them inevitable. So essential are these two elements to friendship that few friendships exist without them.

Back in our school days it probably seemed that the conditions whic hexisted there were the the nearest to the ideal of time and promity that could be found Meeting other friends at school, church or club once a week has a lot in common to keep this friendships in good standing.

Once a friend is made, it is not any easything to estrangle him. But we should not expect perfection from those we choose as our friends. No man exists without imprefections, and it is the love for a person and his imperfections that is friendship. We like ourselves regardlese of our faults. Let us accord this same tolerance to others.

THE AMERICAN MERCHANT

The American merchant has given the American people the best retail service in the world. A typical small-town store in this country, dealing in food, hardware, drugs, drygoods or anything else, offers a far wider selection of goods, of far better quality, than a typical store in any other land. This goes for single-unit as well as multiple-unit merchandising.

Equally important, first-class service hasn't involved high price. In the typical store, costs have been cut to the bone. Centralizing buying has reduced handling and distributing expense. Big turnover has made it possible to earn a satisfactory gross profit of a very small unit profit. The result from the consumer's point of view, is more goods for less money, and a higher standard of living forthe family.

Economists, consumer groups, newspapers, government officials and other have been pointing out that our American merchants should be encouraged to the full in this trend. Increased consumption of the produce offarmandfactoryi sthekey toin crea sed.ooce duce of farm and factory is the key to increased production, an increased national income, increased employment—and eventual prosperity. And incresed conconsumption is almost purely an economic matter. The bulk of American families buy all they can afford. When prices go up, they buy less. When down, they buy more.

Under a free competitive system, every merchant tries to out do the merchant next door. He lowers prices when he can. What that is impractical, he offers additional services. He increases his advertising, and betters his displays. And the whole community profits. So does the merchant himself, who finds more and more customers entering his door—and taking more and more goods away with them when they leave.

Of late years we have had a legislature epidemic of laws which in one way or another curb competition, reduce the general standardof living. But recently enthusiasm for such laws seems to have considerably cooled. Most of us have come to realize that one wins on the long run when we put laws in the path of proforce merchandising cost to rise, and thus tend to gress in any field.

GOING BY CAR? THEN HERE ARE SOME TIPS

Some several million motorists will be off on automobile tours. But not all will have the good time they expect. Headaches, backaches, and graif awaits many of them, Yet Paul W. Kearney, in the current Rotaran Magazine, indicates that these anoyances can be cut to a minimum by heeding a few commonsense rules. Here is a condensed list of his do's and dont's for mortists:

2. Stop now and then for a rest. Play catch or hang by your hands from a tree limb.

3. Take an emergency can of gasoline. One and a half million motorist ran out of gas last year.

4. Avoid excessive fatigue. If you must drive when fagged out, reduce speed and use extra caution.

5. Take along duplicate car keys, but let someone beside the driver carry them.

6. Carry a tire guage. When driving on a hot day, check tire pressures.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Then and Now, When I say then I refer to how I obtained my education compared with the boys and girls of today. I lived on a Muddy Creek farm in Madison County Kentucky and walked three miles to school. Part of the way was up one of the rockiest roads in that part of the country. Our school was in an old hard-shelled Baptist church that had stood for more than 230 years and it is well preserved today as any school house or church in Kentucky. We had no janitor and the boys and girls took turns at keeping the school and church clean. We had no gymnasiums or physical instructors or taxes for extra bills of today We got all the extra exercise we needed by walking to and from school playing ball and marbles, the girls jumped rope and played other games. We had teachers who were not only good teachers but good disciplinarians. If there was any bad language or fighting the teacher would settle it with a rattan. I never heard a girl use a vulgar or profane word in all my school days. Some may say those were old fogey days and that, the scholars were back numbers, I challenge any school anywhere to furnish more good citizens, more good housewives than there were in my Kentucky home country school that I attended, which laid great stress on boys and girls becoming good citizens. I have been in continual contact with children, boys and girls all my life; I fail to see any improvement in the fundamentals of education that the little red school house teachers taught.

As we are losing the small school houses, we are losing the independent initiative, individuality of the scholars. Too much merging in any form is not the best for the masses. Instead of the bays and girls walking to school and putting forth their best efforts, they are being hauled in busses like stock, subject to accidents, hundreds being killed annually. I know of a family of children that live only three-quarters of a mile from the school and will not walk regardless of whether they have done their work. The people are giving beyond the limit of expenses, school buildings and extra insructors that are a burden to the parents who pay the bills.

I may be considered a pessimist or a knocker. Not so. I am in favor of education. Some say we are over doing it with so many side issues. My version is that we need more practical horse sense education and not so much theory at nunecessary expenses. I have always stood for public improvement of all kinds, but the time has come when taxpayers must economize and count the cost before heaping the taxation higher upon themselves. What ds true of government, both state and local. We are going too fast and loose and extravagantly.

By JAMES PRESTON

A neval idead has been advanced at the Capitol.

It is that anyone who has anything to do with getting the United States involved in war must do one of two things:

He must either serve in the front line trenches, or

He must stay in bed for the duration of the war.

A Congressman has introduced a bill to tnis effect. Of coures, there is no likeinhood of its being enacted but it does point up the seriousness of what war means to a people.

Millions are still alive in America who remembered the last war. Those heatless, meatless wheatless days are nothing to the sacrifices of what wa' today would mean.

Newspaper stories tell of the steps two other great Democracies are taking to prepare. Sadly enough these steps directly tend to turn the Democracies overnight into totalitarstates.

One of the big democracies is even goin so far to arrange to appoint 12 regional commissioners and that sounds too much like the Commissar of Communism to suit Americans. These commissioners would be virtual regional dictator. Theywould take over the function of all local authorities that means local courts and local police.

Under their control the freedom of industrial enterprice, the freedom of even the smallest business would be regulated. In war the state—not the individual—comes first. And under the American Constitution the idividual comes first.

In the present crisis no foreign nation has injured a single hair on the head of an American. Thus, the United States has nt reason to fight anybody. It is just because of this that Congress is debating neutrality legislation so thoroughly. Congress wants a law that will prevent any American from being injured.

This and other things probably will protract the current session. In addition to neutrality it appears that the administration will insist on reorganizing governemnt departments before adjournment.

There also are unconfirmed rumors of more national defense legislation. Maybe it will be weeks now before Congressmen can go rime—and they had hoped to get away early this year.

ARE EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

In the midst of hearings on the proposals to change the National Labor Relations Act, and at about the time the NLRB was defending itself as a "'fair" and"open-minded"board the following news item appeared in Wasrington papers under a Chicago dateline:

"Council for the NLRB told the Seventh U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today that the board trial examinters do not always fell its necessary' to read all the evidence in a complaint before issuing a 'cease and desist, order."

A certain businessman, incidentally, is looked upon by some members of the Monopoly investigating committee as somewhat of a hero. He was a witness recently before the committee, and remarked during the rearing that the acoustics in the Senate caucus room were bad, and that spectators could not hear the proceedings. He suggested that the committee let an engineer study the problem. Result was that another business concern loaned its engineers and now the room has an up-to-date amplification system and everybody can rear the proceedings.

$50,000,000 FOR BATTLESHIP

It costs the United States approximately $50,000,000 to build a modern battleship for the Navy. The first United States fleet was comprised of eight vessels costing but $134,333. They were bought and fitted out for that sum of the beginning of the Revolutionary war.

The first transcontintinal automobile run, made in 1903, took more than two months. Today, it can be made in a few days.

SCRAPBOOKS

Today I received from the mother of one of my students an old scrapbook, made three quarters of a century ago by a boy who later became a famous editor. I have been turning through it, reading o bit here and there, and trying to recreate the time and the boy. And that brings up the whole question of scrapbooks.

Reading matter was scarce, as you all know, when some of us were young. Books were passed around from house to house, so that a single volume had often had half a hundred readers. Those who could could not read very well listened to others read aloud. I got my first love for poetry in that fashion and heard older people read English and American classics long before I knew A from B. Not many people could afford to buy books outright. The scrapbook became a substitute, a sort of home-made one, for books. From the weekly newspapers and the few cheap magazines we received we saved such poems or stories or pictures or jokes as struck our fancy, laying them by for a later day when we would make a scrapbook.

The scrapbook, in my case, at least, was largely a matter of winter work. when I was shut indoors with a cold or on the long winter nights around the fireplace. I still have several of these home-made books and others I have seen show a startling lack of arrangement or choice. The dullest things that took our eyes were given as much attention as genuinely valuable things.

Many ofthes old scrapbooks have assume genuine historical value for they have kept alive material that would otherwise be lost. Libraries that attempt to preserve valuable documents often prize highly these unassuming records of things and times long gone. These scrapbooks become, thus, a sort of unplanned, unbiased history of long past event.

I just turnedthrough one I made in 1902 and have found more than a hundred standard poems that would be in any inclusive anthology of American and English poetry. Besides these, there are several hundred poems that might be called minor poems, good at the time they were written but now largely forgotten. I mention this scrapbook in detail to remind you that the newspapers used to feature poetry, some of them having a double column once a week. That is where I got many of my gems. Newspapers today would feel somewhat cheap to print on their editorial page a poem that has become a part of our heritage; thus time passes.

Not every one who planned a scrapbox were preserved all the valuables until they become yellow with age. I have visited in some quaint old homes on the outskirts of the Fidelity neighborhood in which I was entertaine,d really so, by being shown the poems, storie, joke, pictures, cartoons that had never taken form. Treasured up for years, these bits printing opened the big world to people who probably never wandered twenty miles beyond the hills by which they were surrounded.

FISH AND GAME

While there are a number of food fishing streams in the Western section of Kentucky the anglers find most of their sport in ponds or lakes Most of the land-locked bodies of water range larger than our ponds but are too small to be classed as lakes.

The small lakes they should be termed, are located mostly in Ballard, Christian, Caldwell, Lyon, Marshall, Hopkins, McCracken, and Calloway counties. They are stocked mostly with bass, newlights, catfish crappie and breem.

Liberty Lake, three miles east of Princeton has 80 acres of water and has a good variety of fishing. Lake Clough, near Eddyville and in the city limits of Kuttawa, has 42 acres of excellent fishing water Maple Sink, near Dycusburg in East Critten county has 225 acres of water enclosed within its shore line.

Lock Medry Lake, which has 170 acres of water surface, is located outside the city limits of Earlington. This lake is owned by the Utilities company but is open to the public ing. The officials stated that there was an overbundance of carp in this pool of water.

In the northern Section of Chrisian county and the eastern section of Caldwell County near Dawson Springs, is located the Princeton Game Refuge, owned by the Soil Consedvation Service of the Federal Government which takes in 13,000 acres of timberland. A dam has been built within this refuge and as a result of its construction, a lake covering 60 acres has been formed.

On the shores of this lake will be held the shooting and bait casting contests by the League of Kentucky Sportsmen who conven on May 15 for their annual convention at Dawson Springs.

Many of the such lakes as the ones mentioned above dot the surface of Western Kentucky and offer the sportsmen an abundance of good fishing.

Where the Central, Norther and Eastern sections of the state abound with numerous swift clear-running streams, Western Kentucky has its thousands of large ponds and small lakes to offed to the anglers of the Commonwealth as well as to those sportsmen in the adjoining States.

Harry Blades, Princeton, Ky. who is Advisory Comissioner of the Division of Game and Fish in Western Kentucky, stated that a number of good sportsmen organizations are carrying on the work of Conservation of wildlife in this section and ade cooperating fully with the Division in its work of restocking the fields and streams and of protecting the wildlife that now needs protection in that area.

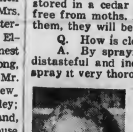
How You Can Defeat The Moth

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

Here are our answers to the questions thousands of women have asked us about moths, and how to defeat them. They are answers which have been thoroughly checked for accuracy

Q. Do flying moths eat holes in wool?



A. No, it is the larvae or little white worms that hatch out of the eggs laid by the flying moths that do the damage. The eggs hatch in a few days in comfortably warm places, so wools left undisturbed where moths can get at them may soon be damaged.

A. It can be mothproofed, or fumigated or sprayed with an insect spray, and stored where moths cannot possibly reach it. Or it may be stored in a cedar chest. Good laundering and dry cleaning leave wools free from moths. If they are stored at once where moths cannot reach them, they will be protected against damage.

Q. How is clothing mothproofed?

A. By spraying it with a mothproofing solution which makes it distasteful and inedible to moths. First brush the clothing well, then spray it very thoroughly. Do not overlook a spot, and don't forget seams and folds, the under surface of collars, under buttons, and in pockets. Every thread must be covered. Blankets, sweaters and other easily washable wools can be immersed (or rinsed) in a solution of a mothproofing compound available for that purpose. Mothproofed clothing need not be stored out of the reach of moths. It may hang in a closet or lie in a drawer or on a shelf.

KATHARINE FISHER

Q. How are wools fumigated?

A. By the use of a fumigant. Fumigants are usually either paradichlorobenzene or naphthalene, and are sold as such or under brand names. They give off fumes that kill moths at all stages, provided the fumes are strong enough and the moths are exposed to the fumes long enough. This can only be done well if plenty of fumigant is used and if the fumes are inclosed in a space that is comfortably warm and practically air-tight.

Q. Can wools be protected well by fumigating them in dresser drawers?

A. Not unless they are sprinkled liberally with the fumigant and st once wrapped closely and sealed in strong paper to keep the fumes from escaping. Wrapped in this way they may also be laid on shelves.

Q. Can wools be fumigated in closets?

A. Yes, if the closet adjoins a room that is comfortably warm. Clean the closet, then sprinkle the fumigant on shelves and floor, using a pound of fumigant for a small closet 2' x 2' x 7' (28 cubic ft.) or 2¼ lbs. for a closet 3' x 3' x 7' (63 cubic ft.) and so on. Now hang up the clothing to be fumigated and seal the closet door with gummed paper or the tape used by fumigators. Leave the clothes there until they are needed again.

Q. Can clothes be fumigated by hanging a fumigant in a closet that is in use?

A. No. as the fumes escape when the door is opened and so become too weak to kill the moths.

Q. Will moths attack clothing and other wools that have been thoroughly fumigated?

A. Yes. fumigation does not mothproof wools. In fumigating any wools, therefore, they must be left stored where moths cannot get at them until they are going to be used again.

Q. How can insect sprays protect wools from moth damage?

A. These sprays kill the moths, or their eggs or larvae when they come in contact with them. The spraying, like the fumigation, must be done very thoroughly. They do not mothproof the wool; therefore the spraying must be repeated regularly if moths are about, or the wools, after being sprayed, must be stored at once where moths can't get at them.

Kentucky Politics

BY TYLER MUNFORD

Kentucky's turbulent coal fields, scene of a prolonged strike over failure o fthe John L. Lewis C. I. O. and coal operators to reach a decision on the terms of a new wage scale, caused speculation this week as the possible effect of the mine strike on the political situation.

Financial writers an deconomic observers have already discussed at length the devastating effect of the strike on the coal industry, business and allied industries, but not until the past week did the strike assume a state of political importance. This can be attributed primarily to the recognized interest of the C. I. O. in the Democratic gubernatorial primary.

As a result of the strike, retail business in the coal fields is at a standstill and merchants there are known to have lost thousands of dollars. Coal operators have not only lost thousands of dollars. Coal operators have not only lost the profit from a product they cannot market but they are also "in the red" as a result of advancement of food supplies to thousands of miners who otherwisewould be without food for their families. This, combined with the forced lay off of railroad employees and laboring men in other kindred industries, is said to have futher aggrevated the public against the John L. Lewis group.

There are reported rumblings of dissatisfaction among railroaders over the continued lay off, and this is one group never closely allied with the C. I. O., although in some state political campaigns they have supported the same candidate. That the strike is affecting the attitude of certain of the more conservative labor groups in the gubernatorial primary was demonstrated this week when numerous leaders outside of the Lewis crowd visite Keen Johnson's headquaters to offer their support

While frought with some violence in the Harlan field, the strike is not without its humorus side. Several miners were hailed into a Harlan court last week on a charge of baptising their non-union brothers. County Judge Ball de nounced as "sacreligious" a charge that the non miners had been thrown into Cumberland River near Evarts with the statement. "We baptise you in the name of the Father, the Son and John L. Lewis.

JOHNSON, DONALDSON IN FIRST DISTRICT

Keen Johnson and his state manager, J. Lyter Donaldson, spent four days last week in the First Congressional district. They were at Paducah, Mayfield and Hopkinsville from which points they conferred with delagations throughout the First. Returning to head quarters they expressed elation over the situation in that Democratic stranghold. Mr. Donaldson said he was particularly impressed with the expressed interest of farmers and business men in the Johnson candidacy. He did not hesitate in predicting Johnson would carry the First.

JOHNSON HEADQUARTERS NOT TO INTERFERE IN LOCAL RACES

A strict policy in local races is being adherred to by Keen Johnson headquarters. "Members of the General Assembly are the direct representative of the taxpayers and they should be allowed to select their Representatives and Senators without interference from any state campaign headquarters," Mr. Johnson said when intrviewed onthis subject. He added that this was not only his policy in the present campaign, but that it would continue to be his policy when he became governor.

A GOOD CUP OF COFFEE EVERY TIME YOU TRY

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

Michael Angelo said that trifles make perfection—but perfection is no trifle! So it is with coffee making. A good cup of coffee can be made every time you try—but only if you will remember a number of seemingly small but vastly important things which enter into the process. Should you forget about them, it will only be luck if your coffee isn't too weak or too strong, cloudy or bitter. Here are the rules of good coffee making, rules that have been carefully checked and rechecked by months and months of research by coffee experts in our own Good Housekeeping Institute laboratories.

Be sure your coffee is fresh. The coffee you use, whether in the bean or ground, must be fresh. Be sure you know when the coffee you buy was roasted, or that it is vacuum-packed. In the case of coffee which is not vacuum-packed, if there is a date on the container it should be within a few days of the date of purchase.

Select coffee with flavor you like. The price of coffee varies according to the cost of the different coffees that make up a particular blend. The flavor also varies with the blend, so you may find it necessary to try several brands before you find one that appeals to your particular taste. So, buy a trend with a flavor you like and no more than you can use in a week.

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

A universal grind makes good coffee. Usually it isn't necessary to ask your grocer to grind or regrind coffee to suit the coffee-making device you use. If a universal grind is available, it will be satisfactory for any type of coffee maker. If the brand you prefer does not have a universal grind, buy a percolator grind for a percolator, and a drip grind for a drip-coffee maker.

Don't mix fresh coffee with stale. It isn't necessary to transfer coffee, after you bring it home, to another container. In doing this you may jeopardize the flavor of the fresh coffee by mixing it with coffee left in the container.

Keep coffee maker clean. Your coffee-making utensil should be scrupulously clean. Coffee oils have a habit of clinging to the inner surfaces of utensils and eventually give off an unpleasant musty flavor to the coffee made in them. Thorough washing in warm soapsuds and thorough rinsing in clear hot water after each use will remove traces of the coffee oil. You can buy a small brush to clean spouts and the tubes of percolators.

At least twice a month give your coffee maker a more thorough cleaning. Porcelain, enamelware or glass utensils should be cleaned by boiling in a solution of one tablespoon of washing soda or borax to each quart of water. If you wish, you can fill such a coffee maker with the solution and let it boil. If the appliance cannot stand such heat, let it soak in a dishpan full of this hot solution. Bases of coffee makers in which there is an electric heating element must never be immersed in water. Percolators can be filled with either of the foregoing solutions; the application of heat will cleanse the tube. Be sure to rinse thoroughly after cleaning with any solution. And when the coffee maker is set aside, keep the cover off so it can "air."

Use standard measures in making coffee. Now we come to the actual making of the coffee. For a brew which suits many people, use two level standard measuring tablespoonfuls of coffee for each half-pint standard measuring cupful of water. These proportions hold good for all methods of coffee making. If you prefer come other strength, determine your own proportions and stick to them. If you do not measure carefully, you will have coffee that may taste very grand sometimes and pretty bad at other times.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

Apple blossoms are out in full this week and WLW's "Fortunes Washed Away" program, heard regularly at 6:45 p. m. onSaturdays, will dramatize the story of eccentric John Chapman, known to the Northwest Territory as Johnny Appleseed.

John Chapman, more than a hundred years ago, migrated to "The Ohio Country" armed with sacks of apple seeds to plant for the pioneers. Wandering over the territory for years he became known asJohnny Appleseed because of his passion for planting apple seeds.

Scene of the dramatization this week is in the rich limestone valleys of southern Pennsylvania and central Maryland, where growersannually pick millions of bushels of apples and peaches.

Following the dramatization, John W. Sites culturist of the Soil Conservation Service, Dayton, Ohio, will discuss methods of preventing soil erosion in orchards.

THE POOR PREACHER

The preacher has a hard time. If his hair is gray, he is ald. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he hastoo many. If he has none, he should have, and isn't setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir she is presuming. If she doesn't she isn't interested in her husband's work. If he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough. If he calls on some poor family, he is playing to the grandstand. If he calls at the home of the rich, he is anaristocrat. Whatever he does esom once could have told him how to do it better. He has a fine living in, and promises that never mature. —Baptist Program, Nashville.

VERONA

A large number of relations gathered at the home of Mr and Mrs. John Brewster and daughters Sunday with well filled baskets, it being Mr. Brewter's birthday. A most enjoyable day was spent by all. Those enjoying the day were: Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Brewster and three children of Independence, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Brewster and two children of Erlanger, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith and daughter of Latonia, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Bob Franks and two children of Banklick, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burch and two children of Indiana, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Brewster of Verona, Ky., Mr. Henry Brewster and son, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brewster, Mr. Gilbert Brewster and daughter of Verona, Ky., All left at a late hour wishing Mr. Brewster many more rappy birthdays.

We welcome back our new married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stephenson to our community.

INSTALLING RADIO SETS

John L. Vest and Nick Welch has an outfit installed in his residence, but it was not in satisfactory working order the forepart of the week. Mr. Welsh has purchased part of his outfit but has not secured his full equipment as yet. When these plants are in working order they anticipate receiving radio messages as far east as the Atlantic coast.

Prof. W. R. Champain who has so efficiently manaked tre Walton High School for the past year,.

The baccalaireate sermon for the graduates of the Walton high school will be preached by Rev. H. W. Whitaker ofthe Walton Methodist crurch Sunday evening at the Baptist Church, May 14. A large attendance will do doubt be on hand to hear Rev. Whitaker who is a interesting speaker and a man of charming personality.

Funeral services for Mrs. W. A. Scroggin wife of Dr. W. A. Scroggin Vilalia, Ky., will be held in the Visalia Baptist Crurch Saturday afternoon with burial in the Independence Cemetery. Heart trouble was the cause of her death. She was born in Boon County and has lived l Visalia for the past 25 years.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

The Goe. B. Powers Real Estate Company made two good real estate deals Wednesday. The B. F. Stanifer two-story house and lot in South Walton was sold to J. C. Gordon of Burlington for $5.000 and the J. C. Powers two story brick residence in South Walton for $8,000.

PERSONAL MENTION:—

Mr. and rMs. Morris and daughter, Mrs. H. S. Arnold and little son Morris of Walton an Harry Clore of Cincinnati spent Saturday at Wareaw, visiting relatives.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church will meet at the home of Mrs. William Lancaster, south of Walton, Saturday, aMy 20. All members are cordialy invited to attend.

TWO WAREHOUSES SOLD

R. M. Barker of Carlton, and Courland and P. Scott, of Ghent, were here Monday inspecting the two tobacco warehouses, at Walton to be taken over b ythe pool tobacco association. The Walton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse was priced to the pool for $40,000.00 but Mr. Barker who is in charge of the warehouse buying department, could not see his way clear to give over $35,000 for this property and this offer was accepted. The Farmers' Tobacco Warehouse Co., priced their warehouse at $46,000.00 but Mr. Barker offered $37,000.00 and this price was for its acceptance, here Tuesday.

COOPER APPEARS TO BE "IN" AS G. O. P. NOMINEE

In Republican ranks John Sherman Cooper, popular Somerset attorney, appears to be a cinch for the Republicannomination. Judge Kink Swope, the Lexington jurist, withdrew from the contest last week Other candidates for the G. O. P. nomination are W. E. 'Fighting Bob Porter, Hopkinsville, J. Robert Anderson, Louisville coal dealer, and Dr. L. O. Smith, Harlan mayor. The main plank in the Porter platform is a $50 old age pension to be financed by a state lottery.

Commeting on the Swope withdrawal Editor Joe E. Robinson makes the following observation in the Lancaster Record:

"Judge Swope evidentally sees in the political calendar the most probable nomination of Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson by the Democrats too much chance for a defeat for him in November to jusitfy a struggle in his party's primary for the nomination. All in al, this looks like a wise conclusion on the part of the Fayette Circuit Judge."

Highway Employees

State Highway Commisoner Robt. Humphreys this week issued an order prohibiting any employee of the state road body from being a candidate in this year's primary and remaining on the payroll.

WITH THE REDS

Now closing their first inspection tour along the Eastern front of National League warfare, the Cincinnati Reds will return to Crosley Field this week-end for a trio of games with the dangerous St. Louis Cardinals.

The Reds will rest Monday follow. Friday in a ladies' day game. Ladies' tickets are now on sale at the old Times-Star Building, Sixth and Walnut Streets. Saturday and Sunday the Reds will meet the Gas House gang in single affairs also. Reserved seats for Sunday's fray can be obtained at the Reds' downtown ticket office, the Henry Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets.

The Reds will rest Monday, following the series with the Cards, but the next day they will again begin hostilities, meeting the Boston Bees at Crosley Field. The Bees will be the first Eastern club to show in Cincinnati this season, as the Redlegs start a string of ten battles with their Eastern foes. After the Bees, the Phil, Dodgers and Giants will show here in that order.

The National League race has already begun to be hotly contested and the Reds found themselves involved in a fierce scramble as they made their first long road trip. Two games against the Brooklyn Dodgers Wednesday and Thursday will conclude the present tour. The Dodgers, rejuvenated under Manager Leo Durocher, have already demonstrated that they are a vastly improved club. In fact, the entire league has been playing in a nip-and-tuck manner that is characteristic of the knock down and drag out races that the circuit has seen. In their swing around the circuit, the Reds have learned that there are no soft spots. Every team is capable of playing good baseball.

OAK ISLAND FARMERS CLUB MEETS

The regular meeting of the Oak Island farmers' club met at the club house Monday, May .

John Ware, chairman presided and Sherman Barberick, secretary.

POTASH DEFICIENCY STUDIED.

Several farmers in the county will conduct demonstrations to determine the Potash needs in alfalfa fields.

According to Prof. Geo. Roberts, head of Agronomy Dept. College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky., a ton of alfalfa hay removes from the soil approximately 30 pounds of Potash.

Continued removal over aperiod of years causes a deficiency of potash.

AT CONEY ISLAND

Two of America's great dance bands will be featured in Moonline Gardens the beautiful and spacious summer ballroom at Coney Island, Cincinnati, onthe concluding "Pre-View Days" which will precede the opening of Coney's regular season, Saturday, May 20. On Saturday night, May 13, Arnold Austin an His Orchestra wil be presented, featuring pretty "Boots" James and Frain Hines vocalists. Austin himself plays a hot trumpet.

Glen Gray and the Sasa Loma Orchestra, which ranks among the "tops" in the dance world, will be featured on Sunday night, May 14. Millions of radio listeners, from coast to coast know this orcrestra for its popular network broadcast. Glen Gray is an attraction in himself, and he features Kenny Sarget and Pee Wee Hunt.

Those whov isit Coney Island on the Pre-View days will find the famous specialists in building amusement devices; carpenters, painters, decorators, electricians, gardeners have converted the big park into a veritable fairyland for those who are bent on fun.

Featured among the attractions is Coney's newest thriller. The Sa-ra-to ship, which provides patorons the sensation and thrills of airplane "stunt" flying. Rocket ships are another of the new attractions.

While the Coney clubhouse will not yet be open, the popular priced cafeteria will be in operation to satisfy the hungry.

At the steamer Island Queen is away, fulfilling a series of engagement down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Coney may be reached only by automobile or bus, on U.S Route 52. Buses will leave Government Square, Cincinnati, every fifteen minutes for Coney.

Maurice Williams, assistant county agent gave a talk on Blue Mold in tobacco plant beds and outlined methods of control. The Kentucky Experiment Station Circular No. 329 and Farmers Bulletin No. 1799 gave detailed information on methods of control.

OFFERS SUGGESTIONS ON SHEARING SHEEP

Sheep sheering is best done after cold weather is over and warmdays rave caused the flow of oil known as yolk, which puts the wool in proper condition for shearing, say a statement by Riochard C. Miller of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. If shearing should not be done when the wool is wet, as damp fleeces do not keep well.

A clean place for shearing is important, since dirt of other foreign material lowers tre value of the fleeces. Shearing may be done on clean floor, tarpaulin or grass sod. Sweep the floor of objectionable material after shearing each sheep.

Tags and filthy locks should be removed before the fleece is rolled and tied. Roll the fleece flesh side out, starting at the breech part and proceding toward the neck. Tie with paper twine, using only enough twine to hold the fleece intact, which is about 8 1_2 to the average fleece.

Wool should be packed in standard sized burpay sacks, 7 1-2 feet by 40 inches made especially for this purpose. Ewe, wether, ram, lambs, and black, burry, seedy,tagy and dead wool should be packed separately.

Rough hanling of sheep in shearing is unnecessary and unwarranted, injury to the animals. Caution is also ecessary to avoid cutting teats, which might make wees unprafitable as breeders.

TIME TOSPRAY GRAPES

According to Kentucky Extension Division Circular No. 290, it is time to spray grapes for the home vine yard.

One of the chief troubles in grape growing is a disease known as Black Rot. The spray schedule for the first spray to control Black Rot should be made when the new shoots are about one inch long. The new shoots are at this spray, about right for this spray. The circular recommends the use of Bordeaux 8_10100. In order to make the Bordeaux mixture stick to the vines a spreader or sticker is desirable.

For small numbers of vines Bordeaux mixture can be purchased ready for use. For large vineyards Bordeaux can be made up by using Bluestone and hydrated lime according to instructions. A copy of Kentucky Circular 209 on Grapes can be obtained from the Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky.

KEEN JOHNSON OUT FOR GOVERNOR SEAT

KEEN JOHNSON

Louisville and Jefferson County, last year strongholds for Senator Alben W. Barkley, are likely good spots this summer for Keen Johnson, according to veteran political observers here who maintain close touch with the Democratic organization in this district.

Following the nomination of Senator Barkley last year, leaders of the Tom Rhea faction of the Democratic party were quick to anticipate solid Louisville organization support for their gubernatorial candidate in this year's primary. The Senator ran with the open endorsement of the regular organization here, but conditions in this summer's race are far different.

The New Deal is out as an issue inasmuch as both sides have already expressed allegiance to the national administration, and organization leaders here can find no practical reason for supporting the Brown candidacy. The Lexington attorney has never been too popular with those who constitute the regular organization. On the other hand, Keen Johnson never lost his contact with the late Colonel M. J. Brennas and his folowers.

Treat the Louisville situation has reversed itsef over that of last summer is evident in the recent successful fight waged by Louisville's Mayor Schultz for control of party machinery with ultimate ideas of restoring harmony. While the gubernatorial contest was not an issue in the reoraization fight here, it is significant that most of the leadership associated with the Mayor is looked upon as being friendly to the Johnson candidacy.

The Louisville organization, because of local rases, is onrecord as favoring a neutral policy in the state race, but such a position gives organization leaders the privilege of making their own selection in the state race. However, even a hands-off policy in Louisville is a major break for the Keen Johnson candidacy in view of the generally recognized fact that Rhea function looked to Louisville for an unqualified okeh in this year's primary.

SALE OF BONDS

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced today that the total sales of Savings Bonds thru March 3, 1939, aggregated in maturity value, more than 2,437,108,850, and that purchases have been made by approximately 1,564,608 investors. The total represents average purchases of $1,957,525 for each business day since March 1, 1935, when these bonds were first placed on sale. Deducting bonds redeemed, the maturity value of Saving Bonds outstanding on March 31, 1939 was approximately $2,206,008,900.

The total maturity value of purchases for the calendar year 1938 was $707,291,650, an average purchase for each business day of last year of $2,334,300.

The attached tabulations show for the year 1938 the cash purchases in the forty cities, towns and villages which led the nation in purchases for last year in their respective post office classifications.

There is also shown for the year the first, second, third and fourth class offices in each state which led in the total cash amount of bonds purchased.

Direct-by-mail and post office purchases from Chicago, Illinois, give that city the lead for the Nation and for the first class post offices. Chicago's cash purchases for the period were $33,813,900.

Your local postmaster will gady furnish you any information, which you might want reative to these bonds.

Mr. Jaeger, postmaster of Independence and Mr. Cleek, postmaster at Walton, Ky., both report a growing increase in sales at their respected offices.

RESEVOIR GETS FISH

Last Sunday morning 800 pounds of channel cats were put into the Walto Resivoir. These fish were secure from Rily's Water Gardens of Port Clinton, Ohio. Some of these fish weigh over 5 pounds and will give any angler, who happens to hook one of these specimans a good fight.

The Walton Resivoir is fast becoming the best fishing lake in Northern Kentucky and everything posible is being done in a effort to keep the lake well stocked.

Mr. Edmond Johnson, who is in charge of the lake will always be glad to give information to anyone on arrival at the lake as to kinds of fish and what part of the lake to find them. This is expected to be the best season in the history of the lake.

FINE LAMBS

William Ryle of Walton has produce one of the finest lamb crops to be seen in the county. His first shipment of lambs ready for market this week averaged per head 7.3 pounds at 98.1 days of age making an average of 736 pounds per day.

Mr. Ryle followed regular monthly treatment for intestinal parasites, used purbred southdown rams and good grade native and western ewes. The lambs were crep fed. This is one of the flocks which western ewes will be compared with native ewes in lamb and wool production.

Red Flag Wavers Mislead Public

The professional politician has long used the "bank" and "money powers" and "Wall Street" as the red flag he has waved when trying to inflame constituents so they would vote for him to save themselves from something, although neither they nor the politician really knew what the something was.

Discussing the subject of how well the banks meet the public needs, W. R. Burgess of The National City Bank, shows up some of the red flag wavers. He said in a recent address:

"It is a long standing habit in this country to blame the banks for our troubles. Everybody wants money, and the banker has it. In every community there should lend money, and to whom the bankers had to say 'No.' They spread the news of the banker's sins. They go to the politcians with stories, and he hears ten such stories to one of the other side, and each story carries one vote.

"The banks of the country are organized to make loans. They are equipped to make at least twice the $16,000,000,000 of loans which all the commercial banks of the country now have outstanding. Many banks are advertising for loans. All are seeking them.

"The reduced volume of bank loans is not ascribable to bank policy but to a combination of business depression and the change in practices in financing business which made tself evident before the depression.

"But in answer to the question, 'Are banks lending money freely enough?' there is much better evidence than the naked testimony of the parties concerned"

Mr. Burgess then show that the Reconstruction Finance Coropration and the Federal Reserve Bulletin, these two agencies had outstanding a total of only $125,000,000 of loans, which is less than 1 per cent of the total commercial loans of the country. Further, the Bulletin said that the risky type of loans did not return sufficient income to cover expenses and losses.

'That experience is substantial evidence," said Mr. Burgess, "that in general the banks are doing a pretty good job of lending and that most borrowers turned down are not good risks."

It is interesting and rather surprising that the R. F. C. and the Federal Reserve banks with their liberal policies and their longer term lending, have been able to make as few loans as they have. It is sometimes well to know the facts before you wave a red flag or allow yourself to be stampeded by one.

That System Ours

When last year ended, 34,000,000 Americans owned ordinary life insurance policis And ordinary life insurance policies totaled $75,500,000. This astronomical figure doesn't include other forms of life, such as industrial, which would add billions more to the total.

This means that the American people, on any basis you want to figure it are far better prepared, economically, to face the futuer than any other people. And it is a testimonial to the American system that it has given the average family an income that permits it to buy future protection that is completely beyond the reach of the average family in any other nation.

A BIG NATIONAL HIGHWAY VISON

The plan of the Bureau of Public oads for a new highway system has been submitted to Congres with the approval of President Roosevelt. The House Roads Committee has already started work to provide ways and means to start the creation of what will eventually become 26,700 miles of inter-linked highways.

The Federal highway program contemplates an interregional network, using templates an interregional network, using present routes to a large extent, and carrying them directly thrugh large cities by construction of "depressed" thoroughfares; main arteries running in canal-like lanes below the level of ordinary street traffic.

Federal Highway Authority has been proposed in a bill by Charman Cartwright of the House Roads Committee.

East-and-west routes would run from south roads would run from northern the Atlantic to the Pacific. North and boundaries of the nation. All the country is included in the big plan.

The power of the highway for social and economic gain is unfulfilled. Twenty years more will see a further vast improvement in the rural highways and in the streets of our cities, a beneficial alteration greater still will be added to motor vehicles in the quality and economy of their performance. This will arise from the remarkable advances of recent years.

The Bureau of Public Roads feels that the highways should catch up with the progress of the motors.

With vehicles and roads improved far beyond the the common expectation of today, highway transportation has yet to make its greatest and most characteristic contribution to the Nation.

Bible Leading Book in the World

In these days when democracy is being forced to take stock of her resources ,lovers of human freedom will read with encouragement the releases from the annual reort of the American Bible Society, whose 123rd annual meeting has just been held and whose sole purpose for a centry and a quarter has been to make the Bible available to all men of all nations, however, litle they may have with which to purchase it. Wheerever this great book has been seriously read human freedom has flourished and democratic institutions have been born. Earl Baldwin in an address in Toronto recently expressed his belief that Britian's disposition to attempt the solution of the international problems by honest deliberation and conference roots back into generation up on generation of Bible reading by the people of England. Even in the face of the dictator's edict the Bible out-sold Mein Kampf in Germany last year by 200,000 copies. Latin America whose trade and friendship dictators are strenously bidding has a hunger for the Scriptures that is apparently insatiable.

China with all her appallingneeds bought more complete Bibles from the Society than ever in her history. Japan likewise increased her purchases by about 10 percent over the year before. Meanwhile the Scriptures moved into a dozen new languages in 1939, bringing the total number of tongues in which some part of the Scriptures have been translated to 1021. It is now conservatively estimated that nine-tenths of the people of the world might hear some substantial part of the Scriptures read in their native tongue. No book in the world even faintly approaches this record. As long as this continues human freedom has agreat ally.

Only three other states showed a larger reduction than Kentucky intotal number of bankruptcies during the twelve months ended June 30, 1939, as compared with the preceding fiscal year.

Kentucky's total number last year was 793 compared with 1,169 during 1937, or a reduction of 376.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

JAMES PRESTON

Real estate and the subject of of government reorganization would seem to be as far apart as he poles, but not so in the National Capitol.

Washington, until a few years ago, had a comparatively steady population figure. In recent years, however, with the creation of new bureau after bureau in the government, the population has grown by leaps and bounds. Real estate has been at a premium and 2,000-unit apartment houses now stand on land that only a few years ago was Maryland or Virginia farm land.

In short, Washington has been in the throes of an unprecedent real estate boom. And landlords have naturally wondered of late when—if ever—this boom would end; when these so-called "temporary" bureaus of the administration would be closed and the thousands of clerks returned to their native communities.

Real estate men have not been too hopeful about the whole thing. They have been anticipating a time when administration expenses would have to be reduced. Whe that time comes, they reason quite logically, the bottom would drop out of real estate prices in the Washington area.

But the Government Reorganization plan just sent to Cogress by the President has changed the whole outlook of the worrying real estate agents. For the interpretation made of the reorganization plan by most observers is simply this:

many of the o-called "temporary" emergency agencies established in Washington in the last few years.

Basis for that interpretation is

It wil tend to make permanent The reorganization plan, as drafted by the President, places many of the temporary agencies, such WPA NYA, PWA, RFC, FHA, HOLC, etc., in permanent bureaus. Thus functions of these agencies will simply become a part of the work of the permanent agency and not an independent function of government The reasoning is that it will be easier to get Congrass to continue one of the functions of a permanent establishment than it would be to get Congress to continue the existence of an independent "emergency" agency.

As one observer put it: "It will saill be the same boloney just sliced a litte differently."

The coal strike brought some interesting statistics to light in the Capital. For instance: The huge furnaces that furnish heat (also light and power) for the Capitol Building, Supreme Court, Library of Congress and the City Post Office, burn 200 tons of coal daily. When the coal strike began to make itself felt in the Capital, the furnaces were kept going, but on "short rations."

"Fights" between government bureaus, departments and agencies are almost a perpetual noise in Washington. Some of them become embarrassing political problems. Others are ironed out quietly without anybody sing face, dignity of mud sleep. There have been bitter quarrels between the Treasury and Justice Departments over crime chasing; between the Interior and Agriculture Departments over jurisdiction; between the State and Commerce Departments over the same point, and between the War, Navy and Labor Department over numerous things.

Now, the latter departments are at it again, with the War and Navy Departments lined up against Secretary Perkins on the question of control of subversive alien activities.

Bone of contention is a legislative proposal to make it unlawful to advocate overthrow of this Government by force or violence. When the bill was being considered by a House committee the War and Navy Departments immediately announced they desired such a law, pointing out that it would be valuable in curbing activities of Communists, Fascits, and other radical groups are formenting trouble in the military services.

In constrast, the Labor Department sent word to the Committee that it was opposed to provisons of the bill which would broaden the bases for deporting aliens.

The fight has been carried on with as little public quarrelling as possibe, but some observers believe it may bread into the open and become a major issue.

KENTUCKY GIRLS STUDY FARMING

Crops and soils, poultry, animal husbandry and entomology are among subjects three young women are studying at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Instead of taking home economics or some other presumably "feminine" line of study, these girl sare majoring in agriculture.

Miss Billie Jackson, Lexington, is in her second year of agriculture, agd expects to raise horses on her farm when she is graduated. Elizabeth McDowell, Cynthiana, is also sophomore, interested in general farming. Marjorie Jones, Winchester, is a freshman an expects to help Day on the farm along about 1943.

So far there are no men studying home economics at the University of Kentucky, though at a recent baby chick show and exhibit of foods made with egg products, two men entered first-class pies.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

BY
Gordon Wilson, Ph.D.
WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE
BOWLING GREEN, KY.

Some forty years ago the children at the one-roomed school were all excited: Anna was coming to the handbills, with a contraption that reproduced sound and was going to exhibit the thing at Fidelity. Father was away on one of his numerous call as a country doctor, but Mother said my brothers and I might go, if the admisson was only one dime, ten cents. The chores were done up in a hurry and away we rode on our steeds; I rode behind as the privelege and duty of a younger brother. In the twilight on the way we met father, returning from his call. We disguised our voices and merey greated him not until he got home did he know who we were.

When we got to Fidelity, we found some two dozen others who wanted to see and hear the new miracle that we had read about the weekly newspaper. There was the union church on the hill, where all sorts of addities of program were held, but for some reasn we had our fist contact with the miraculous in a lumber room upstairs over one the the two stores, where we sat of good boxes and waited our turn to see and hear.

There was no blaring horn, such as later developed. We adjusted some ear phones and listened to the rather squeaky tones, with the former rigmarole of announcing the song, the composer, the singer or singers, and the name of the company making the record. Then came the music proper. Eyes of rustics bugged out as we actually could hear human voices; if some one had booed at us, we probably would have jumped out the widow. Al told we heard some dozen records, entirely familiar songs like "Swanee River" and "Ol Kentucky Home." But away we went in the night air as different boys from the ones who had come to view a miracle of modern science. Others who had been there must have felt our suepriority the next day. We did not wait for them to be impressed but told endlessly the wonders of the evening in the upstairs lumber room.

Not long after this our vilage postmaster-actor-business-man actually bought a phonograph and several records. When we went for the mail, we had an added reason for hanging around with the other loafers. In addition to songs there were talking records, supposed to be funny but now rather lamentably flat in sound, like last year's or last century's jokes. By this time the phonograph had a horn, so that the whole group could hear at the same time, without having to wait impatiently while the others took more than their share of the time.

Aand then the greatest miracle of all happened: a traveling record-maker came into Fidelity and actually got Aunt Jane to sing into a horn one of her favorite balads. Then he put the same record on another machine and lo and behold! out came Aunt Jane's voice, a little squeaky, but recognizable. The world beyond the range of hils that formed the boundary of our little cosmos.

HONEST WEIGHT????

NEW, GREATER "STREAMLINE ERA" FORESEEN

LOVE may make the world go 'round, but not fast enough to satisfy science. Modern demands for speed continue to increase and streamlining grows more extreme, horsepowers greater, as science tackles the problem of making the wheels turn faster.

Now, with two World's Fairs to lend progress a hand and give an impetus to travel, America is scheduled to enter a new era of speed and comfort in transportation. The next few years, transportation men believe, will surpass anything we have seen yet in streamlined efficiency.

There will be spectacular developments in design and passenger comfort, but one of the leading roles in the coming transportation revolution will be played by an obscure little gadget no larger than a spool. Without it, modern high-speed trains could scarcely function. It is the medium on which the spinning wheels of travel progress actually turn.

A tiny tapered steel cylinder only two inches long and one and three quarters inches lu diameter is the heart of a new roller bearing on which giant streamliners roll so easily that a single man is able to pull a 100-ton locomotive along its track. Combined in a double-row series and held in place by steel shells, the cylinders form a bearing strong enough to support the enormous weight of a steam engine and at the same time eliminate 77% of the friction which would normally retard the revolving axles.

The advantages of anti-friction bearings, which mark the first fundamental improvement in transportation since primitive man invented the wheel, are only beginning to be applied to heavy conveyances. Although an essential factor in the development of the automobile, on railroad trains they are still something new, being introduced for the first time scarcely thirteen years ago.

The Hot Box Era

The roller bearing makes possible the 120-mile speeds of streamlined trains, for which the friction bearings now in general use on railroads are inadequate. Because roller bearings reduce friction to a nearly negligible quantity, they permit trains to travel at great speeds without danger of "hot boxes" and consequent delays. They also make possible starts and stops as smooth as in any automobile, so that neck-breaking jolts are eliminated.

Despite their tiny size, these little cylinders are so tough that even the huge driving wheels of enormous locomotives have little wearing effect on them. Although now used principally for the new streamliners, they are easily installed on existing equipment, and it is probable that before long this new engineering improvement will be added to most trains now in operation as the railroads continue their modernization program.

Under Hoover, both government and business were in the red; under Roosevelt business at least, has gotten out.

Now that we have paid tribute to Mothers, all there's left to do is to settle with florists and shop-keepers.

Next invitation to disaster will be held at Indianapolis May 30, when our thought naturally turn to the dead.

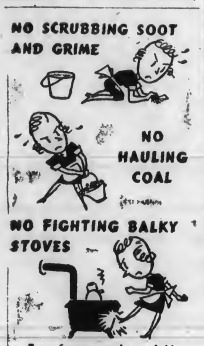
THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE BY TOPPS

OF EXTENSION WORK OBSERVED IN STATE



Twenty-fie years of agricultural extension work are being reviewed this month in celebrations in 26 Kentucky counties where farm agents or home demonstration agents were employed upon the passage in 1914 of the Smith-Lever Act providing for the cooperation of Federal and State governments in this form of educational work amoung farm families. All counties now have farm agents and many home agents.

Calling agricultural extention work "the greatest movement in adult eaucation the world has known," Dean Thomas P.Cooper of the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky said that "Kentucky farmers and homemakers have utilized the vast economic and social advantages that have occurred.

"The expenditure for county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents and the various subject-matter specialists has been repaid many times over by the improvement which has taken place in methods and practices and by the new methods which have been introduced to agriculture and to the home.

"Outstanding in the progress of the State has been the development of 4-H club work, with appriximately 42,000 members now enroled; soil improvement based upon the use of phosphate and lime in the production of legumes and the proper rotation of crops; the development of methods of maintenance of the soil, cover crops and grtises to prevent eqsion; the distribution of superior strains of tobacco and other crops; the production of lespedeza; the development of the poultry industry and the application of practices that make it profitable; the increasing number of purebred sires; the development of the spring lamb industry and dairying. All these present but a small part of the contributions to agriculture which have come largely thru extension work.

"Work in agricultural extention touches in one form or another every industry and business that serves agriculture. If it afects the outlook of villages and cities and relates them to agriculture. It touches either directly or indirectly almost every farm and farm home and serves our people as a whole. When the history of extenson work in Kentucky is written, its srvics will stand out as the most important contribution to the agricultural economic wealth and rural welfaec that has been undertaken in the life of the State.

Early American Homes Vie With Modern For Favor In World's Fair Model City

Town of Tomorrow, New York World's Fair—This model village of 15 homes, heralded as the most up-to-date community in the World, is expected by architects and builders to have far-reaching influence on home construction in the United States during the next few years.

Incorporated in the homes, which range in cost from $2,500 up, are ideas and products which undoubtedly will be widely applied to new and old homes all over the country.

Although these are the types of homes in which thousands of Americans will live in the years immediately ahead, modernism is not the dominant architectural motif. In the interiors, however, a'l are ultra-modern, for here the most modern equipment is used.

You'll whistle in amazement when you enter this old-fashioned house. Decorations are in the Colonial manner, but the air inside immediately gives you a hint of the modern nature of the interior. The house is completely air conditioned, but you can't see any radiators or registers. Both cooled and warmed air is introduced through new type light fixtures in the ceilings of each room.

It is in the kitchen where a "traffic tie-up" of visitors is expected, for this is a kitchen which will make the eyes of any woman sparkle. It is completely electrical, and is a symphony of gleaming stainless steel and porcelain enamel. There are a Kelvinator electric stove and refrigerator, a dish washer, a modern sink, and plenty of cupboard and drawer space for enough equipment for two ordinary houses this size.

Working surfaces of stainless steel stretch around the four walls. Beneath these are all-steel compartments and drawers for equipment. Above are similar steel compartments with adjustable steel shelves.

Another example of modern efficiency is the laundry, also all electrical, and designed to make quick work of washing and ironing. The latest Kelvinator washer, ironer and water heater do the work.

The automobile has become a part of the modern home, and so a family car is a part of this house. Like the house, the car—a Nash—has a conditioned air system.

MISS MARY MUNN TO WEAR QEEN CROWN

Miss Mary Munn, 19, sophomore in the the Woman's Department of Centre College, will wear the carnival diadem here the night of Friday, June 2, it was announced here this week.

German's election for Carnival king was virtually assured also, as he is unopposed for election. German, a football star, is a senior at the Men's College.

Miss Munn, the daughter of Mrs. Burrus Munn of of Maple and Lexington Avenues, Danville, was elected queen of the 1939 Centre College Carnival at a meeting of Centre letter-men Friday.

A brunette, Miss Munn ispopular on the campus and is active in extra-curricular activities. She is a member of the Centre College Glee Club and the Woman's Atheletic Association. She has taken part in a number of sports.

Miss Munn is strictly a southerner and is proud of the fact. She has a distinct southern brogue.

She is a member of Chi Omega, national social sorority. The Centre Carnival is an annual event, begun at Centre in 1904. Each year the carnival is staged in keeping with Centre and Southern traditions. The carnival crown is the highest award offered to a girl at Centre.

KENTUCKY EGGS TO EASTERN MARKETS

Test shipments to eastern markets indicated to Grayson county farmers the possibility of increasing profits by expressing selected eggs to New York and other cities. Despite high carrying charges, eggs shipped to New York paid best. Because New Yorkers criticised the lack of uniformity in Kentucky eggs County Agent R. T. Faulkner gave demonstrations in grading, and then broke various grades of eggs so farmers could see differences in yolks. Plans call for shippin selected eggs averaging 23 ounces or more to the dozen, with uniform coloring of both yolk and shell.

CULL THE POOR LAYERS

A new circular of the Kentucky of Agriculture dealing with culling chickens says that the hen must lay 90 to 100 eggs to be worth her keep. The more eggs she lays over that number the more profitable she will be. The curcular divides into three parts! poor producers, medium producers and good producers. The knack of culling is to be able to distinguished between these three groups, so the unprofitable henscan be removed and sold. The purpose of the circular, which is free to all Kentuckians, is to tell how this is done.

In Grant county, more limestone was spread last month than at any previous time in the county's history.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture

For the most part the gardens are well started, and now begins caring for them; "working," as it is sometimes called. This is the proper word to use, as some gardners handle their gardens, but possibly some persons "work" their gardens too much, from both the standpoint of unnecessary activity and, in fact sometimes quite unfriendly to their vegetables. Instead of working their gardens they should cultivate them.

In the past few years, the experiment stations have been inquiring what are the benefits that attend the processes that farmers and gardeners use, and interesting facts have been established. For example, when corn was merely kept weeded, the weeds clipped off at the soil's surface with, as it happened, a safety razor blade, quite as good corn was made as when shallow stirring of the soil was done, and much better corn than when the far too customary "working" was the practice. The inevitable conclusion was that there is no virtue in stirring the soil, but that removal of weeds is and need be the only object of the farmer's endeavor, and further, that at no time and in o wise should the crop roots be touched, or even disturbed.

This is contray to the opinion held for so long that crops must be worked, and the soilloosened, about the roots, to "give them air." The truth of the matter is that, unless weeds thirteen, things should be let severy alone.

It may be recalled that in 930 very little rain fell. Deep rooted vegetables that were started while there was still soil moisture left from the winter rains and snows kept growing, but almot none of the weed seeds lyig in the upper levels of the soil even sprouted. Some gardeners no doubt worked their gardens but many did not, because they thought these could be no return for the work. This turned out to be a good thngi for the un-worked vegetables did quite as well, and in many instances, better, than did those in gardens where systematic oll stirring was continued.

Gardeners should let weeds indicate the need for any work they do among their vegetables, but the weeds should be kept removed as they start, or at least, befort they have reached size, for two reasons. One is that when weed are small, their roots lie shallow and only shallow stirring is needed to remove them, and the vegetable roots are not harmed or even touched. The other is that if weeds are promptly and early removed, their competition for plant food and moisture is at a minimum.

The horse-tool to use may be a 5-tooth cultivator, riding light, but a 16-tooth "garden harrow" is beteer. Better than either is a sweep that merely skims the surface, upsetting the smaller weeds and shaving those off that have grown large. As for hand tools, nothing is better than a sharp hoe, used not to chop the soil, but slid on the soil surface with a "scalping" or scraping motion.

Such cultivation leaves thes soil surface level, as it should be. No ridges and no halls about the plants should be made, as entalling too much labor, and as being decidedly unkin dto the vegetables besides, for, in borrowing soil to make ridges, the soil level about the plans is lowered, and the moisture level is made to fall below root-reach.

If gardeners will use the newer word "cultivation," and the practice they will conserve their work and their vegetables.

UNSEEN WONDERS OF SCIENCE

MODERN science prodiices a spectacle more thrilling to the average citizen thau any play of stage or screen. Progress is the hero in this drama of the test-tubes, and ignorance the villain. Across the stage of time it moves in an endless pageant, fascinating its audience with a succession of marvels.

At a cue from the master stage-director, telephones, automobiles and radio suddenly sprang from nowhere into being. Under its guidance man took to the air and plumbed the depths of the sea. Today, science continues to astound us with a parade of modern miracles.

Television, streamlined locomotives, stratosphere air-planes—these and other spectacular achievements are familiar enough to everyone. Yet not all the modern miracles of research are so obvious. The world at large is unaware of what many wonders of science contribute to the comforts of life.

In laboratory and factory, developments take place each day which will vitally affect the progress of civilization. Yet they are destined to remain unseen, unknown.

It is from these obscure developments that the pageant of progress is actually marshalled. The banners of science may draw the plaudits of the crowds, but without this backstage troupe those banners would never wave. Out front the leading players in the drama of science acknowledge their applause; backstage the Ginga Dins of this spectacle carry on in a play just as thrilling—yet a play which never sees the footlights.

The radio is worthless without its condensers; The Transatlantic Clipper would crash if its distributor failed; The streamliner would be liuited to old-style speeds without anti-friction bearings in the wheels; The Mt. Wilson telescope would be worthless without its small eyepiece.

With girlish inquisitiveness, members of Girl Scout Troop No. 41 holding weekly meetings in a Cincinnati church asked their scout-leaders to arrange an educational tour to know their community better. Using all means of conveyance from autos to railroads the girls made a 40-mile "get acquainted" tour of Greater Cincinnati. Like hundreds of other civic, fraternal and school groups they visited the new bottling plant of The Coca-Cola Bottling Works Company, one of the Queen City's show-places and a model for the industry. On a plant tour from "stem to stern" they saw all processes and operations conducted in a healthful, spotlessly clean environment, causing one awed scout-girl to remark: "Is it always this clean here? Assured by the guide that such was the inviolate rule, the little miss declared: "It sure is nice and clean out here."

Universal Brotherhood

THE opening stanza of a well-known hymn (Christian Science Hymnal, No. 105), typifies the prayer of all earnest Christians today:

"Help us to help each other, Lord,
Each other's cross to bear;
Let each his friendly aid afford,
And feel his brother's care."

Modern invention has reduced, measurably, the limitations of time and distance. Today, the so-called foreign country is our next-door neighbor. Through the medium of the radio, we are informed of current events as they occur. As a result, the problems arising across the miles of ocean, which demand attention, immediately become a part of our thought. It is, therefore, essential that all right-thinking people should develop and maintain an attitude of universal brotherhood.

The Golden Rule still remains the highest standard for the expression of this brotherhood. It applies both in the simplest dealings with our immediate neighbor and in the most complex diplomatic and other relationships with our fellow men at large. We do not hesitate to share our garden tools with the man next door. How much more, then, should we be willing to share our spiritual benefits with a group of individuals called a nation!

However, should the borrower next door misuse that which we have lent him, we may justly refuse to be allied with such a practice. In other words, the mere preaching of peace and brotherly kindness is insufficient. The essential part is the practicing of our highest concept of good. In his parable of the good Samaritan, Jesus not only rebuked hypocrisy, but also indicated the practical nature of true religion. . . .

Paul wrote to the workers in the church at Rome (Romans 13:10), "Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." The love which does no harm to one's fellow man is that expression of the Christ-spirit which was so perfectly exemplified by Jesus during his ministry. He was often wrongly accused, yet he retaliated in no way, but healed and blessed. . . .

All forms of aggression, greed, hatred, desire for war, and the like, arise primarily from a wrong concept of God, with its attendant fear. Belief in evil or the power of evil is disbelief in God. This naturally breeds fear, for ignorance is the very foundation of such a state of thought. John wrote (I John 4:16, 18):—"He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. . . . There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear." Thus, we see, the solution to our problem of overcoming fear of or distrust of a neighboring nation will be accomplished as we gain the right understanding of God and His perfect government of His creation, and as we express the love which "dwelleth in God." The acceptance and realization of the fact that, since there is one God, there is but one creation—spiritual and unified—enables one effectually to apply this understanding for the alleviation of human suffering.

Unity of thought regarding God and His creation engenders brotherly love, which precludes the possibility of inhuman warfare. Mary Baker Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 340): "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself.'" And on page 467 she further states: "It should be thoroughly understood that all men have one Mind, one God and Father, one Life, Truth, and Love. Mankind will become perfect in proportion as this fact becomes apparent, war will cease and the true brotherhood of man will be established."—The Christian Science Monitor.

Queens for the Fair

When the World's Fair opens in New York in the spring of 1939, the dairy industry will be well represented. Five breeds of dairy cattle —Ayrshire, Brown-Swiss, Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey—will each have thirty outstanding cows in the "Dairy World of Tomorrow." These 150 cows will be milked in the Borden Building on the Central Mall, using a rotolactor equipped with magnetic milkers to do the job. Calves and bulls representative of each breed will also be on exhibit.

The animals are chosen by a special committee from each Breed Association, and will come from all parts of the United States and Canada as representatives of the best that the breed can produce. The Ayrshire cow shown above is one of the animals chosen.

In this exhibit not only the production of milk will be demonstrated, but the handling, bottling and sale of it will go forward under the eyes of the public. About one-third of the milk produced by the cows of this country is used as fluid milk. The rest is sold as butter, cheese, ice-cream, casein for paint, billiard balls, paper sizing, milk sugar for medicines, and in literally hundreds of others forms. The Borden exhibit will tell much of this story and give a better understanding of the place the dairy cow, as exemplified by these pure-breds, and the milk distributor play in the scheme of things.

Livestock Trends

Livestock values continue to hold reasonably well. Cattle feeders are seeing some lowering of price on the better qualified and finished animals, while the trade continues strong on the medium kind and butcher stock, especially cows and bulls. Feeder cattle prices are a little weaker but continue relatively high with a fairly strong demand and limited supplies available.

Producers of hogs have found a fairly stable market at fair prices. Demand for pork products continues fairly broad and the earlier burdensome supply of lard has been somewhat relived. The season is at hand for weightier hogs and it is the recommendation of the Producer Co-Operative Commission Association—the livestock marketing—that hog producers continue marketing their hogs for the next several weeks as they reach edsirable market finish and weight.

With the sheep producers the market for lambs has been good and prospects look very favorable for the next two months, with the lamb crop somewhat later than normal. It seems advisable to recommend the best care of the lamb crop, getting the earlier spring lambs to market by July 1st. The price of feed, and market conditions, seem to warrant crop feeding the early lamb crop.

Valume of business coming to the Cincinnati market, other than hogs, has been relatively light. The position of the Cincinnati market in relationship to other markets, on all species of livestock, continues strong. The Cincinnati Producers, during the first four onths of this year have handled 9,066 cattle, 9,406 veal calves, 9,729 sheep and 97,353 hogs, or a total of 125,554 head. This cooperative value represents 38.25 per cent of total marketable receipts of livestock at the Union Stock Yards in Cincinnati. The Association with its branch agencies at Dayton and Lexington, handled an additional valume of 31,836 head during this four months period. On the Dayton market the Producers handled 50.3 per cent of the total receipts while at Lexington all the receipts coming to the yards were handled by the Cooperative.

Livestock producers throughout the area of the Cincinnati market are gratified upon finding that efforts to repeal the Law covering the Bonding of Livestock Dealers and Operators, have not been successful. Director of Agriculture, John Brown of the State of Ohio, announced in a recent conference that every possible effort would be made to enforce the Bonding Law and to render every service and possible protection to the livestock industry. The Bill introduced for the repeal of teh Bonding Law, lies dormant in the Senate Agricultural Committee.

Office Workers by Day, Student Soldiers After Hours, They Won Reserve Commissions

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The only class of Army reserve officers ever to be recruited from a single business organization was commissioned recently when 47 employees of the home office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company received commissions as second lieutenants in the Quartermaster Reserve Corps from Colonel Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, after being sworn in by Major Arthur B. Proctor, of the Quartermaster Corps, in the presence of many high-ranking officers of the Army and Reserve Corps. Colonel Johnson made the graduation address to the class, stressing the need for the upbuilding of the Reserve Corps as a part of the national defense program. Major General Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the Second Corps area, and Leroy A. Lincoln, president of the insurances company, also addressed the class.

The recruiting, training, and graduation of the class is in line with the endeavor of the War Department to build the Officers Reserve Corps from its present strength of 110,000 to a total of 120,000 which the department has estimated as a necessary minimum. To this end, qualified men are selected from civilian life and are organized into classes for courses of training under Army instructors leading up to examination for commission.

Several Hundred Volunteer

During 1938, Mr. Lincoln was asked if such recruiting might be undertaken among Metropolitan employees. Permission was granted, and applications were received from several hundred men. Of this number about 100 were accepted and enrolled for the course, and during the past year they have received periodical instruction under Major Proctor, who is Chief Instructor of Reserve Affairs for the Army. The insurance company cooperated further by providing quarters for the meetings and examination of the class. The 47 men who were commissioned qualified on the basis of their standing in examinations at the conclusion of the training course. According to Army records, this is the only occasion on which an entire class has been recruited from a single organization.

With the commissioning of the class, 5 per cent of the male personnel of the Metropolitan's Home Office force is now active in the various reserve branches. The company also boasts its own American Legion Post with a membership of 250.

Mrs. Claud Young, Hopkins county, sold 100 chicks at 12 weeks old for a net profit of $27.

The practice of using Bordeaux mixture to prevent wildfire in tobacco plant beds was widely accepted in Todd county.

HONORS FOR WESTERN KENTUCKY DAIRYMAN

Malcolm D. Harrison, Farmington, Graves county, was recently hoonred by the Kentucky College of Agriculture for his contribution to the dairy industry. Each year the Dairy Club, an organization of college students specializinfi in dairying, select a dairy farmer for state honors and presents his portrait for the "dairy hall of fame" in the University of Kentucky campus.

Honored in previous years were Oscar Ewing, Louisville; Emil Von Allmen, St. Mtthews; Perry B. Gaines, Carrollton; Adolph Moser, Jeffersontown, and John Nutter, Lexington.

Harrison has developed a highslass Jersey herd, and has supplied breeding stock for the establishment or improvement of herds in several counties in Western Kentucky.

FARMERS SET UP GOALS

A committee of Anderson county farmers studying the soils and crops needs of the county set goals to include winter cover crops for all cultivated land, the use of more limestone and phosphate, the growing of more alfalfa, hybrid corn, Italian rye grass and other hay and grass crops, the establihment of a lang-time erosion control program, and the earning this year of 95 percent of the soil-building payments in the agricultural conservation program.

A 15-acre Italian rye grass field on the Lyon county farm of R. J. Yates has pastured a large number of animals since February.

Shorthorn bulls are being placed in Owsley county with the aid of the Farm Security Administration.

BLUE MOLD CONTROL

Nine plant beds were treated in demonstrations with Bordeaux mixture, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The Bordeaux treatment is for the control of wildfire, angular leaf spot and other plant bed diseases. These beds will be treated in two weeks and followed cie if Blue Mold makes its appearance in the communities.

Twenty demonstrations in plant bed diseases and Blue Mold Control were planned in four community programs of work. Because of limited time the county's office was able to personally supervise only two demonstrations in each community. These demonstrations include Albert Parker and James C. Pennington, Walton; T. J. Carr and John Worthington, Verona; S. B. Sleet, Beaver; Franz Sebree and D. E. Ogden, Hamilton and Chas. E. White and John Burns, Petersburg. Leaders in addition who are assisting in the program are Elmer Elliston, Stanley Fooks, Will Waller, Hirman English, Wilbur Florence, Allen Morris, J. W. Feldhaus.

MARGARET BROWN TO REPRESENT CENTRE COLLEGE

Centre College elected a freshman to represent Centre at the Mountain Laurel festival for the first time in the history of the Festival. Miss Margaret Brown, 18, Frankfort, Ky., was selected by the student body of the Woman's College over a number of candidates. The Mountain Laurel Festival will be held in Pineville, Kentucky, May 26, 27.

Miss Brown will compete with 12 other girls each selected from a Kentucky college for the diadem annually given to the most beautiful girl entering the contest. The Centre contestant is a brunett, about five feet eight inches tall.

Centre College's only candidate to win the crown in the past was Mrs. James T. Hatfield of Florence, Ky., who was formerly Miss Roberta Baughman. She graduated from Centre College in 1936.

All contestants for the crown will be entertained at the Queen's ball in Pineville on Friday night, May 26, and by scenic tours, a tea dance, and a formal ball held on Friday afternoon, May 26, in an open air apvilion of stone located on the side of a mountain.

The Pine Mountain Festival has been held each year since 1930 in the honor of the building of the first house in Kentucky by Dr. Thomas Walker.

CHORUS REPRESENT KY. AT CONVENTION

The A Cappella Chorus of Western Kentucky Teachers College has been selected to represent Kentucky at the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs in Baltimore, Md., Monday, May 22. The program to be given by the Western group will be broadcast over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company from 2:45 to 3:00 p. m., Central Standard Time.

The Western chorus was selected by the Kentucky Federation of Music Clubs to represent the Commonwealth and was chosen by the National Federation to sing for the NBC broadcast.

The thirty members of the Western chorus and John Vincent head of the Western Music Department, will leave for Baltiomre Friday, May 19. The group will arrive in Washington Saturady evening and on Sunday will be received at the White House by Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Ruth Harper is the featured vocalist with Reggie Childs and His Orchestra in Moonlite Gardens, the enlarged and beautified summer ballroom at Coney Island, Cincinnati, during the first two weeks of the season, starting Saturday, May 20.

ANNOUNCEMENT

After a record of three years successful management of the State Fair, as well as a lifelong active interest in farm organizations and rural problems, as well as lifelong active interest in farm organizations and rural problems, H. S. Cleveland of Henry County, has announced his candidacy for Commissioner of Agriculture, subject to the action of the Democratic party in the Democratic Party in the Kentucky Primary, August 5th.

Mr. Cleveland, who is a practical farmer and has successfulyl operated a farm near Franklin, Kentucky, for sixteen years, has been a member of the State Board of Agriculture since 1936. He became manager of the Fair Board the same year and therefore, is now making preliminary preparations for his fourth State Fair. He was elected without opposition to represent Henry and Owen Counties in the 1938 Legislature. He is a member of the Christian Church.

Mr. Cleveland is the son of Max and Martha Nichols Cleveland who operated a grocery store in Ludlow, Kenton County, for many years. Having been left an orphan at the age of seven, he was reared by distant kind on a farm in Boone county.

Mr. Cleveland worked his way through Transylvania College, being football teams, and although his college life was interrupted by service in the Army War, he attained scholastic honors, was President of the Athletic Council and Business Manager of the College Annual.

After graduation from Transylvania, Mr. Cleveland taught school fod several years and then, having married a Henry County girl, settled in Franklinton, where he and his wife and two sons now reside.

While livig in Henry County Mr. Cleveland taught school for several years, having married a Henry county girl, settled in Franklinton, where he and wife and two sons reside.

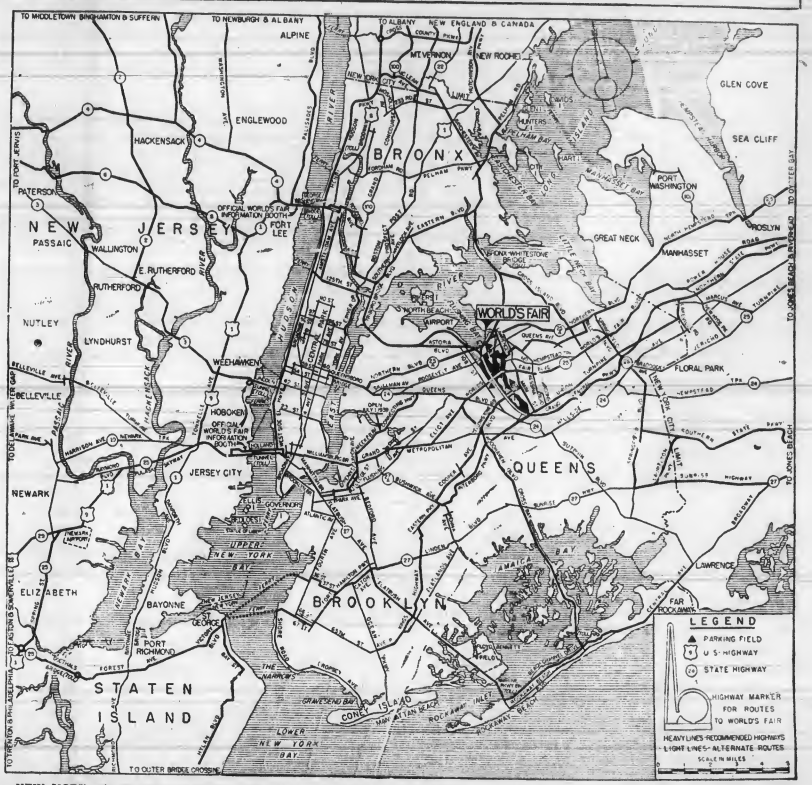
While living in Henry County Mr. Cleveland has been active in Democratic Party Council and in farm and community work. He helped organize and was elected first President of the Henry County Farm Bureau and has served on the Board of Directors of Henry County fo rmany years. He assisted Agricultural Extension Work in cooperation with the University of Kentucky and served on the County Committee of the AAA and Agricultural Conservation Program.

He has served several years on the Board of Trustees of the University of Kentucky and is now a member of the Executive Committee to bring to it the point of view of a practical farmer.

Mr. Cleveland has always been a consisent Democrat and is Chairman of the Democratic Committee in Henry County.

WORK OF EXPERIMENT STATION WITH DAIRY CATTLE RECOGNIZED

In honor of its continued progressive work with dairy catle, the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky has been granted a "Certificate of Recognition," the first to come to Kentucky. The award was made by The American Jersey Cattle Club of New York world's famous organization of cattle breeders.



The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has a long an dnotable record in constructive breeding of dairy animals. A world's record Jedsey that descended directly from a cown owned by the Kentucky Experimen: Station was the subject of special honors at the National Dairy Show at Columbus, Ohio, last year. She traced back six generation to Dollie's Valentine, a cow that produced 579 pounds of buttterfat in a year at the Kentucky Experiment Station.

The Experiment Station's breeding of Holsteins also is attracting attention. The Bureau of Dairy Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture recently recognized officially the provedsire record of Lyon Mutual Ajax 664667, whose six unselected daughters produced 13,774 pounds of milk ad 471 pounds of butterfat in 10 months, twice-a-day milking, compared ot an average of 12,278 pounds of milk and 415 pounds of fat, for 22 production records of their dams.

Two hundre dand fifty Edmonston county farmers are seeding on an average two acres each of Italian rye grass.

NEW YORK - Approved recently by Mayor F. H. La Guardia of New York City and Grover A. Whalen, President of the New York World's Fair, this map is designed to be of especial use to those motoring to the exposition. A comprehensive system of handling Fair traffic has been developed. Information booths will be found at bridge and tunnel approaches to New York. According to Mr. Whalen, out-of-town motorists will be able to thread their way through the city to the Fair grounds "as easily as they now go from home down to Main Street."

Chevrolet News

The new vacumm gearshift with steering column control has been the determining factor in the sale of more 1939 Chevrolets than has any other single advance embodied in the current models.

This fact is revealed by reports from Chevrolet's nation-wide dealer organization. Almost without exception, dealers cited the gearshift as the outstanding improvement for 1939, their opinion being based on customers' reaction rather than on their own.

Since the introduction of the 1939 models last October, the public has bought Chevrolets in such numbers as to give that company the largest percentage of the total business in the low-priced group that it has enjoyed since 1936. Registration figures, now complete for 45 states through the month of March, show Chevrolet leading the second-place car in all but two states and the District of Columbia. The latter's lead for those states totals 886 units, a figure more offset by Chevrolet's lead in any one of 10 different states. The third-place car also has a lead, year to date, in two states and the District of Columbia., but its total lead is less than Chevrolet's lead in any one of 28 different states.

Dealers were asked not only to report on buyers' reasons for choosing Chevrolet, but, insofar as possible, on their reaction after having driven the car for same time. Comment received under the latter head shows that the public has found in the vaccum gearshift advantages beyond those of safety and convenience, which were two of the primary points advanced by Chevrolet. Many owners report that this feature enables them to make long trips without the fatigue which would ordinarily follow such a period behind the wheel. The explanation seems to be that the driver can sit in a relaxed position, since the shifting operation which once required movement of the arm and the body is now accomplished with the flick of a finger, without removing the hand from the wheel.

Other major new features which figured in buyers' choice are the new knee-action, shockproof steering, and better visibility, dealers report.

KENTUCKY 4-HERS WIN NATIONAL FARM ACCOUNTING PRIZES

Sixteen Kentucky 4-H club members won cash prizes in a national farm accounting contest supervised by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, Chicago.

A prize of $25 went to Jack Brown, Caldwell county, and $10 each was won by Willis K. Crawford and Jimmie Martin, Caldwell county, and Robert Harmon, Jr., J. Cary Peterson and Crawford Burdette, Marion county.

Winners of $5 each were Marion Roberts, Bourbon county; Cotton Thompson, Marion county; Fannie E. Knuckles, Taylor county; James Bratton and Elizabeth Ann Gray, Fleming county, and Marlon Raymer, Rubby Winifred Barrow, Gladys Basham, Kenneth Webster and Calvert Sanders, Butler county.

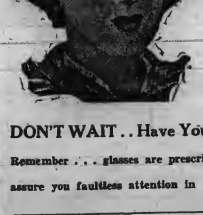
PEACE

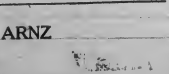
Everyone loves peace and wants it yet sometime si seems that a majority of the people crave war. "Strive for Peace" is the message coming to us daily, and yet more preparation for war is being made as each day passes. Month after month our war supplies are increasing.



If everyone could realize what pleasure and satisfaction there is in peace; if they could only see that we profit nothing by war, they would be more desirous for peace. When war occurs, vast areas of land are ruined which may take years to get into a condition in which it may be used again. The lives of thousands of women and children are wrecked; their homes have been destroyed, and they have nothing to look forward to. The majority of our young men and boys have been killed in the war. Of those that do return, many have been gassed, shell-shocked, or injured in some way so that they can not work and must receive a pension from the government in order that they may live.

Totaling all the expenses of war—the lives that are destroyed wrecked, the land that is ruined, the heart-break and the suffering from starvation—wouldn't it be much cheaper to settle these problem by some peaceful method? The many is going to be spent either to settle problems peacefully or to buy war supplies: so why not spend it peacefully?

In Germany, Hitler is complaining of the population's being too large and that more land is needed for the people; while at the same time he is urging and even paying the people to raise more children. But what mother, who is a mother wants to bring innocent babies into the world to see them killed by cannon, guns or gassed with poisonous gas as soon a they are old enough to go to war! That is exactly his reason for urging this increased population, because these children are put into military training as soon as they are large enough to tol da gun. If he did not urge this increase, there would be enough land for the population that exists. But every nation seems to want the most power and would rather fight for it than to live in peace.



We learn that government begins in the home. Whether we are taght in the home to act toward one another peacefully or hatefully will determine whether we will have a peaceful nation when we become citizens and leading workers in our government. Somefamilies are perfect examples of peace. When a problem arises, each member of the family gives his view-points concerning the question and they are considered. Then by some compromise the problem is settled peacefully. On the other hand, they are families that show very good examples of that which causes war—hatred. Each member wants the other to agree to his point of view. They take nothing into onsideration. They dispute and as a result, much hard feelingis caused among them. Our nations act in a similar way. Instead of each one giving points of view, and trying to make a compromise, they dispute without considering the problem, and go into war. The result, as has been mentioned before, is suffering—for months even years.

WE AMERICANS

Who are we American? Where did we come from? What do we believe? Where are we going are all answered in an attractive paper-bound booklet in which "the Atlantic presents We Americans." Of course it is from the Atlantic Monthly, that good old publication.

A dozen articles from authroities on different subjects furnish an examination of the races and doctrines of Germans, Italians, Jews, and various other nationalities of the great American melting pot. Religion is tracted, and the statement of the American bill of rights is brought into the picture to show what Americanism embraced when the Republic was created. "From myriad sources came the toil and talent to build these United States," says question, "who made this great America?" "The imigrants," he replies, because they came, principally from Europe by the millions to answer the cry that went up from America, "Workers! Workers! More Workers!"

H. L. Menchken, formerly editor of the American Mercury tells about the origin of names. Herbert C. Hoover's descended from the Huber family; General Pershing's ancestors were named Proersching, and Edgar Allen Poe was a descendant of the family of Poh or Plau. When Mencken edited the American Mercury he published articles by Howard F. Barker, who made a great discovery in a Government department where he had access to millions of card files of the selective draft. He measured yards, rods and perhaps miles of these cards, and made exact calculations that so many inches or names a thousand. Twenty million cards in those files smashed an old American tradition by proving that "the Smiths, Jones and Browns" were not the Big Three. He found that the order was Smith, Johnson, Brown, Williams, Jones, Miller, Davis, Anderson, Wilson and Monroe. The Cohens were second to the Smiths in New York City, the Johnsons were ahead in Chicago, and other differences existed in nationalities in every part of the United States.

"We American" justifies the hope expressed by Editor Arthur Pond of the Atlantic Monthly in presenting it that the analysis will "increase our just pride in American institutions and promate a comunderstaanding of ur uniquely varied society." What a fine hope for Tomorrow

THE MOST PRESSING PROBLEMS

The officers of one of the leading public utility companies of the nation, in their annual report to stockholders, recently said: "The problems raised by the federal power program are the most pressing now confronting the industry and its investors. .

"It is to be presumed that the objectives of both government and the utilities must be the widest possible use of electric service at the lowest possible cost—The achievement of this end and the solution of the existing problems of competition lie in cooperation between the government and the privately owned electric utilities and the coordinated use of the existing generating and transmission facilities of both. We believe that such a program would go far beyond the direct benefits which would accure and would be helpful in encouraging general business expansion and increasing employment."

One of the worst phases of the whole federally subsidized government ownership movement has been the rampant, unnecessary duplication of facilities which already existed. Town have applied for and been given federal grants and loans for the purpose of building municipal systems in spite of the fact that adequate, up-to date private companies had abundant generating and distributing equipment to serve their needs. Down in the TVA area in the Southeast, the government has built transmission lines which virtually paralled existing lines more than capable of carrying the laod. And out in the Pacfic Northwest, it is proposed to build a costly federal transmission network to carry Bonneville and Grand Coulee power—a net work which will practically blanket a territory which has been served long, well and cheaply by the private industry.

Resonsible utility executives have signified their williness to cooperate with the government dams, at rates to be approved by government officials, and to be regulated by goverment bureaus. Yet the wasteful duplication goes on—to the destruction of private enterprise, and at the expense of ever taxpayer in America.

Is it any wonder that the thinking public is becoming weary of the drive to socialize the electric industry,—and that the opinon is growing widely that fair treatment for this great industry, which under favorable conditions would spend billions of private dollars (not tax dollars) for expansion, is essential to orderly recovery?

WHAT WAY TO PROGRESS?

Business leaders from all over the country recently attended a meeting of the U. S. Chambers of Commerce in Washington and they agreed upon a program that they believed to be "The Right Road to Recovery. They outllned an intelliigent program which they believed would improve business conditions, expand employment and enlarge the national income. The meeting was attended by successful business men —many of them rich men. It is fair to presume they believe in the capitalistic system. As Americans they are honest enough to put their country's interests above their own personal concern. It any of them failed to possess that honsty they at least believed that the country must prosper first before they could hope to gain prosperity. That is horse sense.

These men expressed themselves in business enterprise will recuperate fully and meet all natonal requirements if given that have outrun the promised experimental period without very much effect in reducing many national emergencies.

The Labor Department of the Government is very partisan to union labor, and no matter how much criticism may result, the loyalt of Secretary Perkins to its ethical program is never questioned. The same loyalty should be expected from the head of the Department of Commerce. But Harry Hopkins at a press conference excorciated the Chamber for what he called its "defeatist" recovery program. He found it to be different from the "fiscal policy of the Government" and consequently he styled it as selfish. Mr. Hopkins' talk to the press was unfortunate, and entirely contradictory to his former plan for epeasement. He is young, and lets hope for better judgement for the Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

JAMES PRESTON

A Senator recently shouted during a debate on the Senate floor: "It's difference of opinion that makes horse racing." So it is that a difference of opinion appears likely to make another kind of race in Washington before Congress finally goes home for a rest.

The difference of opinion in this case will be over the subject of taxation. In Congress the opinion is growing that taxes must be reduced if recovery is to be accomplished. But in "downtown" Washington—that is, in the chambers of Brain Trust and the thinker-uppers—the opinionis still steadfast that America can spend it way out of debt and depression, with the taxpayer footing the bill.

First indication that Congress is thinking along tre lines of easing the tax burden came when the House Ways and Means Committee voted to recommendation was predicated on the belief that the American worker and employer are already over-burdened witr taxes.

The idea seems to be spreading at the Capitol, and observers who had doubted the possibility of serious consideration of general tax revision at this session are now revising their predictios and saying. "The outlook is brighter."

But, as in horse racing, there is the difference of opinion. In inner administration circles the thousands still persists that more spending must be undertaken and that present tax rates must continue or even be increased. The frist indication here was the announcement that the administration will seek to continue several "nuisance" taxes—such as the three-cent postage rate—such as the trree-cent postage rate-which had originally been levied as "emergency taxes" and which are due to expire this year.

If prfessional gamblers were betting on the outcome of the "race" the odds probably would favor the "down town horse," but it appears now that the Congressional "tax horse" will run a better race than had been expected.

Keen observers believe the tax race this season is only a preliminary to a realcontest next year, when the Congressmen may have a better chance to win the fight to reduce the National tax burden—and reduce government expenses in the same fell swoop.

EDITORIAL OF THE WEEK: "A Communist is a person who wants to eat his cake and have yours, too."—The Washington Post.

In an average session of Congress there are usully a half dozen special committees appointed to investigate this, that or something else. And as a general rule, interesting data are compiled. At this particular session of Congreess such things as theWPA the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the subversive activities of Communists, Nazis, Fascists, etc., are being studied.

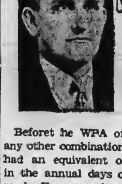
The observations of the Congressman, as he offered them before the House, offer food for thought. He actually attended numerous hearings, and came back with the declaration that the Board patently disregarded the facts in the case, and "insinuated evidence that never existed into the record."



He told of an examiner who declare a particulor law the examiner didn't like was "poppycock." He heard an Attorney of the Board brazenly admit that he premitted a witness to give false testimony because he thought it wasn't "material to the record." And he provided nunerous other examples of the same sort.

The Congressman's remarks raised quite a furore in Washington. Beyond that, they suggested to neutral observers that those who are defending the Wagner Labor Relations Act most devoutly might do well to take a little time off from shouting and tumult, and go to the actual rearings to see what the one-sided provisions of the Act have actually resulted in.

ODDITY OF THE WEEK: Secretary of Commerce Hopkins has presented an award to a trade association as the organization contributing the most to the progress of its industry during the past year. And the association winning the prize is currently under subpoena and investigation by onee of the Government bureaus!

Early in the season jarring should be done on plum or peach trees at the edge of the orchard near fencerows or woods. If curculios are found, then jarring should be continued on seleteeted trees through the orchard. This makes it possible to follow tre movements of the pest and to know whether they are abunlant enough enough to warrant spraying.

When jarring indicates curculios are present generally, spraying should start in the part of the orchard in wrich they were found first. This spray consssts of two pounds of arsenate of lead and 6 pounds of lime to 100 gallons of water. Commercial growers should refer to the Experiment Station spray schedule.

BY
Gordon Wilson, Ph.D.

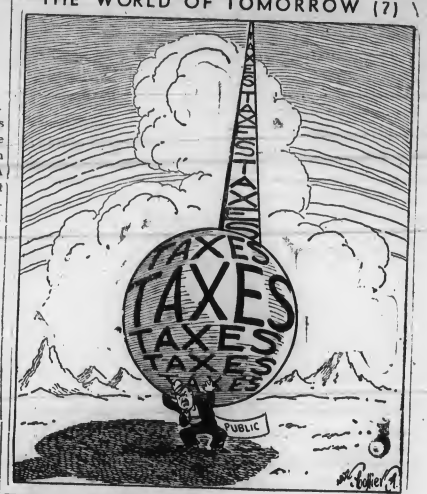
Beforet he WPA or the PWA or any other combinations of letters we had an equivalent of all of them in the annual days of working the road. Every male citizen of full-grown stature was expected to be on hand for the frolic, while he was doing his bit to keep the country running. One of the men had previously been elected boss or foreman or wratever it was called; he felt as big as a valedictorian at a high school in our time or as the chairman of a program committee on a big political rally day. We came armed with piks, shoves, and other farm tools. In smaller groups we worked along the road, filling up mudhoes, ditching the roadway so that water would run off rather down it, and accosionally straightening out some crooked stretch of highway. Sometimes we brought a plow and make ditches along the road or plowed up dirt to fill in washed places. On sidesides we labored with our picks, where the gravel was packed and hard. (I am saying we to be sociable, for I left home before I was old enough to do all these things; but I was an interested outsider.)



It is pretty hard to remember just how much good we did as laborers on the road, for the Fidelity hills washed so much that our construction work was often obliterated. Automobile tires areb road and flat, making tracks that help rather than harm freshly-plowed dirt. The buggy and wagon wheels, being much narrower, caused small ditches to appear in our drainae banks across the road, especially wren some one locked his wagon down the hills. That was al the water needed to get another gully started.

Just before I left Fidelity, there was an actual road grader that was brought into our neighborhood. It ran up and down the road, scratching up lots of dirt where it was loose but making little impression on the gravel of the hillsides. In the flat places, where the road was already pretty good, it drew in a whole bank of dirt and sand, establishing a gully that soon filled again. As the same time we actually got some dynamite, called "dymonite" by the old fellow who was a sort of country road supervisor.

With this we blew some holes in the side of a hil and broke a few window panes of the houses that were near enough. The dirt we stirred up was used to make some fills that apparentlysoon become gullies again.

The resemblance of this to alphabetical groups would not be complete without my mentioning the good times we had. Yarns that were hoary with age reappeared every road working time; new ones dribbled in from elsewhere. Practical jokes on the softer ones of the gang were always inplace. Tre water boy had to do useful service. All tools had to be sharpened often. But why repeat what is so obvious to all of us? We were working the road, not for many, but as part of our services as grown men to the government that was protecting us, th goverment for which our ancestors had fought, bled, and died. (As always, I feel that I ought to stop right here and say that my language was formed pretty largely at political speakings; hence mytendencyto get oratorical.)

Truck Drivers Conduct Own Court To Promote Safety And Courtesy

To promote safety, courtesy and service among its 200 drivers, Dixie-Ohio Express has organized its own "traffic police" and court. The organization is composed of twelve drivers, selected by their fellow employes, who sit as a court to pass upon infractions of safety laws and courtesy rules and to mete out punishment to those found guilty. The penalty for a first conviction is a week's lay-off; for a second offense, two weeks' lay-off; and for a third, dismissal from the service. There is also a system of fines, ranging from $5 up, for minor violations. Proceeds accumulated from such fines will be used once a year to supplement gifts from the company itself to reward drivers having the best record for service, courtesy and safety.

IS THE PRESIDENT FOR SENATOR BARKLEY?

Both Mr. Brown and Mr. Johnson declared themselves in their formal announcements for Senator Barkley for President. They also endorsed President's administation. Both may eventually have cause to blush behind the ears if there is any foundation to the effect that President is not for Senator Barkley for President. KENTUCKY FARMERS TO GET 9 MILLIONS

Approximately $5,000,000 has been paid to Kentucky farmers cooperating in the 1938 adjustment program and total payments for last year probably will reach nearly nine million doars, acbording to estimattes made at the State Agriculturel Adjustment Administration office at Lexington.

To date about 150,000 applications for payment have been received at the state office, and 142,000 have been checked and fowarded to Washington. Approximately 162,000 applications are expected from the 120 counties in Kentucky.

In addition to the benefit payments for last year, 2,302 cotton growers in eight Kentucky counties have received $109,454 in cotton price adjustment payments.

For this year, approximately 200,000 Kentucky farmers will be eligible for payments, it was estimated at the State Office. Payments for burley tobacco have been increased from a pound on the normal yield on the acreage allotment this year. Dark tobacco payments have been reduced from 1 1-2 cents a pound to 1.4 cents a pound.

Canada's Big Rail System Ready for Royal Tour

FOR the past two months many officers and employees of the Canadian National Railways have been busy making preparations for the part Canada's big publicly-owned rail system is to play in connection with the tour of Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, on this continent. The cars in which the King and Queen will ride, as well as some of the other units of the Royal Train, have been redecorated and refitted in the shops of the railway. The train has been painted Royal blue with silver and gold trim. Five giant C. N. R. locomotives, to be used on the Royal Tour, have been completely overhauled and repainted in the Royal colors. The dining car department of the National System will have full charge of the catering for the Royal Train both throughout Canada and during the visit to the United States.

More than 2,000 employees, from vice-presidents down to car cleaners, will be engaged in the operation and servicing of the train over Canadian National lines.

Special functions in connection with the tour are to be held at hotels operated by the railway and members of the hotel staffs have been specially trained for these occasions.

The pictures show: Jasper Park Lodge in Jasper National Park where the King and Queen will rest on June 1 and 2 during their journey through the Canadian Rockies —The Prince Robert, flagship of the railway's Alaska fleet, which will convey the Royal Party from Victoria to Vancouver, B.C., and James P. Morgan, the railway's chef instructor, who has been selected as chef for Their Majesties and who will prepare the meals in the special car in which they will dine.

RAILROAD NEWS

Americ's railroads achieved their best general safety record in 50 years in 1938, according to the May 1939 issue of the L. & N. Employes Magazine.

Train accidents per train mile operated were lower than ever; fatalities to employes on duty decreased from 1,348 in 1929, for example, to 479 in 1938 and there sibeable reductions in non-fatal injuries to employes, fatalities at highway-grade crossings and casualties to trespassers on railroad property, as compared with previous year.

A comparison of 1938 with 1937 reveals that total fatal and non-aftal casualities of all sorts to passengers, employes, peroons involved in highway-railroad grade crossing accidents and trespassers—decreased as much as 64.6 per cent in some cases.

The figures are fatal injuries of all sorts in 1938 as compared with 1937—15.9 per cent reduction; non-fatal injuries in 1938 as compared with 1937— 25.7 per cent lower; fatal injuries in 1938 as compared with 1929—30.7 per cent decrease; non-fatal injuries in 1938 as compared with 1929—64.6 per cent reduction.

The first through train to operate over the lines of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, btween Louisville, made its epoch-making jaunt on October 27, 1859, nearv 80 years ago according to the May issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine. It took about ten hours to make the 187-mile trip between the two cities, leaving Louisville early in the morning and being greeted enthusiastically all along the inlong the line. Engineering marvels encountered were the crossing of Muldraug's Hill, near Elizabetrtown, Ky., the gigantic bridge over Green River, near Munfordville, Ky., and the twin tunnels, near Fountain Head, Tenn. and freight was commenced on October 31, 1859.

Corbin, Ky., junction point of the K. & A., C. V. and Cincinnati Divisions of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, will be host city to that railroad's veterandom on June 17 and 18, it is announced in the May issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine. I't is expected that more than a thousand veterans and members of their families from many cities on the L. & N. System will attend the two-day celebration, the 13th in the history of the L. & N. Veterans' Club.

Railroad employes are noted for the records which they establisr of long and faithful service and it is reported in the L. & N. Employes' Magazine that one 50-year button, two 45-year buttons, nineteen 25-year buttons and several score 15-year buttons, emblematic of like periods of service, were awarded employes just recently.

A. R. Wissinger, engineer, Birmingham, Ala., received a diamond (50-year) button and A. B. Falkner, engineer, Nashville, Tenn., and E. S. Shively, section foreman, Campbellsville, Ky., received 45-year buttons.

The Richard Montfort Scholarship of approximately $150.00 in the Speed Scientific School of the University of Louisville is given annually, it is reported in the L. & N. Employes' Magazine, to some son of an L. & N. Railroad employe, whether serving or retried or dead, who has resided at some time in Jefferson County, Ky.

The Scholarship is awarded on the basis of scholarship need and engineering aptitude. Competitive examinations will be held this year at the Speed Schientific School, 3rd Street and Eastern Parway, Louisville, Ky., on June 15, 1939. It is revealed that the Scholarship is made possible through the generosity of the late Richard Montfort, former chief engineer and late consulting engineer of the L. & N. who established a fund for the purpose in 1925.

Living up the proud boast of the railroads that they can move mountains and mole-hills with equal facility, the Louisville & Nashville Railroads recently handled what was said to be the largest tank ever shipped by rail, a giant gasoline fractionating column built by the J. P. Devine Manufacturing Company at Mt. Vernon, Ill. It moved over the lines of the L. & N. from that point to East St. Louis, Ill., it being necessary to temporarily revise the clearances at a number of points to permit the passage of the tank, which measured 52 feet, 9 3-4 inches in length, 16 feet in diameeter and which weighed 150,000 pounds. It was mounted on a 65-foot flat car and moved by special train.

The soft coal deadlock had an adverse effect upon the carloadings of the L. & N. Railroad, it is reported in the May 1939 issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine, with the result that total cars handled in April 1939 reistered only 55.6 per cent of normal, a drop of 7.0 points under April 1938. Only 78,354 cars were handled in April 1939 as compared with 108,175 in March 1939 and 88,370 in April 1938.

Freight, other than coal and freight received from connection, showed some increase, it was reported, with the total loaded cars handled in the first four months of 1939 registering 67.8 per cent of normal, as compared with 63.0 per cent of normal for the correspoing period in 1938.

JARRING CONTROLS

Curculio, already found on plums, peacres and cherries in Western Kentucky, may be controlled by spraying with arsenate or lead or by jarring them of the trees, says P. O. Ritcher of the University of Kentucky Experiment Station. Long before sprays were invented, growers cintrolled curculios by daily parring of the trees, and he suggests that owners of only a few trees who do ot wish to spray onntinue this method.

Spraying with arsenate of lead kills many adult curculies when applied soon after peach schuck fall and again two weeks later. Some growers spray without regard to the presence of curculies. Others praotice parring to see if the pest is present, before spraying, and this is what more growers should do, says Ritcher.

Jarring is done by spreading a canvas or sheet under tre tree and then striging limbs several blows with a padded mallet or end of a by 4 well padded. The adult curculios fall on the sheet, and then should be

Parker W. Duncan Campagin Manager

Parker W. Duncan, Monticello, was appointed chairman of the Young Democratic Organization for John Young Brown, caddate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, it was announced Wednesday by Mr. Brown's Headquarters in the Seelbach.

Mr. Duncan, former county attorney of Wayne County and present city attorney of Monticello, has taken a leading part in the Young Democratic Orgaizations and last summer successfully managed the Young Democrati Organization for Senator Alben W. Barkley.

It also was announced that Mrs. Helena Bottorf, Louisville, has been appointed secretary of the Brown Campaign Committee. Mrs. Bottorf also was connected with Senator Barkley last year.

He stated that the election of Mr. Brown's opponent will mean a continuace anti-New Deal and antiliberal.

"I feel that the nomination and election of John Youg Brown will assure the State of Kentucky an efficient administration that coincides with the policies of the National administration and the humanitarian governmental philosophy of Sanetor Barkley," Mr. Duncan said.

He added that he had enough pride in the State of Kentucky to feel that it deserved much better than the present State administration had given it. He said this besons who wroked for and supported Senator Barkley.

In conclusion Mr. Duncan stated he had received communications for Barkley and that "almost to a man," they had expressed their support of Mr. Brown.

Meanwhile Mr. Brown was continuing his campaign for the governorship. With his campaign manager, Frederick A. Wallis, former director of Welfare, he toured the first and second Congressional districts Monday and Tuesday.

At each point they stopped, Mr. Brown was given assurance of the support of leaders in these sections.

The party stopped at Elkton, Hopkinsville, Cadis, Murray, Benton, Paducah, Kovil, LaCenter, Barlow, Wickliffe, Bardwell, Arlington, Clinton, Hickman, Fulton and Mayfield.

Speaking at a banquet of the Kentucky League of Women Voters in Louisville, Mr. Brown explained his platform and later the League went on record as favoring home rule for cities and towns, expressed support for Federal and State Civil Service and pledged to work for the best possible admiistration of the Chandler–Wallis Act.

In his address Mr. Brown explained that he favored civil service for State employees. Home rule and taking of charitable and penal institutions from political domination are also in the candidate's platform.

"There isn't any reason in the world why a civil service administration would not work for the State of Kentucky if given a chance, "he told the women voters.

"Kentucky needs to write a real modern civil service law to bolster up the meritprovisions of the 1936 act and to forget the standards of merit which involve only the question of whether a given applicant has carried his precinct or not, "Mr Brown stated.

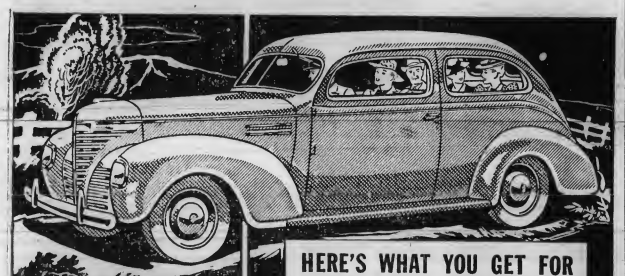
WITH THE REDS

There are no soft spots in this hetic National League race. At least, the Cincinnati Reds haven't been able to find any. And so all they have to look forward to this coming week is another bit of feverish activity against the toughest of their foes.

They were to close their three game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers at Crosley Field Tuesday, engage the New York Giants in a two game series Wednesday and Thursday, then move to St. Louis for four games in three days there, the double header being scheduled for Sunday.



Manday they will be back in their own orchard against the pennant defending Chicago Cubs, then will engage these same Cubs in morning and afternoon games on Tuesday, Memorial Day. The morning game will start at 10 o'clock and the afternoon game will get under way at 3 p. m.

The Giants gave the Reds a pretty tough dose in New York a short time ago, whipping them in two straight games. It is natural for the Reds to look for revenge, particularly with each game meaning as much as it does in this hot race. Second game of the Giant series, Thursday, will be ladies' day.

Following the Memorial Day against the Cubs, the Reds will take to the road until June 14, when they will return for a long home stay. On June 15, they will play their first night game of the season against the Philadelphia Phillies.

Tickets fo all future Redleg games may be reserved by writing Henry Straus Co., Sixth and Walnut Streets Cincinnati. In cases where reservations are accompanied by money orders, tickets will be sent you by return mail.

WOULD PRESERVE CHEAP EGGS FOR USE NEXT WINTER

Eggs are so cheap on farms in Kentucky this spring that J. E. Humphrey of the State College of Agriculture at Lexington is urging housewives to preserve them for use next fall and winter wren they may be worth twice as much or even more.

Use only fresh eggs with sound shells, says Mr. Hmphrey. The eggs may be placed in the solution as they are gathered, with the little end end down. A plate or cover may be placed over the eggs to prevent their coming to the surface. Cover the vessel to prevent undue evaporation and store in a cool place. Examine the vessels occasionaly and add more water if necessary. In the event that eggs preserved by this method are used for boiling, a pin hole should be made in the large end.

By John S. Gardner,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

The vine crops comprise cumbers, squashes, cantaloupes and watermelons. Because they resemble each other throughout, they can well be discussed together.

In their fertility requirements, all are just medium, about that needed for 30 bushel corn. Gardens that have been given 10 tons of manure and 300 pounds of superphosphate, acre rates, should grow these crops well. If commercial fertilizer is to be depended upon, it should be 4 12 4. 500 pounds per acre.

Watermelons, cushaws and other running squashes as well as the larger cantaloupes should be put in "hills," spaced in squares, two plants each, of from 10 feet to 6 feet, but the others are best raised in continuous rows, 3 feet apart for bush squash and cucumbers and 4 to 5 feet for cantaloupes, with a final stand of 18 inches. Manure may be put under the seed or not, but the roots soon reach the soil beyond.

The average time for starting all the vine crops is May to May 15.

As for varieties to use, the choice is legion, but these are generally accepted in Kentucky as suitable:

Cucumbers for slicing, any white-spine; for pickling, any black spine; or for both, the dual purpose Long Green.

Squashes.—As "cymbilings," White Bush (patty pan) or Garden Summer Straightneck. An excellent cymbling is Acorn, which when mature, makes a superior squash for winter storing. For baking, Green Cushaw is most popular, in late summer and for winter, but Kitchenette, or any of the "Marrow" types, or Essex Hybrid, excel, too. For winter storing, under conditions Cushaw might fail to keep, any of the Hubbard types are suggested as having "character" and flavor no other squashes have. Of cantaloupes, the netted gem sorts still continue the most popular, but Honey Ball, containing Casaba "blood" is coming to the fore. For later cantaloupes, Tip Top cannot be beat except possibly by Bender's Surprise, somewhat more uniform than its Tip Top parent.

Of watermelons, Stone Mountain is best, in this writer's opinion, though Kleckley and Dixie Queen and Thurmond's Grey have their protagonists. Growers whose watermelons succumb to the wilt disease, carried in the soil, will be glad to learn that wilt resistant strains of both Stone Mountain and Kleckley may be had at the larger seed houses.

The two main insect pests are plant lice and the stripped cucumber bettle, with sometimes the spotted cucumber beetle doing a slight damage. The control of these insects is detailed in Kentucky Extension Circular No. 309 ..

Disease common to all vine crops is blight, which causes the leaves ti blacken and drop off. Its control is effected by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, described earlier in this column, and in Circular No. 309.

A serious disease of watermelons but attacking none of the other vine crops, is wilt, described above where watermelon varieties were named.

THE FARM AND HOME

Pigs often suffer more from lack of water than from lack of feed. Plenty of clean, fresh water should be kept within easy reach of al kind of livestock. Good water increases egg production since eggs are mostly water.

Vegetables do better on deeply plowed soil. Some professional gard eners plow 14 inches deep, but yo inches is a good depth. A loose soil is needed to grow shapely root pegetable and potatoes.To have quality, pegetables must grow quickly.

Young trees set last year will grow better if the soil is cultivated about the middle for at least 2 feet. This will keep down weeds and grass, which asorb much moisture. Keep this area stirred until mid-summer and then apply a mulch.

The farm home water system serving kitchen, bathroom and laundry should provide 30 to 40 gallons of water per person per day. Sewage disposal should behad through a carefully constructed septi tank.

Whipping cream cake: Mix anl sift 1½ cups of flour, 2 teaspoonsful of baking powder and ½ teaspoon of salt. Whip cup of cream, add cup of sugar gradually, beating constantly. Fold dry ingredients into cream mixture, and bake in layers or cup cakes in moderate oven.

Dry mash for chicks: 70 pounds of yellow corn meal, 25 pounds of shorts or middlings, 10 pounds of meat scrap and a pound of salt. If milk is fed, use 2 pounds of steamed bone meal instead of meat scrap.

Twenty four 4-H club members in Shelby county own 35 head of high producing dairy animals.

Henry Ford Expresses Confidence In Youth

"GREATER progress lies ahead in the next fifty years than we've had in the last thousand," according to Henry Ford in the June Cosmopolitan. "Young people say there are no opportunities today. Why the world's opportunities are just beginning to break. The young folks of today are going to reduce prices, raise wages and increase production. That's the task youth has ahead and youth will do it. It always has." Ford backs this confidence with a $35,000,000 expansion program, planned and announced when the recession was at its height.

Henry Ford (left) and H. G. Wells — Prophets of Progress

Henry Ford and His First Car

He believes that the World's Fairs of 1939 in San Francisco and New York will do much to stimulate ideas among young people. At these fairs the younger generation can see how each manufacturer does his job and the education provided should inspire youth to revolutionize American life, just as Ford himself was inspired when he visited the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 and saw a gasoline engine, mounted on a two-wheel cart and used for pumping water. This was the first gasoline engine he had ever seen which was used for power and he returned to Detroit, fired with the dream of a gasoline-driven horseless carriage. He built an engine which ultimately revolutionized modern transportation.

Henry Ford advises young Fair visitors to look for anything which will set their minds to working constructively. Imagination is the principle requirement for new invention, for when the imagination is excited people soon sense what is necessary for a better world and find ways to provide it. He also indicates that developments in mechanical farming offer great possibilities to today's youth. All kinds of inventions are needed on the farm and he predicts that in the coming year greater things will be done in the field of mechanical farming than have ever been done before.

"Farming should hold a double interest for today's young people," Ford continues, "that involved with providing better food and more food at lower prices, and at the same time, products for industrial use. The farm and the shop each need what the other produces. Real prosperity will come with farm prosperity because the farmer is the greatest buyer of manufactured goods. Industry suffers when the farmer is short on cash." Ford practices what he preaches. Each year greater and greater tonnages of raw materials, grown on American farms, are used in his plants.

We are seeing the death of an epoch, Ford declares, but it is also the birth of a new epoch which will be far greater. He calls it the Agrindustrial Age and predicts that it will alter our civilization, revolutionize industry and agriculture, bring the city worker and the farmer into closer contact and better understanding.

Kentucky Politices

By Tyler Munford

Louisvili continues to loom as an all-important factor in the present Democratic gubernatorial primary. Three months ago one of the state's better known political writers said that the candidate who carried Louisville would win the nomination. Since that time the Democratic organization here has undergone an entire change in personnel, and with out exception each change has been favorable to Keen Johnson candidacy.

As early as a month ago it was evident that Keen Johnson had the Louisville situation well in hand. That was before the Louisville organazation was definitely set as to administration. At that time it appeared that Johnson's only chance of losing ground in Jefferson County was contingent upon Mayor Scholtz losing his fight to reorganize party complete victory left Brown without a major contact for organization, and in this metropolitan area organization is the most necessary phase of a political campaign. Political observers anticipate a coalition between the minority opposing the Mayor's program and Brown, ubt this week it was definitely learned that these few leaders would not interest themselves in the gubernatorial fight.

Brown's handlers are known to have made three attempts to secure the support of E. Leland Taylor, head of the faction that bore his name in the inter-party fight with the late Col. M. J. Brennan. Mr. Taylor not only refused, but has declared his allegiance to the Johnson candidacy. As a result of the Mayor's reorganization, the Taylor faction has joined with the regular Democratic organization, and under the direction of Tom Burke, John Barry, Clem Theisen and John Dugan, all officers of thenew organizatio, the party here is again united.

So today the most certain thing in the Democratic contest for Governor is that Keen Johnson will carry Jefferson County by a majority of not less than 15,000.

CONGRESSMEN SAID TO BE FOR JOHNSON

Thomas R. Underwood, editor of Kentucky's best informed political writers, say that "all eight of Kentucky's Democratic Congressmen are understood to be for Johnson, the only question being whether they will endorse him in a formal sort of way merely continue their support of him through their organizations."

Mr. Underwood points out that "political observers say the Congressmen 'never miss' on a race of this kind, and it is known that the campaign organization which Mr. Johnson was forming before his formal announcement was made largely upon the advice of the Congressmen and their leading friends in their districts . . . ."

This observation is significant in view of the generally accepted opinion that Senator Barkley will take a position in the state race. It is further proof that alignment of last year's senatorial race will not hold in this year's contest for governor. Last summer the congressional delegation supported Barkley, and as a result he had the advantage of congressional patronage which incidentally is more extensive than senatorial patronage. This summer Brown is running without the support of a single congressional or-abolue reversal of the Louisville situation over last summer, deprives Brown of the two major influences Tom Rhea counted on to win this year's election.

That the Louisville situation is rankling Rhea is evident in statements made by him last week while traveling with Mr. Brown and Fred Wallis in the First and Second Districts. Newspapers there quoted him him as saying Brown would carry Louisville by a larger majority than Barkley did last year. The Russellville politician is probably as far wrong in guaging public sentiment in Jefferson County in the primary contest as he was in analyzing public sentiment in Kentucky on the popularity of his pot tax program—the old retail sales tax levy.

Actually, one of the big Brown troubles with the rank and file in Louisville is Mr. Rhea himself. His ill-time speech of 1936 when he openly bolted the party and charged his defeat in that primary to the "militant force" of a religious group is still fresh in the minds of Louisvillians who affiliate with that church.

Home demonstration work has resulted in smaller kitchens, when houses are remodeled in Bell county.

Members of the homemakers clubs in Ohio county this year made a study of gardening, including the use of fertilizers and the growing of "new" vegetables.

WITH THE REDS

BUCKY WALTERS FLASHES CHAMPIONSHIP FORM

Manager Bill McKechnie usually smiles when he sends Bucky Walters to the mound, confident that he will get a well-pitched game. Five times Walters has started games this season, and five times has has finished. On four of thee occasions he was victorious, but because he dropped a pair of games early in the year while filling in as a relief pitcher, his record reads 4 win to 3 defeats.

Walters made his first start the third day of the season and whipped the pesky Pirates, 7 to 2. Five days later he repeated the dose, 5 to 3. In his next time out the Boston Bees were his victims, 6 to 4. The Dolgans nosed him out, 4 to 3 for his only defeat in a starting role, but he came back Wednesday and stung the Bees again 6 to 1.

Bucky is not a weak sister with the willow either, and this, combined with his fielding ability, enhances his effectiveness. He made three hits in his last game and fielded five chances perfectly.

Obtained from the Phillies in a deal last June, Walters won 11 and dropped 6 with the Reds during the balance of last season. He has been playing professionally since 1929, but it was not until 1934 that Jimmy Wilson, now a Redleg coach, but then manager of the Phils, converted him from an infielder into a hurler.

PAUL DERRINGER HURLING IN SPLENDID STYLE

Paul Derringer seems headed for one of his greatest years, if his work in his first six games can be used as a criterion. The big righthander has now won four gamesagainst only one reverse. In his last effort, Friday, he had to go twelve rounds before beating Max Butcher and the Phils, 4 to 3.

Derringer's great control is the reason for his success. He usually keeps ahead of the hitter, and pitches his games in a workmanlike manner. Another reason for his success is the fact that he usually gets better as the game gets older.

Paul has been the pitching mainstay of the Reds ever since he came to the club in May 1933 in a big deal with St. Louis Cardinals. Since that time he has been one of the league's most consistent pitchers.

Last year Paul stood second in the league in pitching effectiviness, and he and Bill Lee, of the Cubs were the only hurlers to win 20 games or more. He won 21.

SHOWING OF LEE GRISSOM STRENGTHENS REDS' HURLING

National League clubs are moaning again because Lee Grisom, one of the sensations of the 1937 season, has resumed his winning ways. Lee was on the injured list most of last year, first with a lame arm and then with an injury to his leg, but this spring he reported in sound physical condition and he is off to a good start in the current campaign.

His most recent triumph was a 4 to 1 victory over the Boston Bees, a club which has never defeated times. Previous to this he had trounced them five times. Previous to this he had submerged the Phils. His only defeat was a heart-breaking, 1 to0 setback in a duel with Curt Davis, of the Cards.

Lee won 12 and lost 17 for the lastplace Reds of 1937. He pitched in the All-Star game of that year and hurled five shutouts. In one of his games he allowed just one hit, but lost the ball game.

Grisson is a big fellow, standing 6 feet 2 and weighing 200. This is his sixth year of hurling.

CUBS HERE FOR TWO GAMES MEMORIAL DAY

The Reds will celebrate Memorial Day by meeting the Chicago Cubs in two games at Crosley Field. The first tilt will get underway at 10 a. m. and the matinee is scheduled for 3 p. m.

These meetings with the Bruins will close a three-game series at Crosley Field which starts with a single game on Monday, May 29.

Gabby Hartnett's club has undergone wholesale changes in the lineup this season, as the popular Bruin pilot is rallying his forces to defend their National League championship .Principal shift has brought Hank Leiber, Dick Bartell, and Gus Mancuso into Chicago livery to take the places of Frank Demaree, Bill Jurgess and Ken O'Dea. Other newcomers to Cub spangles include first-baseman Glen Russell, outfielder Jim Geeson and pitcher Gene Lillard, who had a former trial with the club as an outfielder.

Rivalry between the Reds and Cubs is of the keenest variety. The teams have met annually ever since the National League 1st opened in 1876. So ar this year the Reds and Bruins have met on two occasions, with the Reds winning both battles. But they were hard-fought affairs.

JOHNY VANDER MEER REGAINS HIS PITCHING MASTERY

Johnny Vander Meer, sensational Redleg southpaw who last year tossed two successive no-hit games and who won 9 consecutive victories, won two well-pitched games last week to indicate that he has resumed his winning clip. Vandy missed much of spring training this season because of an attack of influenza and an inflamed appedix ad as a result, he had diffulty in getting started. But once the blond master of the mound got under way, his opponents began to writhe in agony as of old.

When he took the hill on May 13, it marked his fifth starting effort. On that day he hooked up with Bob Welland, ofthe Cards, in a stirring mound duel that Johnny won, 2 to1. He started again Friday and beat the Bees, 3 to 2, protecting a one run dead during the last seven innings. He allowed just six hits in each game and fanned 15 men in the two batths.

Vandy got off to a slow start last season also, but he closed the year with 15 wins against 10 set-backs. He i starting his seventh year as a professional pitcher, but this is only his second full season as a major leaguer.

ERNIE LOMBARDI SOCKING WITH OLDTIME VIGOR

If there were any doubts that Ernie Lombardi was going to have a good year at the plate, they are now dispelled. The leading hitter, and Most Valuable Player in the National League came out of his brief slump this week with a bang and exploded base hits all over Crosley Field.

Lombardi most important blow was home run over the left field fence in the twelfth inning Friday. That smash won the game for Paul Derringer, 4 to 3. He had also hit one over the same fence the day before to give the Reds the winning margin over the Boston Bees, 3 to2.

Ernie hit 19 homers last season, and he is outto improve that mark. He is one of the league's classiess clouters, and has no apparent weakness.

Lom is a big favorite with all the Reds. He is the oldest man onthe club in point of service, having donned a Cincinnati uniform for the first time in 1932.

BILL WERBER PROVES ABILITY AS OUTSTANDING

Bill Werber is being called the best Redleg lead-off man since Hughie Critz' as a result of his remarkable record for getting on base.

Including all games played thru Friday Werber has faced pitchers 125 times. He reached firstbase safely on 62 occasions, or just short of half the times he batted. These 62 occasions include 33 hits and 21 bases on balls.

One of the fastest men in baseball, Werber has other great assets. He has a keen eye and doesn't offer at many bad pitches. He is apt to hit to all fields and he hits safely frequently.

In 1934 Werber had his greatest year to date, getting 200 hits and stealing 40 bases for the Boston Red Sox. He was later traded to the Philadephia Athletics for Pinky Higgins, and came to the Reds this spring.

BILL McKECHNIE TO TEACH BASEBALL AT WORLD'S FAIR

Bil McKechnie will be one of the baseball teachers at the World's Fair this summer, where lessons in baseball technique will be given daily to boys fortunate enough to be at the fair.

Classes will be conducted in the Court of Sport, adjoining the official sport building at the Fair, which is located on the main esplanade.

Boys who do not live in the New York area, but who wil be in New York for a short while may attend any class. They may secure application blanks from Director of Sports, World's Fair, New York.

In addition to McKechnie, other major league managers will be among the instructors and 'Babe Ruth' will also be on hand to teach the game.

REDS SOON TO START SECOND EASTERN TRIP

Following the Memorial Day games with the Cubs, the Reds will be off on their second tour of the East, a journey that, weather permitting, will inculde a even dozen games.

First they will visit Boston for three games in as many days, starting June 1. From there the scene shifts to the Polo Grounds for three games with the Giants on June 4, 5 and 6.

On June 7 they will be in Philadelphia, and on June 8 they will meet the Phillies in a night game. This will be the first night game played by the Reds this season, and the first they ever will have played in Philadelphia.

The tour will close in Brooklyn, where the Reds meet the Dodgers in four games. Single games are to be played on June 10 and 12, and on June 11 the Reds will meet the Dodgers in a double-header.

BEAVER LICK

Mrs. Lighter of Shelbyville is enjoyng a visit with her daughter Mrs. John Orr and Mr. Orr.

Mrs. Emma Seek has returned to her home at Florence after spending the winter months here with her daughter, Mrs. J. E. McCabe.

Mrs. Russell Brown was in Cincinnati Monday having dental work done.

Henry Sieet was operated on Monday at St. Elizabeth Hospital for an infected tooth. Last reports he was getting along nicely.

The revival services at the Baptist church closed Friday night. Two new members, Mr. and Mrs. Raisor were added to the church and we feel that all were benefited by Rev. Brown's fine sermons. Rev. Johnson will conduct regular services at the church, Sunday, May 21st at 2:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green and son, William Huey Green entertained with a family dinner, Sunday hooring the birthday of Mrs. Green's father, R. L. Huey. Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Huey, Mr. and Mrs. J E. Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Detmer and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Smith and son, Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Rouse, Dr. Virgil Rouse and fiancee, Miss Rosemary Clinkscale and Layton Rouse.

STOCK MARKET EXPERTS SPEAK

Speaking of stock market experts and investment counsellors, Robert Rhea says, "There are merchants who will carefully investigate the credit and background of a new customer who wants a $500 line of credit, yet these same men sometimes risk ten or a hundred times that amount on the advice of some self-styled 'expert' without making an investigation whatever. The thought is submitted that any expert on Dow's theory, or any other phase of speculation or investment, who has not personaly accumulated at east a modest fortune, is hardly the man to look after the funds accumulated by someone else. It is not difficult to obtain accurate information concerning one's background and responsibility."

Our suspicion is that when a man wants to speculate, he steers shy of responsible experts. He is fearful that he will be warned against the risks involved. He wants assurance that this greed is an expression of intelligence. The best source of such assurance is an immature graduate of a school of business administration or a veteran of the school for crooks. They will promise enormous profits under a system that involves no risks to principal.

New laws will not elminate this evil. When people are after easy money they will find some way to evade aws set up for their protection.

"Washington soft snaps" would be a considerably longer column than "Washington snap shots" which now runs in the press.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Italian rye grass seeded last fall is doing well on good land in Knox county.

A tree-setting campaign resulted in planting 23,000 locust and 500 poplar trees in Butler county.

GRANT MURDER PLOT UNFOLDED

A cold-blooded plot to kill a Grant county farmer and rob him of his money was unfolded at Williamstown today by County Attorney L. G. Tuckker and Deputy Sheriff Lewis Henderson following the arrest of two men and a woman in connection with the brutal beating of 62 year old Robert Ewing.

The aged farmer is in St. Elizabth Hospital, Covington, suffering a badly battered head and a possible skull frature. His condition is serious.

According to the statemen the they have signed, they had planned robbing Ewing for some time. Saturday the opportunity presented itself. Mr. Ewing had sold seven lambs and wool and was met by the trio.

A ride from cafe to cafe from Covington to Georgetown followed, Ewing became drunk while the others remained comparatively sober. Sunday night, according to the confession as quoted by police, the three decided to hit Ewing in the head, weight his body down and throw it in Eagle Creek, a popular central Kentucky fishing stream.

A short distance from Williamstown they were said to have struck him in the head with a rank handle. The car was then driven toward Eagle Creek, along the Heekin Road. Just a few minutes before the creek banks were reached the lights on the car went out. Unable to continue their journey and complete their plans, the three are said to have jumped fromthe car, left the motor running and pushed it down a hill. This was to give Ewing's death the appearance of an auto mishap.

They then fled the scene.

Some hours later, Ewing drenched from Sunday night's thunderstorm, was found on the porch of Sergt. Roy Osborne's home (Osborne is a member of the State Highway Patrol).

Osborne removed the man to the office of Dr R. E. Kinsley who administered first aid and then sent him to the Covington hospital.

First break on the case came Monday morning when it was reported to the sheriff's office that Ashcraft had been seen with Ewing. From him the officers obtained the information involving Evans and his wife. Deputies Henderson and Lawrence Caldwell, alded by state police, captured Evans and his wife at the to-board a southbond freight train. With them was their 3-year old son, Martin Reese Evans.

An examining trial has been postponed pending the outcome of Ewing's injuries, Mr. Tucker said.

The Evans family was once tenants of Ewing and was dispossessed.

The young husband is well known to the sheriff's office. Several years ago, he was said to have attacked his father with a hammer. He also was acused in an attack on a neighbor.

FIRST TOBACCO SETTING MONDAY

The rains over the weekend started the first setting of tobacco on Monday of this week, William Hill of near Idlewild and Ed. Easton of near Burlington were two growers who reported setting tobacco on Monday morning.

The rains were reported a big help to the hay and grass crops.

Omer Cleek of Walton reports 375 western breeding ewes sheared approximately 8 pounds of wool per head. Mrs. Cleek plans to supply Boone county farmers with several hundred head of approved Black-Faced Western breeding ewes this year. Prospective purchasers are urged to buy early.

The Boone County ACP committee will meet Wednesday, May 31st at 2:00 p. m. to adjust the 1940 farm yields on farms with commercial wheat yields. Farmers with special problems might meet with the committee at 1:00 p. m. on that date

The county livestock tour of the Cincinnati Markets and packing plants will be held June 9th.

Grapes should have two Bordeau sprays before bloom to contral rot in the mature fruit. Secure spray schedules at the county office.

VERONA NINE WIN AGAIN

The Verona Baseball team defeated the "Question Marks", a Covington team 9-3. The game was a well played game by the Verona lads, who allowed only 6 hits to be made against them.

The highlight of the game was the pitching of McClure and Petty, who started in the fifth and struckout four men. McClure and Petty together struckout eleven men, while the opposing team got three strikeouts.

The Verona Baseball team is having a big jamboree at the Verona School auditorium, June 15. Listen in at WCPO every morning, except Sunday from 6:30 to 6:00 and they will give you details about it.

The Verona boys will hit stiffer competition Sunday when they play Ratman's Garage, a team who is considered among the best in the league.

Farrell--Henry

The marriage of Dorothy Farrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Farrell of Danville, Kentucky and Charles Mrs A. T. Henry formerly of Walton, was quietly married at the beautiful home of Mr and Mrs R. A.Henry, brother of the groom, 155 Arcadia Park, Lexington. Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends were present.

Rev. Henry of Georgetown was the officiating minister.

The bridal pair were married before an improvised altar of ferns, palms and candelabra, and bbeautiful baskets of flowers.

Russell Henry was his brother's best man.

After the ceremony they were served a delightful dinner. The dining room was beautiful decorated decorated by a large three-tiered cake which was cut by the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry left for a short motor trip north and upon their return they will be at home in Arcadia Park.

AT THE JAMES

FRIDAY AN SATURDAY, JUNE, 2ND AND 3RD.—

The story of Alexander Graham Bell—With Don Ameche-Loretta Young-Henry Fonda. Another immoral character joins the motion picture gallery of The great—at his side the woman who loved him and gave his greatness. The dramatic romance of one who dreamed and struggled, loved and achieved. Simple, human, inspiring—A magnificent motion picture pay homage to his genius and to woman's devotion.

SUNDAY, JUNE, 4TH:—

Zenobia—with Oliver Hardy-Hary Langdon-Billie Burke-Alice Brady. Call her fickle—call her unfair. Yet try to deny her innocent stare. She's just a bit naughty—just a bit nice. Part of her sweetness—the rest of her spice. She'll have you in stitches —head in a whirl. You'll say she's no lady, but, oh, what a girl.

MONDAY, JUNE, 5TH:—

Chasing Danger—With Preston Foster-Lynn Bari-Wally Vernon. While the world sits on a powder keg—they chase a dame. These camera dare Devils roar in where brave men fear to tread—matching wits with spies and lips with sirens—in a story jam-packed with action, laughs, and red-blooded thrills.

TUESDAY, JUNE 6TH.—

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7TH:—

Women in the Wind—With Kay Francis-William Gargan-Victor Jory A smile for fate—A wink at death—A kiss for the Devil. That's the reckless motto of the Dawn Patrol of Women. They do the things other Women dream of. They dream of the love other women have.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8TH:—

The Three Musketeers—With Don Ameche-Ritz Brothers-Binnie Barnes-Gloria Stuart riding with songs and sword play. Riotous with fun and horseplay. Don Ameche as a singing, loving, fighting D'Artagnan and the Ritz Brothers, Phoney musketeers more at home with a carving knife than a sword.

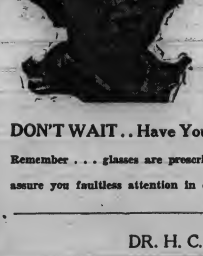
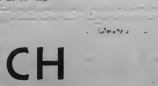
Capable teachers, a beneficial program each day and a morning well spent that your child cannot afford to miss. We had an average attendnce of one hundred and fifteen boys and girls last year and we hope there will be even more this year. If teachers and pastor are willing to give their time free to help, won't you co-operate and send your children. The school will close on Sunday night, June 18, with a commencement program, diplomas exbits of the word done and proud parents. We do not limit this school to the Baptist, but invite others if they care to attend.



TAPS—

As the last strains of "Taps" floated out over the rows of crosses and died out among the distant hills the world again returned from the thoughts of the dead to the living, wondering whether or not another Memorial Day would find us in the grip of another great war to save Democracy for which these honored dead so bravely died that the flag of Freedom might fly above out heads.

Tuesday thousands of people all over the country paid tribute to those who have passed on and who did their part that we, who go on migt live a better and more useful life for mankind.



And so as a lasting tribute these honored dead, march onard fighting for the right, upholding the torch of Liberty, love of home and pursuit of happiness.

AMERICAN PEOPLE ANSWER

Should the United States be a military participant in the next world war? To that question, going by recent public opinion poll, the Americcan people anwswer No by a tremendous majority.

Will the United States be a militarily involved in the next war? To that question, according to the same polls, a majority of our citizens pessimistically answer Yes.

There's no question in the public mind as to who will be the participants in that threatened war, a war that many experts believe will be incredibly destructive and horrible. On one side will be arrayed Germany and Italy. On the other will be Great Britian and France an a number of minor powers. At the beginning, say the experts, the Axis powers will have the edge, due to their reported superiority in air power. Then, if the war settles down to a slow conflict of attrition, as the last, the superior resources or the democracies wil gradually take command. The reader will notice that Soviet Russia is not mentioned here as a belligerent. She is the question mark. Ideologically, she is a natural enemy has not definitely responded to suggestions that she pladge herself to aid France of the fascists and nazis. But so far she defintely responded to suggestions that she pledge herself to aid France and England, and there is a belief in some informal quarters that she hopes to stay out of the next war, so that, once peace comes again, she will dominate Europe.

To go back to this country's part in world affairs, it is apparant now that—whether or not another AEF is ever sent to Europe—we are ready involved. The Administration has gone about as far as it can in denouncing dictator nations without completly severing relations. (And in this regard, it shoud be remembered that the U. S. Ambassador to Germany has been recalled and kept at home for some months, as has Germany's Ambassador to the U. S.) We have thrown the whole weight of our moral influence behind England and France. This Administration is strongly internationalist in character. It is said that the man who has most influence with the President in determining foreign affairs is Ambassador Bullitt, who is a firm believer in the necessity of internationalism on our part.

The President has said, through his spokesman in the Congress that he feels it necessary to change our present neutrality law to allow him to give the democracies immediate economic and materal aid (such as munition, wheat, cotton, etc.) if war comes. Opposing him are the isolationists, led by Senators Borah, Nye, Clark and Johnson, who feel that we should let Europe fight its own battles and go to its own ruin without ruining ourselves in the process.. Against this argument is the point, often brought up by Administration men, that a victory in Europe of the Axs powers would probably be at once followed by a really strong drive on South and Central America—in which case this nation would be open for the first time in its history to territorial attack and potential conquest. Without debating the merits of any of these arguments, it can be said thatthe President's position has an excellent chance to be made into law. Many a conservative in the House and Senate, as well as the New Deal "100 percenters" are behind it, in the belief that it presents the lesser of two evils.

It is a question, in event of war, whether or not we could aid the democratices economically without aiding them eventually with troops. Past history would seem o answer No. Every expert is convinced that the next war will see incidents affecting American citizens far more important, ay, than the sinking of the Lusitania—a bomber, after all, doesn't differentiate between nationalities when it strikes at great ities. If Hitler fulfilled his rumored threat and sent gigantic air fleet over Paris and London at the outset of hostilities, our emotions would be stirred to the utmost by the resulting slaughter of non-belligerents. And then, what?

The President's dramatic telegram to Hitler asking him to pledge non-aggression against 31 nations met with thinly veiled derision in Berlin. The dictators are desperate-faced with the most pressing internal problens, they apparently can see no solution saved to press on.

From our point of view, there is one relations with Japan has steadily improved. bright spot in the international picture-our Japan, though theoretically a member of the Rome-Berlin axis,seems to be getting farther away from fascism. And, curiously enough, the improved relations largely stemmed from a trivial incident. When the late Japanese Ambassador to the U. S. died suddenly in this country, his ashes were sent home with great formality, on an American battleship. The Japanese are most formal of the world's people and this gesture of good will found an immediate response in the Japanese press, and in the feeling of the Nipponese.

"FARM RELIEF" RAILS AGAIN

According to Washington reports, the current government farm relief plan comes nearer and nearer to a breakdown. Carried on at colossal expense to all taxpayers, it has likewise failed to satisfy a large segment of American agriculture. Most overnment farm relief programs have had a similar sad history in the post-war years.

Such non-political tools of progress as the producer-owned and controlled farm marketing cooperatives have probably done more to permanently advance the interest of agriculture than have all the government panaceas ever devised.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

JAMES PRESTON

Washington so tthe tourists say is never remembered for its restaurants In fact, the lack of good eating establishments in the Capitol City is the subject of much "beefing" by most Washingtonians.

Nevertheless, the natives are eating their beefsteaks with more than usual vigor these days and the argument now is not over the quality of the restaurant but over this quality of the restaurant, but oper the quality of the beef.

Cause of it all aan argument between the President, the Navy Department and Congress over the relative merits of American grown beefsteaks and the beef shipped in from the Argentine.

The President contends in an official statement that Argentine beef is cheaper and better. So strong does the Chief Executive feel about the superiority of forgein beefsteaks that he has ordered the Navy Department to buy Argentine beef for the sailors. Congress recently felt just as strongly against Argentine beef and wrote into the Navy Department appropriation bill a stipulation prohibiting purchase of anything but American beef.

About 48,000 pounds of beef are involved in the official dispute. And the saving that would be effected by purchasing the South American product would amount to less than $4,000.

The whole argument has most Capital observers puzzled.

They are asking just what kind of economics the government is practicing when it curtails American farm crops in order to boost prices, fixes arbitrarily wage rates and work hours, adds new taxes that further raise prices, and then refuse to buy American goods because the price is too high. They can't understand either, why the government should bring the wrath of American cattle raisers and processors down on official leads to save a few dollars, and at the same time think nothing of pourring millions into economic theories, schemes, experiments and projects.

Unbalanced budjets are no longer a novelty around Washington. Yet there was a novel story out of the Capital recently about two family budgets that were not on an even keel.

What made it a novel story was that the Monopoly Investigating Committee, interesting itself in balances and budgets called two house wives all the way to Washington to explain the discomforts of unbalanced budgets.

And all the time there were many harried officials at the Treasury Department, only a mile away, who would have made excellent witnesses on the subject.

All is confusion— prominent Washington correspondent, weary of trying to keep up with the changing picture of policies, politics and purpose, recently began his weekly roundup of the Washington scene thus:

"If you feel confused over what Washington policies really are, you may be consoled by the fact that Washington policies really are confused."

The debate over amending the National Labor Relations Act falls into that category of confusion. Only one thing seems certain—that Congress wants to amend the Act and the Administration does not want it amended.

But Congress is confused because there seems to be some doubt about the best way of amending the Act. The Congress knows that the public wants the Act changed and it knows the Actmust be changed before there can be real industrial peace of mind and recovery. How is the question of the Administration comes, apparently, because there is doubt among its planners as to the best way of heading off any amendment of the Act.

Any farmer who is trying to eat his cake and have it, too, by accepting "plow under" payments from the Government and growing his crops just the same, had better take good notice.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration has just decided to spend another half million dollars chacking up on any such goings on.

About 200.00 more square miles of farm land is soon to be photographed by the Government from the air. That is how the check-up is made.

TELEVISION SIDELIGHT: Word reaches Washington that even before the television industry is born, four rival labor unions are fighting in New York over which shall control it!

The recent visit of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, widow of the twenty-third president of the United States, to the nation's capital, sent observers here scurrying to their history books for information. This is what they found concerning President Harrison's record:

"His administration was marked by a revival of American industries and a reduction of the public debt, and at its conclusion the country was left in a condition of prosperity and on friendly terms with foreign nations."

All of which makes pleasant but unfamiliar reading!

A TENT PHOTOGRAPHER

Even Fidelity had some connections with the world in general. The pack peddlers and clock tinkers and circuit riders found us out and brought us news of what was going on; the weekly newspapers did their share to keep us citizens of the world. Three times a week the mail carrier brought his small pack of letters and took away a few letters to people who had relatives or friends in Fidelity. The canidates also came, telling us how fine we were and how our little neighborhood contained a large part of the salt of the earth. But few of these emissaries from the Outside World equaled in importance the traveling photographer who brought his tent and set it up in a broom sedge field near the little village.

Fidelity was not rich and probably never will be. We had no ancestral portraints, however great our forebearers may have been. Few homes had many photographs. When the photographer came nearly all of the people belived that they needed pictures of themselves and their loved ones. To the tent in the field flocked people of all sorts and kinds. Father gathered up his flock and had a family group mad and then some individual tintypes of each of the children. Other fathers did the same, until the family albums fairly buldged with new pictures. Some of the pictures were full length some were ordinary busts, but all were of the painful kind that only a time exposure could make.

The photographer was a good advertiser for his time. Satisfied customers were his best form of keeping the public coming in troops to his tent, where we wesaw our on picetures going through the process of photography. I still remember how black we looked, especially my own picture for I was very fair of face and cotón top. We talked in subdued whispers about the miracle going on before us, probably afraid that the photographer was a kind of wizard or something.

At other seasons of the year the picture man had his studio in the county seat, where he finally stayed all the time and built up a large business. When I was all of fourteen I went into his shop alone and sat for my picture. I can see on that same picture today a small portion of the tripod with which he held my head still for the time exposure, a thing for which I am properly thankful, as it elps to establish my reputation for truthfulness. Many people have questioned my saying that our heads were supported by a contraption somewhat like the heads were supported by a contraption like the head rest in a dentist's chair.

Whenever you get your next picture taken, in a modern studio don't forget that others of us have had greater thrills than you can ever feel again,a hrills made possible by the photographer's tent in a broom sedge field near old Fidelty.

SHIRRING MAY HELP APPETITE FOR EGGS

Shirred eggs are delicious and different. Many people who are tired of the usual fried or poached egg might try shirring them, suggests the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Cut a slice of bread of triple-thickness, and hallow out a mold in the center of it. Into this, break one egg. Season with salt and pepper, put in a greased pan and slide it into a slow oven until the egg is set and the bread slightly browned. Serve immediately.

Use a small egg -shirrer or small ramekins. Grease each dish and put in a layer of buttered crumbs. An egg should then be broken over the crumbs salt and pepper add to taste and the whole covered with buttered crumbs. Bake in a slow oven until the crumbs are browned and the egg set. Serve in the ramekins.

THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE BY TOPPS

KENTUCKY GIRLS IN HONOR FRATERNITY

High scholarship, soundness of approach in solving problems with in the home economics filed, leadership and character are among requirements for membership. These young women are expected to be among those who will in the future build a finer family life in America.

A national survey was made to find the divorce rate among Phi Upsilon Omicron members who had been graduated 10 years. Among the entire membership in colleges throut the land, at that time only one divorce had taken place. This is particularly striking when it is considered that on an average one marriage in six now ends in divorce in this country.

KENTUCKY LIVESTOCK MUCH MUCH BETTER FOR 1939

A steadily growing interest in more and better livestock in Kentucky is reported by the State Callage of Agriculture at Lexington. Numerous inquiries for breeding stock have been received at the college thsi spring, and large numbers of farmers are in the market for catle hogs and sheep. Increased production of hay and grass is given creditfor much of the interest in livestock.

In some sections farmers are interested in types of cattle that produce both beef and milk. Some of the beef breed associations report exhaustion of their supplies of bulls. Cows and heifers also are in demand, as more farmers turn to home production of feeders.

In practically all cases, the calls are for registered breeding stock. It is estimated that 65 percent of the bulls in Kentucky now are purebred. Twenty years ago, when the college launched its purebred sires work, less than 19 percent of the sires were purebred.

Last year, 686 registered bulls were placed on Kentucky farms and purebred cows and heifers were put on 560 farms, according to Wayland Rhoads, extension field agent in cattle production.

GROW FLOWERS IN VEGETABLE GARDEN

To save time and care in growing flowers around the farm home many families find it practical to grow at least part of their annual flowering plants in rows inthe vegetable garden, where cultivation by hoe or horse cultivator will be easier than in flower beds.

In suggesting this method, N R. Elliott of the Kentucky College of Agriculture points out that it is often a work saver to fill most of the space reserved for flowers with plantings of small shrubs, transplanted wild flowers, and long lived plants such as irises peonies, daffodils, daylillies, columbine, coreopsis and gallardia.

Other plants that go well in permanent flower beds are those that usually reseed from year to year—hollyhocks, petunias, shasta daisies larkspurs, and cosmos. With these it is only necessary to hoe out surplus plants after cultivation has been delayed long enough to give the scattered seed a chance to sprout

Many of th favorite annual flowers, such as zinnias, marigolds calliopsis, verbenas, eweet peas and scabiosa, can be planted to rows like vegetables convenient for cultivacation, easy to gather for cut flowers, and pleasant to the eye when working in the garden. Many of the annuals bloom most freely and for the longest period if kept closely picked and not allowed to ripen esed. If these are planted in the vegetable garden, it is easy to gather a wealth of fine flowrs without injuring th display in the flower beds and border plantings around the house.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

A survey of 22,321 farm homes in 12 Kentucky counties found bathrooms in only 7.6 percent of them. Eight percent ran sewage into streams, and 5.6 per cent disposed of sewage on the surface of the soil Less than 5 per cent had running hot water.

With recent floods as a warning, Leslie county farmers have responded to county wide meetings in the interest of tree planting and other soil conservation measures. Less corn and other soil depleting crops and more grass and hay are planned.

Better ways of marketing strawberries are being studied by Trimble county farmers, who are planning to increase productionover a period of years. It is likely that the berries will be sold cooperatively, beginning this year if there is a crop.

Elimination of two bulls would make Russell a scrub free sire county, as far as cattle are concerned. A committee of farmers is trying to complete the job this spring. Plans also call for the purchase of better cows.

A survey inShelby county showed one large orchard damaged by mice and another by hogs. The hogs which had access tor ubbing oil, transferred the oil to trees, causing the bark to die. Several orchards were found in need of pruning.

Livestock improvement plans in McCreary county include the purchase of western ewes and the elimination of many of the scrub bulls. Grass and hay crops will be enlorged, and superphosphate used to improve production.

"Open the door, let in the air,

Joy is abroad in the world today,
If your door is wide open it will come your way.
Open the door."

THIS stanza was memorized by the writer when a child. At that time it made an appeal largely because of its pretty picturing and happy rhyme. Many years later it came back to thought with a deeper signification, which led to the contemplation of spiritual joy.

The door to our mental home is our receptiveness to whatever comes knocking for admission. To what are we opening our door? Are we definitely closing it against the intrusion of fear, distrust, despair, ill-health, poverty? Do we welcome in the good we wish to see objectified in our experience?

If we are alert, and listening to Truth, we shall become aware of the spiritual joy, trust, healthy thoughts, assurance of peace and happiness which are awaiting on—our receptiveness to come in and abide with us.

In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy gives us this counsel, which, when obeyed, is far reaching in its effects and influence (p. 332): "Stand porter at the door of thought. Admitting only such conclusions as you wish realized in bodily results, you will control yourself harmoniously.

Today mankind, finding itself in a condition of great economic complications, is asking, "Is there a way out?" Fear of lack of individual and national security is knocking loudly for entrance into human consciousness. Are we to stand by, helplessly feeling that there is no answer available, or that the answer is dependent upon those in authority who may or may not be guided wisely? Definitely, no!

There is an answer, a solution, to the individual and world problems of today. . . . We read (ibid., p. 290), "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony." How simple, yet how profound, is the answer—"the right understanding of Him"! In His great love, God has endowed each one of His children with the ability to understand his Father-Mother God. . . . This understanding of God, and of man in His likeness, displaces all that is imperfect, unlovely, sinful, sick, or sorrowing.

Divine ever-operative Principle, when understood and applied in our human experience, establishes the true concept of brotherly love, and a corresponding desire to reflect Love, God. Thus, as understanding is gained, wars will cease; and so in due course whatever is wrong will be annihilated, and nothing discordant will remain. . . .

The only real, true government of man is by God's law of harmony. And the understanding of God's law precedes obedience to that law. When we shall have fully awakened to the glorious privilege of submission to the guidance of unerring, infinite divine Mind, then shall we experience the reign of everlasting Life, Truth, and Love. We need not wait one hour to begin the joyous task of helping to bring about the kingdom of heaven on earth. What we harbor in thought decides whether or not the pathway we are treading is leading us upward and onward into God's kingdom. The radiance of thought which is in accord with divine Love not only illumines our own journey but helps to brighten the pathway for others. As the light of a tiny candle displaces some darkness, so does the least reflection of the light of Truth in our consciousness dispel some error; and gradually but surely shall all humanity come to the recognition of universal good, glorious and triumphant.

May we then open wide the door of our thought to let in light, peace, freedom, dominion, power, and the spiritual joy that are more and more appearing in the world today. Then shall be brought to pass the promise given by the prophet Jeremiah (Jeremiah 31:34), "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord."—The Christian Science Monitor.

FARMERS STUDY COVER CROP PRACTICES

Farmers in the Dudley Pike community met at the farm of Leonard Lists, Tuesday evening, May 16th to visit field demonstrations in the use of cover crops such as crimson clover, rys and other practices. Following the field meeting a discussion was held of the best practices to use in obtaining good stands of crimson clover and other cover crops.

The best results are obtained with crimson clover where it is seeded before the middle of ugust in order to obtain a good stand before freezing weather inthe fall. It should also be worked into the ground with a last cultivation in corn or other cultivated crop. Late seeding of crimson clover will not permit enough growth to carry the stand through the winter. The demonstration also pointed out that it will not grow through the winter in good condition on ground that poorly drained and in low places.

LATE SPRING CUT GARDENS SHORT

The late, wet spring has not dampened the enthusiasm for gardens among members of homemakers clubs in Kentucky, according to reports of county home demonstration agents. Encouraging growing and eating more vegetables is one of the major features of home demonstration work. Last year 4,551 Kenucky farm families had gardens containing 15 or more vegetables, and included several vegetables they had never grown before.

FINDS EASY WAY TO GROW GOOD ALFALFA

Sam Barbee, Adair county, Kentucky, found an easy way to grow alfalft, writes County Agent R. B. Rankin. He applied manure, limestone and phosphate on thin land and now has "some of the finest alfalfa I ever saw," says Rankin. Barbee is so pelased that he is planning to increase his alfalfa acreage following this year's tobacco crop. He will broadcast 500 pounds of phosphate to the acre before setting tobacco, for the benefit of both tobacco and alfalfa, and then lime the land and sow alfalfa as the tobacco is harvested.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Approximately 3 00 farm Women recenty attended meetings of district homemakers organizations to study "How to Have a Satisfying Rural Life."

Calling for a bumper rye grass crop, Knox county farmers spread several thousand pounds of seed.

Leonard Risner, Bell county 4-H club member, set 1 600 strawberry plants making him the largest grower in Bell.

Last month three Powell county farmehs started t bouillt Acressnt farmers started to build complete drainage systems for their farms.

Homemade lap brooders are being used in Harlan county by those wanting only small flocks of pullets.

In Rockcastle county, last month 75,000 pounds of grass seed were taken up on the assignment plan, as part of the soils program.

Desiring to know how much money they can afford for farm improvement, 13 Christian county farmers have started account books.

With the aid of the Farm Security Administration purbbred stock is being introduced into Leslie county communities.

The case of JORDAN vs. JORDAN
1. My case had been called for 2:30 and I was just on my way to the courthouse when I ran head-on into my about-to-be ex-husband. "Thunderation," he yells as we went down kerflop—
2. "It isn't enough that you try to kill me with bum food, now you try to assassinate me," I serves you right, Sam Jordan," I yelled back. "Didn't you try to kill me with work in that old-fashioned kitchen!"
Here's what Shellane means to the housewife
1. Three more hours of leisure a day
2. All the convenience of city gas service.
3. A modern kitchen in a modern home
4. No dirt, no ashes, no back-breaking labor
5. Automatic hot water
6. Automatic, completely silent refrigeration
3. "Let's not quarrel," said Sam quietly. "What do you suppose this Shellane stuff is?" "It's a gas that they compress into bottles and deliver to farm homes," I said, peering into the window with him. "Addie Simpkins says it's just like having city gas service. No dirt or ashes or scrubbing."
4. With that Sam grabbed my hand and started into the store. We looked at the Shellane ranges and they were marvelous! And there were automatic hot water heaters and refrigerators, too. After a while, Sam said, "Betsy, would life with me be so bad if we had Shellane?" And I said, "Sam, it would be wonderful."
5. So that's why there wasn't any case when we got before the judge! "What caused this change of heart," I said the judge smiling, "Shellane," we both answered. "I guess I'll have to recommend it to more of the people that come before me," said the judge. And, after all the years we've had Shellane, I really think he should.

Kentucky Politices

BY TYLER MUNFORD

The strangest caravan that ever wound its way through rural Kentucky in quest of support from the Democratic party is that bearing Dapper Frederick A. Wallis, Boss Thomas S. Rhea and John Young Brown.

All three are well known in Kentucky politics, and strangely enough their ideas of government and political association have been at such various in other years that the people who see them together today must wonder if politics has been stripped of its last vestigo of sincerity.

Fred Wallis joined forces with the Chandler group four years ago in a deal that made him State Welfare Commissioner, and no longer than last year told a Wickliffe audience that "Happy" Chandler has done more for Kentucky in two and a half years than all the Kentucky governors of the past 50 years put together." That was before he was fired from his state post. He has never associated with either Rhea or Brown until the present campaign.

In the same speech at Wickliffe Wallis, now state manager for Brown, said that it was ridiculous for anyone to believe the state could pay a maximum of $30 in old age assistance. Today he is espousing the cause of a candidate who openly advocates $30. So here we have a state manager on record as being against a $36 pension acting as a front for a candidate who favors $30. To say the least, such an arrangement must be confusing to the old folks as well as to taxpayers generally.

In the same caravan is Tom Rhea, political boss of Logan county and for years a figure in state politics. Rhea has always been looked upon as a machine politician, and not until the present campaign has he had anything in common with John Brown. In the 1935 race Brown openly charged Rhea and former Governor Ruby Laffoon as being responsile for what he termed as "corrupt government" at Frankfort. His was the most bitter tongue against the Russellville politician in that race, yet today Rhea is his chief advisor and confidant. This association is significant in that it reveals a total lack of principle involved in the Brown camp.

An other factor that makes this strange association unsual is Brown's close alignment with the C. I. O. Wallis has never had any alignments with labor. Other hand his contacts have been with the more wealty groups. Rhea received C I O support, or a part of it, in the 1935 primary, but has never been looked upon as a labor politician.

W. E. PORTER ANNOUNCES FOR GOVERNOR

Before a large crowd of Kentucky voters W. E. "Bill" PPorter explained his 8 point "Sweepstakes instead of Taxes" program Mr. Porter was born 35 years ago in Calhoon, Kentucky, worked in his father's drug store while attending the Madisonville and Hopkinsville public school, and worked his way through entucky Wesleyan College at Winchester and Winchester and Western Teacher's College at Bowling Green. He has had much political experience in the national field and showed an insight on the problems that face Kentucky.

His 8 point platform contained:

1. A constitutional admendment to enable the State to hold a Sweepstakes on the Kentucky Derby. The revenue from this of some 72 million dollars to be expended on the cost of state government with the ensuing reduction and abolishment of taxes this will bring about. Mr. Porter brought out that Porto Rico, a dominion of the United States, has been holding a successful lottery for the last five years, and that the revenue from this is being used to build modern hospital and schools ple of this nation send two and on in Porto Rica. He says that the peohalf million dollars to foreign countries each year and that only about ten per cent of this is returned as prizes He insists this money should be kept in the United States and that Kentucky can get a great portion of this because of the nationally known Kentucky Derby. He believes that the people of kentucky can use this money to a better advantage than foreign promoters or organizations, and insists that although he has a high regard for England, Ireland, and Canada, he believes that the people of this State come first, and is going to see that they do.

2. The second point of his platform calls for an increased road program, of permanent, lasting highways throughout Kentucky, that will make Kentucky compare favorably with any state in the union, and reduce the maintenance cost to a minimum. Improved farm to market roads, and an efficient technically trained staff to supervise this program.

3. A pension program of a maximum of $50.00 a month that will enable old people to have a comfortable standard of living and the security that old age deserves.

4. The insistence of a vocational training department in public schools that will help youth in their decision of a future means of livihood, and a minimum pay of $100.00 a month to the teachers of the state, and state assistance to the "Teachers Retirement Plan."

5. A program of decreased taxes on the farmers and business that will make this state have the lowest business taxes, which ill bring a tremendous influx of ne businesses and factories, create thousands of new jobs and greatly increase the buying power and standard of living of the laboring people of Kentucky.

6. A public health program that involves a state financial foundation for the permenent study and treatment of tuberculosis, a dental and medical research foundation that will create an opening for advanced research to the medical students of the state. A strict and thorough non-political civil service supervision over all employes of state hospitals and institutions.

7. A tourist promotion program of active advertising and publicity, portraying to the nation Kentucky's scenic and historic points of interest. A committee composed of one member from the State Chamber of Commerce, one member of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs and one member from the Louisville Tourist and Publicity League who shall act and advise with the state publicity bureau as to the best methods of securing increased tourists and the millions of dollars they will sped in Kentucky. A program of complete cooperation with the Department of Interior on their national parks in this state and a technical trained staff or paid supervisors and administrators. A program of close cooperaticon with the "League of Kentucky Sportsmen" in their endeavor to protect and increase wild life of Kentucky.

8. A board of three representatives of labor and three representatives of capital who shall sit with the Governor and meditate all problems and difficulties that arise between labor and capital. A bill that will make labor equally responsible with capital for the strikes and damages that are incurred. An insistence of local control of labor organizations and opposition towards dictatorial outside influence.

In closing Mr. Porter said: I was born in Kentucky, educated in Kentucky, and love Kentucky. I want to give you my word of honor that when you make me Governor I sall only consider and work for the best insterests of the people of my native state."

LEWIS STATEMENT MAY MAKE CAMPAIGN ISSUE

When John L Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America and boss of the C. I O issued re recent statement from Washington inferring that he would "take over" in the Eastern Kentucky coal strike, he probably added to the importance of an issue already precalent in the race for governor.

Lewis is not personally popular in Kentucky and his attack aaginst Governor Chandler caused repercussions among groups not heretofore to friendly to "Happy". The issue is not organized labor, but rather Lewis and his ideas about government which to say the least are certainly not in tune with those of the average Kentuckian.

While John Brown attempts to escape this connection with the statement that he is only an attorney for the CIO, his association goes further than this and is definitely established in the minds of the voters

If the C I. O does become a paramount issue in the campaign, the nut come of last year's guebernatorial fight in Michigan, CIO stronghold, will be interesting In that race Governor Murphy ran with the CIO backing and was soundly trounced.

FISH AND GAME

You have, heard of the Rod Hog who tries to use more of the road than he i sentitled to. Some sevewe laws have been passed to curb his cheating and all good citizens report him to the authorities

The Division of Games and Fish also reports another kind of hog. He is known as the "Fish Hog". He is the chap who won't take his fish in a lawful manner with a hook and line like other fisherman, but insits on using nets, traps or dynamite.

All sportsmen are urged by Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, to watch for this Fish Hog. He is violating the laws robbin the sportsmen and their families of their rightful resources. While he is perhaps not as bad as the Road Hog who endangers innocent lives, he is a distance menace to the wildlife of thi sstate.

Sportsmen report him whenever you can. Be sure to get car numbers where possible. Reports to the Division and to the Conservation Officers will be held as confidential, and every effort will be made to prosecute all Fish Hogs.

THIS BAD SPORTSMAN

Conservation Officers Dan Hagan of Calhoun and Stanley Shelton of Owensboro made a big catch of illegal fishing apparatus Monday, May 1, in Ohio County, according to reports received at Division headquarters here.

Thier operations were limited to Rough Creek and one or two tributaries.

The catch, enumerated, consisted of:

Three wing nets; four hoop nets; one tramel net, 200 feet of poultry wire, 100 feet of log chains, 200 feet of trace and well chains, and 500 feet of new plow lines.

The chains and plow lines were stretched across the outlets of sloughs, to catch the fish as the water receded in these sloughs, leaving the fish at the mercy of their enemies. All paraphernelia was confiscated and destroyed by the officers. Arrests of these Fish and Game law violators will follow immediately

KENTUCKY HELPS 4-H CLUB RECORD

Kentucky with 41,067 club members in 1933 helped to raise the national 4-H enrollment for that year to a record breaking total of 286,029. There now are 4-H clubs in all of the 120 counties in Kentucky, with farm boys and girls from 10 to 18 raising livestock, growing crops, fruit and vegetables canning, preserving, baking, making clothes and performing other work that gives them a practical education and often returns a financial profit. Approximately 16 percent of all students in the College of Agriculture, are former 4-H club members. A large number also are students in other institutions of higher education of the state.

TOBACCO GROWING SUBJECT OF STUDY

An agricultural improvement program outlined by County Agent C. S. Bell in Anderson county, features tobacco management, beginning with plant beds and continuing through marketing. Management demonstrations will be given in every community. Among goals set up in the county are: Winter cover crops for all cultivated land; farmers to earn 95 per cent of their sail building payments; increased use of limestone and phosphate; increased growing of alfalfa; demonstrations of Italian rye rass; larger acreage of hybrid corn; a long time program to control soil erosion.

Fear Man's Greatest Scourge, Says New York Clinic Head

FEAR, according to Dr. Edward Spencer Cowles, founder of the Body and Mind Clinic in New York, is the most prevalent, the most sinister disease in the world. Eight out of ten surgical operations are unnecessary, he contends, since many people suffering from bodily disorders are not sick at all, in the usual sense of the word, but simply are victims of a broken nervous system. And fear stems directly from this loss of nerve-cell energy.

Dr. Edward S. Cowles Interviewing a Patient at His Body and Mind Clinic

This is true, he maintains, despite the fact that pains may be actual and the symptoms so real that an X-ray will often reveal them. In other words, fatigue of the nervous system can act as an imitator of all sorts of disease; it can even cause blindness, deafness, paralysis, crooked arms and withered legs. What is needed, therefore, is not operation, but the raising of the nerve-cell energy back to normal.

In the April Cosmopolitan, Rex Beach continues his series of "Modern Miracle Men" with an interview of this strange humanitarian. Dr. Cowles, who for twelve years supported the clinic mainly out of his own pocket. Now the patients pay about twelve cents a treatment. The clinic, a nonprofit, nonsectarian institution, is the only one of its kind in the world, and was started by Dr. Cowles to meet the growing need for a study of mental and emotional disturbances. More than five thousand treatments are given every month.

Dr. Cowles' experiments have led him to the conclusion that a normal, healthy person represents one hundred units of energy in the nerve cell. No one, of course, has a perfect score, but as long as the figure doesn't drop below eighty there's nothing to fear. As it nears eighty, however, a person becomes physically and emotionally irritable. This is the danger mark. A further drop to sixty brings him into the neurasthenic field, where he suffers from emotional instability. A drop below sixty is the field of melancholia, where the victim's consciousness is filled with painful sensations and he is beset by fantastic reasons to account for them. He may suffer from a persecution complex or he may be haunted by past sins, real or imaginary. This is the suicide state. A further loss of twenty points brings mania, dementia praecox. The mind has lost its balance wheel.

In the treatment of fear cases, Dr. Cowles employs both medication and the power of suggestion. Neither, he says, is of use without the other, for medicine alone will produce no lasting results and psychological treatment without medication is more than likely to be useless. After the medicine has been administered, the psychological treatment follows. The patient lies on a couch and relaxes. He then sits up in a chair and is made to understand that what he fears is internal and not external. He's not afraid of the subway, he's told, for example, but of the violent emotions it excites in him. The final step is to make him do the very thing he's afraid of doing: take him for a ride on the subway and analyze his feelings squarely to his face.

WHY BLUEGRASS GROWS IN CENTRAL KENTUCKY

Bluegrass and other grasses and legumes thrive so well in Central Kentuky that about three-fourth of the plowable land is kept in grass for pasture and hay. In one of the counties only 12.5 acres in 100 acres of the plowable land was corn and tobacco in 1934 nearly all of the remainder being in pasture and hay crops. The county is noted for its livestock and it tobacco.

"Why doe this condition exists?" asks Prof. George Roberts of the Agricultural Experiment Station. It is because the soil is suitable for growth of grass and legumes. Its climate and soil moisture conditions are no better than in most parts of the state What is this soil's peculiar condition? It is the content of phosphorus and of calcium. True, most of the land needs moderate liming, an liming is widely practiced. But the content of phosphorus is far above that of those parts of the state outside of Bluegrass area. Because of the content of calium and phosphorus, the soils of theBluegrass area grow good legumes that supply nitrogen that is so necessary for vigorous grass.

When soils in other parts of the state are moderately limed and liberally treated with phosphate, they will produce a good growth of legumes. Grasses seeded with the legumes in the right way will thrive as has been well demonstrated. in various parts of the state.

COUNTY PLANNING RECOMMENDATIONS STUDIED

After the field meeting recommendations of the County Planning Committee were studied for this community. The use of limestone, phosphate and potash on alfalfa was studied and also the use of hybrid seed corn.

Several edmonstrations will be carired out in the use of rye, wheat, Italian rye grass, sweet clover and crimson clover in cover crop practices for the coming fall.

BLAME OLD BEDS FOR SPREAD OF BLUE MOLD

The use of old tobacco plant bed sites is blamed by experts at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station for the spread of blue mold. Early outbreaks of the disease in both Tennessee and Kentucky were always in plant beds that were used last year, according to Dr. W. D. Vallenau plant pathologist at the Experiment Station

The future of the blue mold disease is in the hands of tobacco growers, say Dr. Valleau. f even a few growers in eah county persists in using old plant bed sites year after year, he believes trouble from blue mold may be expected.

The blu mold fungus produes seed like bodies in the leaves killed by the disease, and these seeds or spores start the disease the next year if th same bed site is used again ing or steaming cannot berelied upno to destroy the blue mold spore in the old bed site.

900 BOYS, GIRLS TO JUNIOR WEEK

The 19th annual Junior Week will be held June 6-10 at the University of Kentucky, with approximately 900 4-H club members from 110 counties expected to be in attendance according to J. W. Whitehouse, state leader

The theme of the week will be "Taking the university to the farm, and boys will spend time on the Experiment Station farm, and at the animal pathology, dairy, farm engineering and other departments. They will hear talks on these subjects and on wild life by experts such as Dr. Vernon Bailey of the U S Biological Survey.

Girls will have a style revue, demonstrations in baking, cannings, cooking, etc, and hear talks on rural electrification, how to use physchology in every day life homefurnishings, child care and similar subjects.

Elimination contests to decide upon teams to represent their counties at demonstrations have been held, when ministers of local churches will speak briefly on religion in life. Various recreational features have been planned, including a reading of Maxwell nderson's book "Sar Wagon," by Mrs. George Edwin Smith of the university English department. An excursion will be made to the state capitol one afternoon.

Boys and girls will be greeted by Dr. Frank L McVey, presidenq of the university, and Dean Thomas P Cooper of the College of Agriculture Percy Adair, president of the Kentucky Association of 4-H Clubs, will preside at several sesions.

Ready sale for electric equipment has been found in Clay county where Rural Electrification lines are being bbuilt.

"ARE THERE ANY QUESTIONS"

This information serfice on education is brought to you by special arrangement with Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City. Questions on education may be submitted through this newspaper.

Question:

How can a parent help his child in determining on a suitable vocation in life?

REPLY:

Benjamin Franklin tells how his father "sometimes took me to walk with him, and see joiners, bricklayers brasiers, etc., at their work, that he might observe my inclination and endeavor to fix it on some trade or other." If a parent can study with his child those occupations in which there is some measure of interet a part of the problem may be solved.

A very good bokto use as a guide in such study is Dr. Harry Kitson's "How To Find the Right Vocation." Best of all is to cooperate with the school counselor, aiding and supplementing wherever possible in the childs' study of occupations and analysis of self. If there is no vocational counseling program in the high school a parent will not be reasonable if he seeks to bring about an edequate program of vocational guilance in the high school a parent will not be unreasanable if he seeks to bring about an edequate program of vocational guidance in the school.

Doctor Edwin A Lee, professor of education and head of the Department of Vocational Education at Teachers College, warns that "the parent should guard against the natural dispostion to make the choice for his own child. It is the youth's responsibility and privilege to decide for himself, even though he may seem to deciding unwisely."

QUESTION:

What is the relation betwen a child's posture and the quality of his work in school?

REPLY:

Studies of the subject have found no significant realtion between posture and the quality of school work. The importance of posture is psychological rather than intellectual. Nagging at home and at school on the subject of posture is likely to produce an inferiority comple, in a child with poor posture. On the other hand a child who carries himself well will feel freer, will be less subject to fatigue wil be generally appier.

Formerly it was fel that all children should conform to the same standard; this idea of good posture is being replaced by one which takes into account the buld, extent of muscular development, and the needs of the particular child.

QUESTION:

Is it beneficial or detrimental to a superior pupil to skip a grade?

If the student is qualified to enter the academic and social environment of a higher grade, most teachers are not opposed to this skipping a grade. Research has shown that in the cases of many children thus advanced the educational gains have been very definite. On the other hand, there is a growing feeling that children should not be hurried through school too rapilly. Increasing efforts at curriculum enrichment reduce the need for accelerating the progress of superior pupils.

QUESTION:

Is there any relation between vocabulary and general intelligence.

REFLY:

Yes, there is a very definite relation. If it is not possible to give a complete intelligence test a vocabulary test has been shown to be a convenient brief substitute.

QUESTION:

What should a well-developed program of adult education in a community be?

REPLY:

"That would depend to a degree upon the community its size and individual characteristics, the interests of its people, the educational problems involved.

According to r. W. C. Hallenbeck of T C., C U, N Y, a well rounded program of adult education in any community will carry out the five basic functions of adult education.

1. Remedial to fill in gaps in previous education of adults. Courses in Citizenship English, reading and writing, arithmetic and for this purpose.

2. Occupational to help adults with vocational problems. This include assistance in choosing a suitable vocational trianing either in preparation for jobs or for advancement in a given line of work.

3. Relational education dealing with ereas where individuals must live and work in relationship with other individuals or groups. Parent education, workers education are of this nature.

4. Liberal the whole range of cultural study in which adults engage for their own pleasure. Courses in literature, art music, concerts, are exhibitions fall into this category.

5. Political to train adults to be better members of the commonwealth through study and discussion of current social economic, and political problems.

QUESTION:

How much sleep do children require?

REPLY:

Authorities disagree as to the exact amount of sleep children should have. The amount of sleep depends upon the age of the child the quality of the sleep and the individual nature of the child. Some children need less than others; some need more.

According to figures compiled by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, children should have: At birth, 20-22 hours; six months; 16-18 hours; one year, 14 to 16 hours; 2 to 5 years 13 to 15 hours; 6 to 7 years, 12 hours; 6 to 10 years, 11 hours; 11 to 12 years 10 to 11 hours.

QUESTION:

"Can popular music be used to develop a child's interest in classical music?"

REPLY:

Children often like 'swing' and the popular tunes. Often these tunes are based on classical melodies. Some teachers arouse children's interest in good music by pointing out the orgin of popular tunes, showing the child that classical music is not necessarily difficult or obscure but something to beenj oyed.

Some teahers hold that popular music, "swing" and all has a strategic place in the classroom. It can be used to enlarge musical experience and understanding. Children have a natural interest in popular music and teachers can enploy this interest for educational purposes. The popular introduction often sends hearers back to the orginals.

Notsall teachers of music agree with this view. Many feel that such an approach to music demands an exceptional teahcer. "Teaching an appreciation of the "Classics" thru the popular music of today can be easily over-emphasized as a class room technique," says Mr. Harry R. Wilson, of Teachers College. "Why approach Schubert's mental "Song of Love" from "Blossom Time." An introduction to "swing" versions will not necessarily lead children to reorganize the superior values of the originals. Int fac the opposite effect is often the result. In most cases, it seems more feasiable to approach the "classics" directly and to show how these themes are often used by popular composers."

Of the present adult population of the United States how many completed High School? Grade School?

REPLY:

Ofthe 76 009,000 adults in this country today 12,000,000 finished High School. 32,000 000 finished the 8th grade of elementary school.

QUESTION:

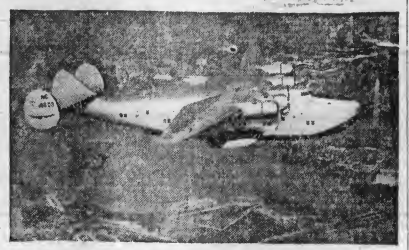
What is the average salary of teachers in public schools in large cities? How does this compare with the average twenty years ago? With the salaries in small-town schools?

REPLY:

For the school year 1938-39 the medimum salary for elementary-school teachers in cities of over 100,000 population was $2,217. In 1919-19 it was $936. In small towns (population 2 500 to 9,000, the median salary in 1936-39 was $1096, as compared to $693 in 1918-19.

Professor Edward S. Ebenden of Teachers College holds that "the salaries paid to teachers determine in large measure the kind and quality of persons attracted to and retained in teaching. The teachers in turn determine to a large degree the type and effectiveness of the schools in which they work. The rise in elementary school salaries in the last twenty years reflect the rise in the standards of teaching in these schools."

QUESTION:



Could you tell me whether there is an organization for the promotion of better cultural relations between this country and the Orient? Where can I get in touch with this?

REPLY:

The Institute of Pacific Relations, 129 E. 52nd Street, N. Y. C., has as its purpose the promotion of better economic and cultural relations between this country and all countries of the Pacific area, China Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand. If you should write to them, they would be glad to send you further information about their activities.

Juan T. Trippe Guards American Air Supremacy

THE recent launching and trial flights of the Yankee Clipper, world's largest airplane, and the projected air passenger service to Europe by the Pan-American Airways, has focused public attention upon the youthful, little-known head of this concern, Juan T. Trippe. In the June issue of Cosmopolitan, Rex Beach describes this modest dynamo as a master strategist, shrewd negotiator and guardian of America's place in the airways of the world.

The Yankee Clipper — World's Largest Airplane

JUAN T. TRIPPE

"Juan T. Trippe is a solidly constructed, swarthy, affable young man with an engaging smile and superabundant energy," Rex Beach says. "He is thirty-nine years old and there appears to be nothing remarkable about his early life except his willingness and ability to do the work of several men. During his first year at Yale, when he enlisted in the wartime naval service, he learned to fly. When he returned to the engineering courses, he organized the first student flying club in America. He was also on the Varsity football squad, a member of the editorial staff of the Yale Record, and he graduated with honors. After a brief, bond-selling apprenticeship in Wall Street, he and a few young friends, all pilots, started a modest air service on Long Island—one of the first attempts in this country to establish a fixed, regular service. This was his formal entry into aviation and it occurred long before the first commercial airlines were started in America, but considerable after the international transport companies were operating in Europe."

Juan Trippe sees nothing mysterious about the phenomenal success of a company which in twelve short years has grown from an idea to an institution which in 1938 carried 225,000 passengers more than 90,000,000 miles; carried 4,000,000 pounds of mail and express more than 45,000,000 ton miles; made 381 trips across the Pacific with passengers and mail and has, during its entire period of operation, successfully completed 99 per cent of all scheduled mileage—a record of operating precision unsurpassed by any other form of transportation.

The new Boeing six-thousand-horsepower Atlantic Clippers are two years ahead of the world, Trippe says. The Yankee Clipper weighs over 41 tons, is 109 feet long and has a wing span of 152 feet. It carries seventy-four passengers, a crew of fifteen and a cargo capacity of 5,000 pounds. It has four motors; a dining salon where meals, cooked in its own galley, are served; dressing rooms for men and women; sleeping berths for forty persons and private and soundproof compartments. Six of these Clippers have been ordered and when the service is in complete operation, they will make four flights weekly to Southampton, England.

ADVOCATE PLANNED BUYING FOR WOMEN

Are you the typeo f person who suddenly decides she needs, say a lovely new beige sport suit with one of those ducky hatsto match, and then rushes to town to buy it? In other words, a person who says in effect: I want a new sports suit, ergo, I ought to buy it. According to home management specialists at the University of Kentucky home economics department this kind of buyer is likely to be perpetually in debt, worried, and with generally mis-managed finances.

It is better to plan expenditures, that is, to decide definitely every year an deven every season exactly how much money can reasonably be spent for clithing, After savings, insurance, education and other needs are taken care of, a certan amount should still be left for clothing if planning is done properly. Spend just that amount and no more.

Not only will planning expeditures in advance—taking into consideration one's whole wardrobe for the year or several years— pay in loss of worry, it should result also in better clothes.

There is no substitute for personal respoisibility in paying one's debts, facing seriously the end-results of buying or not buying.

And, for the woman whow build

And for the woman who would be smartly dressed, there is no substitute for planning the wardrobe in advance.

MORE INTEREST IN FAR CONSTRUCTION

As evidence of increased interest in the construction of farm buildings, the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture has this year sent out upon request 561 plans for buildings and equipment. These plans have gone to 16 states and to the Virgin Islands. A farmer in the Island asked for six kinds of poultry building plans.

The Kentucky College of Agriculture has furnished plans for several thousand ridge ventilators for tobacco barns, since the perfection of this type of ventilators several years ago. Many tobacco growers reported that the rige ventilators paid for itself the first year since it enabled them to cure tobacco of such high quality that the increased selling price was more than enough to pay for the ventilators.

100,000 ACRES TO GROW HYBRID CORN

W. C. Johnstone of the Kentucky College of Agricul ure estimates that 100,000 acres will be planted to hybrid corn in Kentucky this spring. Most o. the seed produced in the state has been sold, and farmers are buying hybrid seed in other states. He expects enough seed will be produced this year to supply the need of Kentucky corn growers in 1940. Hybrid corn has been yielding 10 to 20 percent better than common kinds. Its use enable farmers to increase production, or to produce their needs on less land, thereby releasing less productive land for seeding to hay and grass.

Exceptional results with babos rye have been noticed in Warren county.

JOHN YOUNG BROWN

John Y. Brown, candidate for the Democratic, Gubernatorial nomination, will open his speaking campaign at Morganfield, Union County, Saturday, June 3. it was announced by his Headquarters in the Seelbah Wednesday.

The address will be broadcast over WHAS, Louisville from 2 to 3 o'clock and will be preceded by motorcades, the announcement stated.

Mr. Brown, Former Speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives, and former Congressman from the State at large, was born in Union County as a boy —as a poor boy . . . the son of a tenant farmer, to enter Centre College. He returns seeking the Governorship with a brilliant record as a lawyer, legislator and champion of the rights of all the people.

And it was the Union County that John Young Brown received his first education. An education that broadened into understanding. Understanding of the many problems that face the people of his state. An understanding of the problems of education, farming, mining, business and government. An understanding that developed as boyhood developed into manhood. A boyhood that was characterized by hard work and study. Work behind a two horse team and plow . . . work in the coal mines of Western Kentucky Study . . . study in the one room Ruben School near Uniantown. A procedure he repeated once because there was no high school near Later study in the high school at . Morganfield And later on study at Centre and the University of Kentucky.

Mr. Brown, father of four children, and a member of the Methodist Church, formally announced his candidacy in a radio address, April 6. At that time he stated he favored old age pensions of $30 a month; civil service for State employees; cooperation with the policies of President Roosevelt and Senator Barkley; abolishment of politics from State Welefare Institutions and a living wage for school teachers.

His announcement was made after a meeting in Louisville, during which 107 of the Barkley campaign chairman of last summer indorsed him for the nomination.

Enclosed are copies of letters written to Senator Barkley by Mr. W. Reed Embry, prominent business-man and also Senator Barkley's answer to Mr. Embry in which he endorses the candidacy of John Young Brown for Governor.

"My Dear Mr. Embry:

I have received, read and carefully considered your letter of May 15, wherein you urged me as a matter of public duty to express my opinion regarding the selection of a Democratic Candidate for Governor of Kentucky at the Primary election to be held on the 5th day of next August.

First, let me thank you for the compliment you pay me by the statement that a sufficient number of voters in Kentucky are interested in my views to justify or place upon me some obligation to express them.

Let me say also that I appreciate your deep interest in the welfar of the peopl of Kentucky and your interest as a citizen in providing for them the best and most efficient government that is possible of attainment.

You are one of the outsanding busines men of Kentucky. You have on many occassions given proof of your devotion to the public intereest, and I have no reason to believe that my own views onthe race for Governor are more important or could receive more thoughtful consideration than your own views upon that subject.

But, inasmuch as you, together with many other citizens of the State have taken the position that it is my duty as a citizen and voter to make my views known, I am tatling the liberty to make public your letter to me and my reply to it.

Your letter raises a number of questions which it might be profitable to discuss, There are many elements, personal, political, economic and social which may properly be considered by the voters in determining their attempt as between candidates.

I shall not attempt to discuss them all, to do so, would lengthen this letter beyond my desires.

First, there are numerous questions confronting the people of Kentucky for purely local solution; such as taxation, education, highway programs, old age pensions, law enforcement, the development of our resources, the encouragement of business the elevation of the standards political appointments by the inauguration of the merit system, and a score of other important problems in the solution of which a sympathetic and courageous Governor could sound the trumpet and lead the way. The people of Kentucky are familiar with these problems and are anxious that they be worked out with intelligence, pattience and courage.

In addition, you are eminently correct in suggesting the importance of harmony between the State and Federal Govrnments in daling with the matters of common interest to both.

The functions and activities of both the State Governments now cover many fields where understanding and cooperation are indispensable.

The functions and activities of both the State and Federal Governments now cover many fields where understanding and cooperation are indispensable.

In the construction of highways, the administration of laws and policies for the benefit of agriculture; in the protection of the people from contagious diseases and providing sanitary envirements conducive to health; in making the most of our educational facilities; in establishing and maintaining conciliation and better understanding in our industrial life; in administering and approving the laws providing unemployment compensation and old age subsistance; in the administration of relief and work programs for the unemployed; in the promotion of flood control, and the elimination of stream pollution; and in many other coperative services offered by the State and Federal Govrnments, it is essential that there exist betwen the two the fwiest, understanding, sympathy and good faith to guarante the maximum of service and results.

Neither the State nor Federal Government should use these agencies for any private, political or mercenary advantage, or for any other purpose except to give to the people the characte of service to which they are entitled.

If it is possible to choose a man for Governor whose views, knowledge training and experience qualifies him to give this sort of cooperation such a choice ould seem to me to be of great advantage to the people of Kentucky.

In the perofrmance of this two-fold task I believe John Young Brown combines the essential qualities needed in the next Governor of Kentucky.

He served two terms in the Kentucky Legislature, during one of which he was speaker of the House of Representatives.

In this capacity he grasped and improved the opportunity to become familiar with all details of the State Government.

His record at Frankfort, whether on the subject of labor, agriculture busines, education, or the social and economic advancement of all the people, was intelligent, onstructive and altogether creditable to him and those who selected him During these tenures in the Legislature, he showed a commendable independence of judgement. Following his service at Frankfort, he became a member aad served two years in Congress from the State at large at the begining of the Roosevlet Administration. During this congressional service he acquired an intelligent grasp of the problems facing the National Government under the new Administration. During this Congressional term he was loyal to the Democratic Party an dto the Administration of President Roosevelt and rendered to them honorable and enthusiastic cooperation.

By reason of these things it is my opinion that Mr. Brown possesses on intimate and comprehensive knowledge of the working of the State and Federal Governments and will be in a position to cooperate fully and sympathetically in working out their joint problems. And his knowledge of the details of State Government undoubtedly would render him qualified to deal effectively with matters where the State alone is involved.

In addition to these conditions, Mr. Brown, in my judgement, is equipped with certain personal qualities which admirably fit him for Governor of Kentucky.

I believe, therefore, that he would be an able Governor.

No one doubts his high moral character of his intergity.

I believe, therefore that he would make an upright Governor.

Ibelieve, therefore, that he would be a Governor beyond the control of selfish or sordid interests.

No one condoubt his good faith.

I believe, therefore, that when he says he will not prestitute the function and agencies of the State to further his own or any other man's ambitions, he means precisely what he says and will keep faith with the people of the State.

For these reasons and others of a similiar character, which I need not here recount, I intend to support the candidacy of John Young Brown for Governor of Kentucky."

Cordially Yours,

(Signed) ALBEN W. BARKLEY

"Dear Senator Barkley:

All the citizens of this Commonwealth should be, and no doubt are, greatly interested in the Democratic Primary to be held August 5th, 1939, for the nomination of candidates for State offices to be elected in November.

As a private citizen and as a member of the Democratic Party I am vitally interested in the public welfare of my State and desire to see candidates nominated who are best equipped to render efficient service to our people. I presume there will be no further announcements for the office of Governor and that the voters will be controlled to chose one of the three announced candidates who are Keene Johnson, Lieut. Governor, Charles D. Arnett, Secretary of State an. Honorable John Young Brown, who holds no public office.

You are no doubt well acquainted with each of these gentlement and also have a full knowledge of the governmental problems facing the next State Administration. You are a voter and citizen of our Commonwealth and the Floor Leader of the Democratic Party in the United States Senate and have an intimate knowledge of both National and State affairs. For these reasons, I believe that you owe a responsibility to the people of your State to publicly advise them of your opinion as to the best qualified person among the three from whom they must choose.

I also think it important that you impress your opinion, if you have one, of the necessity of harmionious cooperative acting between the National and State Governments in the Administration of public affairs. It occurs to me that this is a matter of prime importance when consideration is given to the unemployment, old age assistance and youth programs of the National State Governments.

I am in no sense a politician, but like thousands of others in the State, have a deep interest in the efficient administration of public affairs, both in the State and Nation because of the vital effect on all business.

It is not my purpose to embarrass you in any way, but I sincerly believe that the people of this State wish and expect you to give them the benefit of your seasoned judgement as to the course they should persue in the selection of the next candidate for Governor.

Sincerely Yours,

(Signed) W. REED EMBRY

CENTRE COLLEGE STUDENT BODY ELECTS PRESIDENT

Richard A. Wathen, of Louisville, was elected president of the student body of Centre College today in fiercely waged contest. His opponent William McEvoy, received eighty-one votes, just fourteen less than Wathen.

The balloting began at nine in the Morning, and the last vote as cast at exactly twelve noon. While the election proper only lasted three hours, the final tabulation was a result of several months frenzied political activity on the Centre campus. Wathen received most of the fratern support, while McEvoy's total was contributed chiefly by his football teammates non-fraternity men, and a sprinkling of fraternity men.

The other office appearing on the ballot, that of King of the Carnival, an annual pre-graduation celebration, had only one candidate listed, James German of Louisville, so he became King by virtual acclamation.

In an election held by the Junior Class, John Pilkington was unopposed for editor of the Centre College Cento, and will edit the last edition of this year's Cento as well as assuming full responsibility in the Fall.

All-Day Educational Program On Western Ewes

Many sheep raisers in the county will attend the District Sheep Fair at Williamstwon next Friday, June 16. Notice is being sent to all sheep raisers in the county, inviting them to attend. Pens showing all types of Western ewes with lambs at side, will be exhibited as a part of this all-day program which will include talks by sheep authorities from the Experiment Station and by successful sheep raisers of Northern Kentucky who have had experience with the Western types of ewes.

It has been pointed out by the local committe in charge of arrangements for this county that all sheep raisers should attend this meeting sa as to become familiar with the several types of ewes that will be available for flock replacement this year. There has been much confusion in the mind of farmers as to the kind of ewe to buy since some of the so-called Westerns are not of the type recommended for this section, R. C. Miller, Sheep Specialist of the Experiment Station will discuss the several types exhibited.

In addition to the ewes and lambs, exhibited, local breeders will show rams of several breeds. It is meant to have the program an all-around educational exhibit. The Grant county Farm Bureau cooperating with the county agent and the Extension Department will have charge of the days program. Farmers are largely dependent on the Western ewes for flock replacement since native ewes of high quality are very scarce, the Farm Bureau committee pointed out. It has been the habit of farmers, G. C. Mullins, chairman, to depend on late and parasite-infected lambs to maintain their flocks. This has been an expensive habit and the flock in generally go down in quality if this practice is followed.

The program starts at 9:30 a. m. with a 4-H Club Sheep Judging contest. Besides Mr. Miller, others on the program include, S. C. Jones, who will discuss "pastures for sheep." Buford Devers, who will give a handling demonstration, and one or more of our leading sheep men from each county.

Omer W. Cleek, Walton, is Program Chairman for this county.

U. S. HIGHWAY No 25

Considerable attention has been directed in recent months to the rebuilding and rerouting of U. S. 25 through Boone and Grant Counties. As a result of much publicity and the activities of a number of interested persons, it appear that we may get something done toward finishing the bad gaps in this county much earlier than was anticipated.

Naturally the work would eventually be done. This highway is too important and caries too much traffic to be permanently ignored. But its completion even a year earlier than was anticipated would save thousands of dollars to those who find it necessary to use this highway.

The Northern Kentucky Highway Association is centering its interests on the uncompleted portions of the Dixie Highway through Boone and Grant counties. Our friends from Williamstown, Dry Ridge, Crittenden, Florence and Erlanger, as well as from many other town along this route are now taking an active interest in this portion of U. S. 25. If we follow through wth the opportunity that we now have and make the most of the interest we have developed in this matter, we should soon be able to see some material results of our efforts.

The Walton Advertiser has been an advocate of good roads for twenty-five years, and following its long-established policy it has attempted to do its bit to call attention to the deplorable condition of the Dixie Highway through Boone and Grant counties for the purpose of getting improvements made at the earliest possible date.

REPORTS ON RETAIL TRADE

Business activity continues to reflect a farirly steady volume of retail trade, acto reports to the Department of Commerce from 36 key cities, received by its Louisvill District Office. Automobile Sales are at levels substantially higher than a year ago, but the spring peak in automobile pro duction has been passed. Assemblies so far in May have approximated 72,000 unites weekly as compared with a weekly average of about 88,000 cars and trucks during April. Bituminous coal production has reflected the extension of the industrial dispute and output has been quite low over the past two weeks. However, the outlook for settlement of the labor tieup in the bituminous coal fields have brightened. Expanding activity in the construction industry has stimulated allied lines and total industrial production is runing about one-fifth above the level of a year ago. Reports on retail trade varied in different sectors, with small increases and decreases approximately on a balance. Shopping for Mother's Day stimulated various gift and novelety items. Wholesale trade was featured by small but steady orders for immediate needs.

Kentucky employment services reported placements totaled 744, increase of 42 per cent over preceding week.

Thirty soft coal mines in Kentucky added to mining shutdown, as now labor contract not yet reached.

Louisville bank clearings in creased 6.8 per cent over year ago.

Farm work progressed rapidly and tobacco growers well alone with preparation of the ground for new crop. Tobacco plants reported plentiful and generally in in good conditions that some tobacco will be set within a short time

April building permits, $251,970; April 1938, $249,200.

Limestone Company of Bedford, Ind., was successful bidder for supplying cut stone for the $11,000,000 building to house the Social Security and Railroad Retirement Boards in Washington.

Mining boom experienced by the 30 soft coal mines in Western Kentucky not affiliated with C. I. O. and thus not affected by the current labor dispute; operating on a 24- hour schedule with peak output makin gavailable nearly 1,000 cars daily.

A warehouse addition is being erections in April were $9,790,241, an increase of $700,501 over April 1938.

Plans announced for construction of new county garage at Glasgow, Ky., to costs $8,000.

American Legion Home and Community House is being erected at Guthrie, Ky., at a cost of $5,000.

One of the best community builders is the merchant who runs an up-to-date clean, well lighted, with a stock ample to meet the needs of the community which he is located, well merchandised, well displayed and liberally advertised. A town may have fine streets and good homes well kept and well cared but it is the live, progressive up-to-date merchants that bring the business into town. The automobile has made it possible for people to get about more than they used to and as a result they become more discriminating buyers than they once were. They are no longer satisfied with a dingy, poorly lighted, ill-kept store, with shop-worn merchandise poorly displayed. They have come to know the more modern, up-to-date form of merchandising, and the old type has lost its attraction and appeal. One good, live, up-to-date merchant in a town, who advertises his store liberally, intelligently and persistently will bring more trade to the town than any other single thing and incidentally a group of such merchants will build a modern city out of a cross-roads village, because trade from far and near will seek the thing and the service it desires wherever it is to be found

JAMES PRESTON

A week ago it was canned beef (from the Argentine) that had the politicos talking. This week it s "canned talk" (from Washington) that has them "beefing."

The canned talk on this instance is a new series of radio programs just inaugurated by the National Emergency Council. It works this way: Various government officials make speeches into radio transcription recording machines. The records are then sent to raido stations for broadcasting.

Purpose of the canned speech series, according to the officia lNEC pronunciamento, is to give small stations which do not have chain hookups a chance to broadcast the pronunciamentos of the Administration dignitaries. The series, said the NEC announcement, would be confined to factual discussion of the operation of each department of the government.

First to take the air was the President, and in his 'canned fireside" Washinton observers says the apparent real purpose of the program showed through, to wit: A renewed attack on the press, at which the Brain Trust has been pointing an accusing finger of bias for many months.

For example, that inaugurating broadcast, the Chief Executive declared: "In some communities it is the unhapply fact that ONLY thru the radio is it possible to overtake loudly proclaimed untruths or greatly exaggerated half-truths."

So it is that canned talk is almost as sore a subject around the Capitol as canned beef. A good many of the Congressmen are irritated by the more important matters of state are ironed out at the Capitol, there may be some fireworks over his matter.

Meanwhile, it is not likely that the canned beef argument will die for a long time| Cattle raisers, and the public in general, have made their wrath pretty well known in Washington and Congress is in no mood to see the issue smoothed over with any fanciful explanations.

London's balloon network, which the Britishers hope will protect that city from air raids, as the subject of conversation at a National Press Club luncheon table the other day.

During debate over the effectiveness of such a protective screen one correspondent dryly observed:

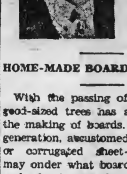
Relief is a bigger brain teaser for the Brain Trust now than appears on the surface. Many in the inner circle are frankly worried over the prospects for the new WPA appropriations bill which has been sent to Congress. The bill ask 1.7 billion dollars more for WPA.

The quietly conducted investigation of WPA by the House Appropriations Subcommittee is causing the most annoyance to the planners. And the apparent general dislike of the WPA program by the publice, the press and many of the Congressmen adds to the problem.

What to do about it is the current question being tossed about by the spending advocates. To date the only fruit of their thinking has been the food-stamp plan now being tried in a few cities. If it works, the administration hopes to lean heavily on the new plan to take some of the "curse off WPA."

Meanwhile, Secretary Icles is sounding out a plan of his own. It is not a new one, but that would serve the purpose of keeping the government in the spending column and project signs on the country side. His plan is for a bigger and better PWA.



If the alphabetical agencies confuse you, take comfort in the knowledge that they also confuse even the people who work for the government.

On a recent radio question-and-answer program, six government clerks were asked to identify the following: FDIC, FTC, FHLBB, FPC, and FAA. Not one of the clerks could give a correct answer, although each of the five agencies named are important clerks in the administration machine.

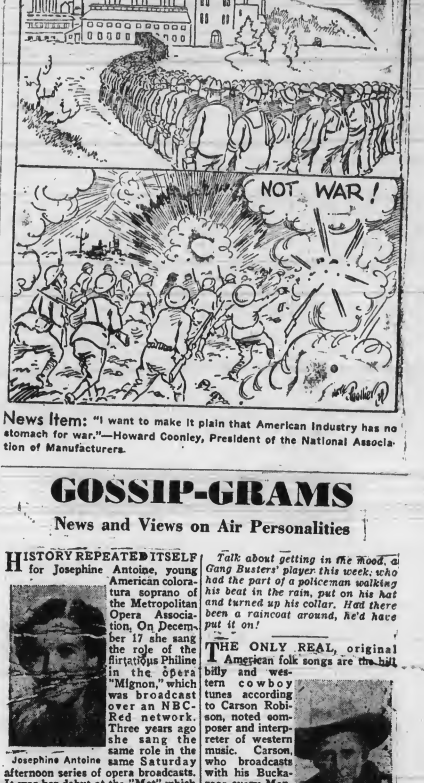
HOME-MADE BOARDS

With the passing of most of our good-sized trees has almost passed the making of boards. The younger generation, accustomed to tar-paper or corrugated sheet-iron roofing may onder what board-making was and why it was the measure of a man's skill as anartist. Of course there were clumsy board-makers, just as there are poor workmen in every field, but the real maker of boards knew more than could be writte down about theskill required to drive out wit a frow the material for his roof.

First of all, had to be a good judge of trees to know which one to cut for boards. Most boards were of Oak, but just any oak tree was not enough; it took a straight one, with no evidences of wind-shaken wood. Then in the sawing of "cuts" one had to know how to pick the places that would show the straigtest grain and be freest from defects. After the cuts ere sawed, the bolts were split out, the smaller blocks of the cut that were to be used in the actual board-making. The heart wood, if it showed too many knots, was carefully blocked out and left for wood for the fireplace or stove.

A frow, may I say for the young folks, is a knife-like instrument with a handle attached. It is not sharp like a knife but rather dull; hence the comparison "as dull as a frow." The handle is at right angles to the frow and is held in one hand, while the mallet for driving the frow is held in the other. When the frow has been driven into the bolt, you begin to pry with the frow, slipping it along as the gash widens. The skill you may have the best shown by the fact that your boards are approximattely as thick at one end as at the other. Those that feather out are useless except for kindling. The others are ready to be piled up in straight piles or pens until they have seasoned. Some fancy board-makers would cut off the sap edge of the boards to make them uniform in lasting quality, but this is not absolutely necessary. Some other people take a drawing-knift and shave off any thickness or irregularities inthe boards, making them look more like "brought-on" shingles.



Piling the boards into pens was always my job, and I came to pride mys lf on my pens, whether any one else did or not. I usually laid some three down flat and three crossways, continuing this until I had a pen about five feet high. To keep the boards from warping, it is a good idea to place a heavy weight on each pen until the curing is done.

Th great advantage in roofing with boards is that you can cover so much space with so few boards. If they are three feet long and fairly wide, you can soon roof a barn or a house. Though houses were seldom covered with these boards after shingles came in, I have seen some excellent roofs on houses that had survived from older times and very few new ones. As in so many things, there was no style about home-made boards; therefore people who owned houses with such roofs were likely to be slightly apologetic. Be it said once for all, though, a board roof, however rough, seldom looks so bad as a peeling, patched, drab roof of tar paper, especially the kinds that have no color or soon lost it.

HISTORY REPEATED ITSELF for Josephine Antoine, young American coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, On December 17 she sang the role of the flirtatious Philine in the opera "Mignon," which was broadcast over an NBC-Red network. Three years ago she sang the same role in the same Saturday afternoon series of opera broadcasts. It was her debut at the "Met" which gave her the distinction of being the first prima donna ever to make her debut in opera simultaneously with a radio broadcast of the opera.

EDWARD JOHNSON, master of ceremonies of the Sunday afternoon Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air program, which is heard at 2 p.m., EST, over an NBC-WJZ network, maintained an active interest in young American singers along with his many responsibilities as general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Association. As chairman of the auditions committee, Mr. Johnson and his colleagues have heard over 350 young singers in preliminary auditions since the program began last September. Twenty-eight aspirants have been heard by Sunday radio listeners, of which number 6 have been selected to appear as semi-finalists on the programs of December 18 and 25.

THE ONLY REAL, original American folk songs are the hillbilly and western cowboy tunes according to Carson Robison, noted composer and interpreter of western music. Carson, who broadcasts with his Buckaroos every Monday night at eight o'clock EST over the NBC network, takes his cast to London, England, every year where they are known as the Pioneers. The English people are amazingly enthusiastic over the American cowboy songs, says Carson, but it's got to be genuine . . . no "cowboy from Brooklyn" stuff. Carson himself is an ex-cowpuncher.

LEXINGTON'S FIRST HOUSE COMES HOME

Local Alumni Serve on Committee to Move Patterson Cabin from Dayton, (O.) to Transylvania Campus

TRANSYLVANIA University at Lexington, the oldest college west of the Alleghenies, will be the custodian of the first house built in Lexington in 1776. The cabin, which was built by the pioneer Kentuckian, Colonel Robert Patterson, was moved to Dayton, O., in 1901 by his grandson, John H. Patterson. At the solicitation of Governor Chandler the Patterson heirs have agreed to the removal of the cabin back to Lexington. Governor Chandler and Alumni of the University will officially accept the gift from the members of the Patterson family at the Transylvania Homecoming festivities June 4, 5 and 6. The general public is invited to attend the cabin dedication ceremonies Monday, June 5.

CINCINNATI CATHOLIC WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION VACATION TOUR

The Cincinnati Catholic Women's Association have announced plans for a 11-day vacation tour to Atlantic City, New York City, Buffalo and a five day boat trip on the Great Lakes, stopping at Midland, Ontario, Canada.

The tour will leave Cincinnati on July 30th at 6:05 p. m., traveling to Atlantic City. Here a delightful day and night will be spent with the many interesting diversions that this sea-side resort offers. Hotel Jefferson will be the headquarters with the best accomadations—double rooms, twin beds and bath.

Arriving in New York City, August the group will register at the Hotel Lincoln, with the same room accomadations as in Atlantic City. The tour will remain in new York City three days and night. Escorted sight- seeing trip will be made to the World's Fair, also one will be made on Manhattan Island viewing the nationally known and historically famous spots of this great metropolis. Free time will be allowed to take in the beautiful shops, theatres, etc. August 4th the group will leave New York City for Buffalo. Have a complete sight-seeing trip has been planned.

On the morning of August 5th, the tour boards the S .S. SOUTH AMERICAN (Georgian Bay Navigation Co,) and proceeds on a beautiful and scenic five days spent on the Grat Lakes. The objective of this marvelous trip is Midland, Ontario, for a visit to the Martry's Shrine. This is the historic shrine of the Jesuit Martrys. The great religions and historic memories attached to the venerable site, as well as the many spiritual and temporal favours accorded here, have made the National Shrine a centre of interest people of every race and creed. This year the 50th anniversary is being celebrated, August 5, 6, and 7th, so the C. C. W. A. time of arrival is very opportune. This is the first time an organization group from Cincinnati has visited the Martry's Shrine and Fr. T. J. Lally has written a letter to Miss Clara B. Kelly. Upon Leaving Midland, Ontario, the steamer will go to Chicago. Here the C. C. W. A. tour arrives August 9th at 8:30 a. m., and leaves for Cincinnati that same day.

This is a marvelous chance for all the C. C. W. A members and friends to take advantage of this way to see the World's Fair and enjoy five restful days of delightful travel on the Great Lakes. Meals are taken care of everywhere but in New York City. Those interested are asked to please contact Miss Clara B. Kelly, Chairman of Tours, Baltimore and Ohio RR. 114 Dixie Termanal Bldg., Main 2900 and descriptive itinerary folders and additional imformation will be supplied, or the C. C. W. A. clubhouse, 518 Est Fourth Street, Ma. 2431.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Approximately a million pounds of phosphate have been ordered for use in soil improvement in Elliott county.

Wt weather has increased plant diseases, but in Lewis county they were checked by prompt attention.

Adair county farmers have noted that with appreciably better chicks, profits already are bing increased.

COUNTY FAIR

Plans for the Dearborn County Fair, which will be held July 24th to the 29th are rapidly bein formulated. In spite of the seemingly dull business period through which we are passing, No pains or expense is being spared and the public is promised a bigger and better Fair than ever.

JOHN YOUNG BROWN

The Gubernatorial campaign for J. Young Brown candidate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination ,this week enters the active speaking stage with a mammoth rally at Morgamfield, Union County, the place of his birth.

The rally will be held at 2 o'clock, Saturday, June 3rd. Thousands of supporters from every section ofthe state have notified Mr. Brown's Headquarters they will be at the opening of the active speaking campaign in this year's primary races. Mr. Brown's address will be broadcast over WHAS.

Last week Mr. Brown received the unqualified endorsement of Senator Alben W Barkley, majority leader of the Democratic Party in the United States Senate.

"I believe John Young Brown combines the essential qualities needed in the next Governor of Kentucky " Senator Barkley wrote W. Reed Embry, prominent Kentucky business leader.

Mrs. Florence S Cantrill of Lexington had been appointed Chairman of the Woman's Division of his campaign.

Mrs. Cantrill, a former member of the Kentucky House of Representatives, and at present a City Commissioner of Lexington, last year directed women's activities for Senator Barkley in both his successful primary and general election races.

In accepting this appointment Mrs. Cantrill said, "I find myself politially congenial with John Young Brown in that he has consistantly and unfailingly supported Franklin D. Roosevelt and his policies. Mr. Brown has a political and social philosophy that will enable him to make a good Governor of Kentucky. In accepting this appointment I am following the leadership of Senator Barkley."

In Lexington it was announced that Sheriff Ernest Thompson, President of the Kentucky Sheriff's Association has been appointed Fayette County Chairman of the Brown Campaign.

Sheriff Thompson is one of the many orginal Brown for Governor supporters, and the meeting of the Sheriff's in which he was unanimously elected their president, he informed the members of this fact. His subsequet unanimous election in effect gave Mr Brown the endorsement of Kentucky's Sheriffs.

In a statemen t accepting the chairmanship, Sheriff Thompson said Governor Chandler had on more than one occasion stated as far as he was concerned, 'they could build a fence around Fayette County."

"I want to tell Happy Chandler and his candidate, Keen Johnson that Palette County acepts his challenge and John Young Brown will carry Fayette County by the largest majority ever given a candidate for public office and he will be the first Governor of Kentucky from Fayette ounty," the chairman said.

During the week E. Leland Taylor, Louisville Dmocratic leader issued a statement declaring a story in the Louisville Courier-Journal which stated he had pledged his support to Keen Johnson, was not true. Mr. Taylor said he had never been interviewed by any newspapermen on his attitude in the Governor's race.

From Paducah it was announced that Henry F. Turner, Jr., has been appointed McCracken County Chairman for Mr. Brown. Mr. Turner last year managed the campaign in that county for Senator Barkley.

"John Young Brown has shown, not by recent campaign words but by action when action was needed, that he is for Alben W. Barkley for President in 1940," Mr. Turner said. "If he is elected, Kentucky will send a 100 per cent delegation to the Democratic Convention, who will back Senator Barkley to the end, and not trade him off after the first vote."

GALLUP SAYS AMERICA OPPOSES FOREIGN WAR

The American Public is still overwhelmingly opposed to military participation in a foreign war," Dr. Geo. Gallup, Director American Institute of Public Opinion, states in an article in the July issue of Cosmopolitan in which he tells what Americans are thinking about. "It regards entrance into the last World War as a mistake and 84 percent of the votes oppose sending an army or navy abroad. At least 61 percent favor a national referendum before any citizen can bedrafed to fight overseas."

Gallup's findings, based on the results of interviews by seven hundred American Institute of Public Opinion researchers who question a carefully selected cross section of main preoccupations of American minds at the present are: war or the threat of war and what the United States ought to do to protect itself from embroilment and insecurity, a hangover from the depression which wiped out jobs, assets and savings of millions of families; the New Deal and the future politicial courses of this country.

There is a strong revival of interest in Europeon affairs, Gallup goes on to sayanda growing sentiment toward giving all possible aid short of military participation, to England and France. This reaction has rapidly gained ground with the progress of the Nazi regime in Germany. Americans regard the growth of Nazi and Fascit idealogies as a threat to all democratic nations. They fear that if the Rome-Berlin axis should succeed in defeating Britian and France, the United States would be the next object of invasion. A small per cent of the voters interviewed said they would like to sell food and armaments to these nations for strictlyeconomic reasons.

HUGE "ACCESSORY" FOR BOULDER DAM—This 320,000 pound "accessory" is a pressure regulator, supplied by Allis Chalmers, with the two additionol 115,000 h.p. turbines being shipped to Boulder Dam development. It protects the pipe line supplying the terrific volume of water to the turbine. If the load goes all the turbine, this volume of water is shut off within 4 seconds, which would obviously set up huge pressure on the pipes supplying water. Instead of stopping the flow so suddenly, this pressure regulator temporarily by-passes the water thus avoiding pressure shock to the pipe line.

"WHICH COLLEGE SHALL I CHOOSE?

As a service to graduates of Kenhigh schools, the National Youth Administration has issued a new book entitled "Which College Shall I Choose?", listing all colleges in Kentucky and describing their locations, cost, curriculm and student activities for the school year 1939-1940.

The purpose of this publication, according to Robert K. Salyers, State NYA Director, is to help young men and women to secure information as to the purpose and function of the schools which they might wish to attend and to acquint them with requirements for admission, the goal which must bb reached in the college and the various phases of student life.

"In order to be able to make an intelligent choice, boys and girls who are planning to enter college must have a basis for determining which school best fits their particular needs," Mr. Salyers said.

The directory lists thirty-nine institutions, giving information as to the type of college, courses offered, recognition granted, admission requirements, operation of school year as to term length, cost, student activities and organizations, and affiliations and accrediting relations.

The manuscrip was compiled by the NYA Guidance Division, under the general direction of W. Edmund Baxter, Administrative Assistant. Copies of the directory may be obtained by writing the State NYA office, Third and Main Streets, Louisville, Kentucky.

HOSPITAL SURVEY FOR VETERANS

Under the direction of Keen Johnson, Chairman of the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Board, an intensive survey has been conducted at the State Hospitals for the Insane during the last two years by Hugh Lewis, Field Secretary of the Board, for the purpose of procuring the transfer of all veterans eligible for treatment in hospitals maintained by the Veterans' Administration to those institutions.

In pursuance of this work, the records of all the male patients in the State Institutions have been reviewed the relatives of the men contacted, the inmates fingerprinted and identification established either through relatives or friends or by the Adjutant General's Office or Bureau of Navigation, Washington, D. C.All men within the World War draft age limit, or who had ever indicated that they might have served in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps at any time were thus investigated. A total of 933. A hundred and twenty-eight men are shortly to be transferred. It was pointed out that this work was undertaken solely as an extension of the service ork for disabled veterans for which the Disabled E-Service Men's Board was created with no thought towards a financial return to the Commonwealth of Kentucky, but that nevertheless, a total of $13,986.70 has already been saved to the Commonwealth in maintenance of inmates through these transfers and that a saving in maintenance on the men transferre will from May 1, 1939 amount to $1.622.50 per month, or $19 470.00 per year. It was stated that the entire appropriation for the maintenance of the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Board is only $18,-0000.00 per year.

LAWS WHITE VILLA GROCERY

Can you keep a Secret?

A FEW PEOPLE don't even yet understand how Sears can and do give you such high quality, and still charge you so little money for it.

Maybe we can explain it—once and for all.

☆ ☆

What makes price?

Manufacturing costs!

Transportation costs!

Handling costs!

And the cost of doing business.

All these things determine the figures that go onto the price ticket—if these four price factors are high, it just naturally follows that the price has got to be high If they are low then the price can be correspondingly low—without injuring the quality—or without shrinking anybody's pay-envelope anywhere along the line.

Sound economy, therefore, would seem to dictate —in the interests of the consumer, meaning you—that every constructive device possible for holding down manufacturing, transportation, handling and business operation costs should be sought out and applied

In other words, the answer to nation-wide consumer benefits and "the more abundant life" is the elimination of waste in manufacturing and distribution.

Sears merchandise is manufactured as efficiently as is humanly possible, in competent factories, in which the cost-cutting magic of straight-line, mass production constantly operates in your behalf. The same economic law, which has given you $3000 automobiles for less than a thousand dollars, has given you Sears "better goods for less money"

Sears merchandise travels, from factory to you, over the shortest possible route—meaning low freight costs.

Sears merchandise goes through the fewest possible number of hands—meaning low handling costs.

Sears buys for cash, and serves you, without fuss or feathers, in simple practical stores located outside the high rent district. We even omit some of the graceful gestures and niceties with which more expensive stores humor you—for the sole purpose of holding down prices; on the theory that, whereas the moneyed few demand and want to pay for these extras, the great rank and file prefer to have us put our money, and theirs, into the goods

TOBACCO BILL VETOE BY ROOSEVELT

A bill designed to prevent the export, except for experimental purposes, of any tobacco seed or plants, was vetoed today by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt asserted in a message to the House, "It would appear to be virtually impossible to effect sufficient control over the export of small quantities of seed required."

"The imposition of a ban on export" added, "would be likely to stimulate the creation of an unwelcome bootleg activity."

The President also said that small quantities of seeds exported for bona fide experimental purposes in a few years could produce enough seed to sustain a large commercial tobacco production.

Asserting the bill would "constitute an undesirable precedent" the president pointed out American agricultur had benefied materially thru introduction of seeds and plants from foreign countries.

Proponents of the bill claimed it would go far toward stopping foreign production of United States type tobacco, which competes with this nation's exports.

STRESSES SUMMER PULLETS

Good summercare of pullets is stressed in an article by C. E. Harris a poultry field agent of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Most poultry raisers have sold the cockerels and now are engaged in maturing the pullets or all and winter layers. How to do this well and economically is important if the flock is to be profitable, he points out.

Economical gains come only hen the flock is kept free from parasites and disease. Diseased and parasitised pullets seldom grow into profitable egg producers. The best insurance against disease losses is to put the pilets on a clean range which has not been used by the old hens or other fowsl for a year or more. This can be done by providing a range shelter, which is easy to move. Such a sheltersaves labor, in that it requires infrequent cleaning, gives cheap protection against predatory animals, and furnishes shade. It also allows pullets to be put on good pasture, which reduces feed costs.

For water, a 50-gallon barrel with an tutomatic value placed on a wire or slatted platform will lessen labor and time in caring for the flock. An outdoor feeder to hold both grain and mash also should be put on the range. Feed and water must be kept before the flock constantly if cheap gains are to be made.

There is a tendency to quit feding mash about this time and to feed only. A bralanced mash, in addition to grain, is required for good results. Where corn and wheat are available, the following mixture will give good results:

Ground yellow corn. 63 pounds
Wheat middlings or mixed wheat feed, 23 pounds.
Meat and bone scrap, 0pounds.
Satl 1 pound.

Another satisfactory growing mash may be made of corn meal and wheat feed mixed with a commercial supplement. Several of the feed companies sell this supplement, and directions for its use which are given by the manufacturer should be followed. Either of the two mixtures can be used at little added expense over grain alon. There are many good commercial mash mixtures available to Kentucky farmers at prices that are reasonable.

Certainly with the availability of so much good feed it is poor conomy to raise pullets on grain alone. A pullet can be grown from hatching time to laying age with from 20 to 28 pounds of feed, and spasmodic feeding does not lessen this requirment> neither does grain feeding alone. Poor feeding practices and unbalanced feeds simply mean that more time is required for the pullet to mature, more pullets are stunted and fewer good ones are ready to lay when eggs are selling at their best prices.

It is hoped that those who have good pullets will feed them during the summer so that when fall comes they can put winter layers in the house. Your county agent will be glad to assist you with your feeding problems. He can also furnish plans for the range shelter and outdoor feeder.

GRASSS O. K. IF LIME PHOSPHATE USED

Kentucky Experiment Station tests begun three years ago to compare sveral spcies of perennial grasses outside of the Bluegrass region of the state, showed that such commonly-grown grasses as orchard, redtop, timothy and Kentucky bluegrass produced good stands and covers on land well limed and fertilized with phosphate. Canada bluegrass and meadow fescue also proved satisfactory. The grasses were not pastured but were clipped frequently to represent grazing.

NOTED BREEDERS TO SPEAK AT KENTUCKY STOCKMEN'S SCHOOL

Aschool for livestock breeders, to be held at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture June 19-20, will be addressed by some of the school is to give intensive study of the scientific basis of animal breeding.

Included as speakers are J. Rockefeller Prentice, Chicago, president of the American Dairy Cattle Club; Dr. O. E. Reed, chief of the bureau of dairy industry of the United States Department of Agriculture; Dr. E. E. Heizer, head of the dairy department at the University of Wisconsin; W. D. Belnap, Goshen, Kentucky breeder of catle, sheep and horses; Dr. J. Holmes Martin, director of the U. S. regional poultry laboratory at East Lansing, Mich., and formerly head of the poultry section of the Kentucky Experiment Station, and Laurence Gardiner, southern field representative of the American Jersey Cattle Club.

Lectures will deal with such subjects as genetic rules and regulations, heredity in everyday life, selection in breeding programs, breeding disease resistance, selective registradtion, and progeny testing.

Invited to attend are all dairymen, poultrymen, and breeders of sheep, beef cattle, swine and horses who are striving to improve the breds of domestic animals.

HAY CUTTING TIME

On bottom land, lespedeza should be cut for hay when it begins to lodge or fall, or when the lower leaves start dropping in great valume, says a leaflet of the Kentucky College of Agriculture dealing with cutting, curing and storing hay. On upland, the early bloom on Korean lespedeza usually coincides with the drapping of lower leaves, even tho lodging does not occur. It should be cut before this stage is reached.

The Breckinridge county farm bureau bought hybrid corn to make large number of two-row demonstrations.

Stock are being pastured on rye grass in Marshall county, where heavy seedings were made in the fall and spring.

DISTILLERS' GRAIN TESTING IN FEEDING

Tests made at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that distillers, corn dried grains are not so efficient ascottonseed meal, as a protein supplement in fattening cattle. Yearling heifers fed corn silage, shelled corn, wheat straw and cottonseed meal gained an average of 2.3 pounds per head dairly, compared to a gain of .87 pounds for yearlings receiving the same rattion, but distillers, corn dried grains instead of cottonseed meal.

Likewise, yearling steers gained faster when the protein supplement was cottonseed meal instead of distiller's grains. Calves sucking cows which received cottonseed meal as a protein supplement in fattening cattle. Yearlings heifers fed corn silage, shelled corn, wheat straw and cottonseed meal gained an average of 2. 3 pounds per head aily, compared to a gain of 1. 87 pounds for yearlings receiving the same ration, but distrillers' corn dried grains, instead of cottonseed meal.

Likewise, yearlings steers gained faster when the protein supplement was cottonseed meal instead of istillers' grains. Calves sucking cows which received cottonseed meal gained 2 percent faster than when calves or cows fed distillers' grains. The average gain ot cows in both lots, however, was almost the same.

FRUIT TREE ON TERRACES

Th increased number of peach orchards set on terraced land is attracting attention in Kentucky. Good examples of young orchards on terraces are on the farms of Dr. D. W. Doran at Mayfield and S. C. Holloway at Sedalia. A test also is being made at Western Kentucky Exeprriment Substtaion at Princeton, where trees were set one row on top of each terrace.

PLANNERS STUDY PROBLEMS

The Grant county planning council, following a series of conferences, announced that most farm problems are directly related to poor soil —soils that have been worn out or washed away. Especially does the council stress the need of erosion control, including filling ditches, sowing of cover crops and contour tillage. Each community has a committee to cooperate with the county planning council in studying probles of agriculture.

UNION

Mr and Mrs. Elbert Devore and family of Cincinnati, Ohio were weekend guests of his parents, Mr.

Mr and Mrs. Harvey Wheeler and family of Owen county spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs. Ernest See, in to see his aged aunt, Mrs. Sarah Knox who has very ill with pneumonia.

Death has again cast its gloom over our little community, taking esteemed citizens Mrs. Mary Allen from our midst one of our highly Weldon, beloved ife of Mr. Richard Weldon, whose spirit was wafted to the celestial shore, Friday, May 12.

Her death was the closing chapter of a well spent life in which time and the impress of her character was most indelibly stamped on the community in which she lived and where she was so universally loved. Being blessed with the charity that fed the hungry, comforted the sorrowing and a lovable disposition that endeared her to old and young, her passing while not altogether unexpected came as a shock to everyone. She was energetic and industrious and led a busy life until a few days before her death. She was never too tired to meet her husband at the door and the welcome she gave him at the threshold of their home for nearly three score years is a beautiful emembrace which he will carry during the remaining year that are left to him.

Beside her husband she leaves to mourn her passing: one son, one daughter; an adopted daughter, seven grandsons and two brothers. Another son passed away several years ago.

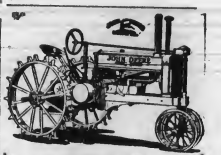
James Tandy Ellis, a friend of many years standing paid a beautiful tribute to her life having spent twb years in her home.

To her aged companion and family we exend our heartfelt sympathy, realizing that mere words are of little consolation in this sad hour, but their loss is her eternal gain. For the Beautiful ship has come in.

MORGANFIELD SELECTED FOR BROWN OPENING

Morganfield in Union County has been selected as the spot for the Bron grand opening In the Second District, Union is Brown's native county. He was born and reared thered there and was graduated from Sturgis High School.

Politicians here, always speculative, are wondering about the strategy in opening at Morganfield. Ordinarily a candidate for state office doesn't fire his big barrels in his home county Logan didn't Barkley didn't and Chandler didn't. Usuall the home county is considered to be in good shape for a native son and only appears on the routine speaking itinerary.



In the case of Brown there is considearable upon which to base an analysis which might reveal that the Lexington attorney is in real trouble in Union County There are numerous Democrats from that county who say the race there today is close as the next second.

TROOPS MOVEMENT FAVORABLE UNFAVORABLE

The troop movement to Harlan county is seen here as aneventof major political importance in the gubernatorial race Although Keen Johnson was not responsible for the movement, it is only natural that he will be blamed by those opposing it if for no other reason than he is lieutenant governor.

The sanest deduction that can be made as to the possible political effect is that the troop movement met with the approval of business men and farmers Labor, both the C I O and other groups, opposed it It might temporarily alienate from the Johnson campaign some ofthe labor groups not affiliated with the C I O. On the other hand it probably will tend to solidity the Kentucky opposition to John L Lewis behind the Johnson candidacy.

Brown had the C I O to start the campaign, and troops going to Harlan will not strengthen his position with coal miners, and neither will it hurt him. His possible gain might be with labor opposed to the Lewis rule. This is dependent upon whether the A F L resent troops being used to settle any dispute more than it resent Lewis.

"ARE THERE ANY QUESTIONS"

This information service on education is brought to you by special arrangement with Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City. Questions on education may be submitted through this newspaper.

QUESTION:

What should parents consider in order to choose the most suitable camp for their child?

REPLY:

"There are children of many kinds and camps of many kind," Dr. F. G. Osborne of Teachers College, Columbia University, says on this point. "One camp may be the best of all possible choices for a given child and the worst choice for another child. If the camp experience is to contribute anything to the child's development the camp must be chosen in the light of the child's own interests and needs. Parents have much more to consider than the camp's location, its fees, its provisions, for the child's safety and health important as these are."

Parents should ascertain what the specific program of a camp is and how it will fit in with their child's particular needs and personality. They should find out what the camp intends to do for the child and in what way. What te general atmospere of the camp is. If possible, they should talk over the child's problems with someone connected with the camp so as to be sure that these problems are fully understood.

In addition there are the requirements that every camp should fulfill. Safety, high health standards for its personnel, adequate medical facilities to take care of sudden emeregencies, should foster vigorous and healthful habits of living. It should furnish an opportunity for cooperation, intelligent obedience to authority. It should develop the mental and emotional side of the child by vital contact with real people, by new experiences with nature, by free and happy comradeship, by such things as music and dramatics. Those in charge of the camp should like and understand children, should be able to help the child think thru te problems tat confront him.

QUESTION:

Does the hour that a child goes to bed at night have any effect upon the soudness of is sleep?

REPLY:

Studies made at te University of Minnesota indicate that the time a child goes to bed has no direct influence on the quietnes sof his sleep.

Children who habitually go to bed early do not necessarily sleep more quietly than those who go to bed late. On the other hand, children who go to bed early obtain more sleep. Late bed-time is not compensated for by late rising.

QUESTION:

How can a High School student be impressed with the value of thrift?

REPLY:

Thrift, according to Dr. Benjamin R. Andrews, Professor of Household Economics at Teachers College, Columbia University, means the productive use of resources, wise spending not merely saving.

To develop the habit of thrift it is necessary to know the value of money and to know the way it can be used most effectively to obtain what one wants. If a student taught the value of money, is given a definite fixed allowance, earns something in his spare time by doing odd jobs, is taught to save up for the bycycle and camera he wants, to operate on a definite budget, he will learn the value of thrift.

Dr. Andrews says in this connection: "Plan time as well as money, write down for two days what you do and how long each item takes—then plan better use of time; record money received and spent, one week, one month, and plan better use of money; list the things you owe, tools books, clothing, money decide on what yu need most and how you can best obtain it and a month later check on results achieved. In this way lies thrift.

QUESTION:

When do babies actually begin to see?

REPLY:

At birth a baby can perceive light, but because parts of the eye, the macula—the point of clearest vision, and certain parts of the retina, are not fully developed the baby can see only dimly and cannot distinguish colors. The structure of the eye becomes complete in about 16 weeks.

The visual nerves are not completely formed until the child is 10 weeks old. Focussing takes several months.

After the first month the baby's eyes will follow a moving light. At the end of the second month he will recognize objects. At four months the mechanism of the eye is fully developed.

QUESTION:

What proportion of the school population of the U. S. lives in rural areas? What are the figures on the figures on the number of rural schools

REPLY:

According to figures contained in the Educational Yearbook for 1933, 50.6 per cent of all children in the U. S. Of the total school enrollment 49.3 per cent live in rural areas (open country or towns of less than 2,500 population).

Because the rural population is spread so much more thinly than the urban, 40 percent of the elementary schools in the U. S. and 78 percent of the high schools are rural. All told, there are about 210,000 rural schools.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner,

In Kentucky, "late potatoes" may mean any of several things. They may be the so-called "July potato," generally a selection from McCormick, sometimes Jersey Peachblow and sometime Dakota Red, renamed Jersey Red. Or, the variety may be Green Mountain.

Properly to prepare a late potato seedbed, a start should have been made in early May, the ground broken, then disked and ragged smooth. As any weeds started, disking and dragging should have been repeated, perhaps several times, depending on how many crops of weeds grew. It goes without saying that good land should have been chosen and generous amounts of well-rotted manure, or, better, a heavy cover crop should have been turned under. By virtue of having destroyed the several growths of weeds, there should be practically none to fight as the crop of potatoes is being produced. The several times repeat-surring of the soil tends to save its moisture, and the potatoes benefit, in consequence.

Potato scab is quite a serious trouble, partly because of the hot, dry weather that prevails during the late season, but partly, too, because the seed potatoe may carry th causal organism on their skins or in the soil that adheres to them. Although complete freedom from scab cannot be guaranteed by seed treatment, it will help. Directions are given in Kentucky Extension Circular No. 309, a copy of which may be procured from county agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Because the soil is usually somewhat dry at planting, the seed should have been allowed to "heal over" before it is planted. By this is not mean the drying out some farmers follows, but are forming a corcky layer that forms when cut seed is put in slatted crates or in loose-mesh bags where air can pass through, but slowly. The "skin" that results is just as effective in holding sap as the natural skin of the potato. An additional precaution is to cut the seed pieces a trifle larger than in spring planting; 2 ounces, for example.

Late potatoes should be planted more deeply than the spring crop, for moisture's sake; the furrows should be laid off 6 to 6 inches deep, but before the seed is dropped, fertilizr (4-8-8, 5-10-5) should be sown, 1 pound to 25 feet, and worked in, but kept in the bottom of the furrow as much as possible. The rows may be as close at 30 inches but if lay as close as 30 inches, but ing-off is done with a plow, the width may have to be greater to get the proper depth. One seed piece is dropped at a place, 13 to 18 inches apart for the late varieties are all large-topped.

Before a plow is used, the covering may be complete, or just half the soil put back in the furrow, depending on how deep the moisture lies, bait finally, the furrows should be filled level full and the surface kept so. In this same connection, should come the warning not to lay off furrows so far ahead that they will dry out. Many poor stands of late potatoes are the result of seed pieces "coming" in hot, dry ground.

Immediately after the potatoes are planted it may be well to break up the middles cramped from passing through them during the planting, for as many as four trips are taken during the process. This "middle-busting" should be the last and only deep working of the potatoes, however. The bride, from this point on, should be to stir the soil no more than is necessary in upsetting what weeds grow, such stirrings given promptly, while the weeds are still small and require no violent workings to remove.

Planting time for the "July" potatoes ranges from June 15 to July 15, depending on latitude; that for Green Mountain in the latter half of June, throughout the state.

ADVANCED SCHOOL AT TEACHERS COLLEGE PROJECTS NEW STUDY PLAN

A survey has been completed at Teachers College Columbia University it was disclosed the end of May in which each faculty member presented his ideas on the most important fields for future development in education.

The survey was conducted by The Advanced School of Education in conjunction with its new plan for establishing Institutes of study. The School, which is directed by Dr. Paul Mort, was established in 1928 and is unique among graduate schools in that enrollement is limited to candidates for doctoral degrees and post-doctoral students. The entire student body numbers only 200, and is served not only by the 160 professors on the Teachers College faculty but by other faculties of the University.

The new Institute Plan is described by Dr. Mort as calling for "provision of facilities for on-going research and practical application in the pressing problems which society must solve and which most probably must be solved through education. In addition it provides for the periodic appraisal of education objectives, the improvement of means for appraising schools in terms of these objectives and the better extension of findings of research to actual school practice. The plan also embraces an extension of the school survey system which operates under the directorship of Professor George D. Strayer, by which communities have for more than 20 years been able to bring the resources of Teachers College to bear on their educational problems."

"The units of the Institute System are to be set up not only so that the student may learn by working with masters, but so that in the learning process he is making a very definite contribution to society and it is on this basis that he will be judged. Work will be carried on with the cooperation of laymen in groups or as individuals, whose special interests are involved.

"It is an extention of the ideal master - disciple relationship," Dr. Mort explained, "and the inclusion of layman is an important aspect. We can try out ideas, and gain knowledge and insight not available in books by establishing small conferences or committees of laymen drawn from persons representing a great variety of backgrounds. Thru this means we hop to utilize more fully the scholarship of the mill, the market place and the farm. Further than that," Dr. Mort added, the lay conferences held to date have revealed that the discoveries in the psychology of learning which have revolutionized education practices in the past forty years, are still unknown to the lay public."

A number of Institutes have already been established. One, the Institut of Education Research, Division of School Experimentation, has several successful projects to its credit, such as the Speyer School, the research work in which is directed by Professor Leta S. Hollingworth. This School, established in cooperation with the city schools of New York City, has achieved fame all over America and Europe as an experiment in the teaching of exceptional children. A special curriculum has been set up here for slow and very rapid learners. This sample of specialized training for unique children is already having a broad influence on the schools, particularly in New York.

The ideas submitted by the faculty members during the survey, explore the future in every direction, and they have been classified into 67 units. One unit projects an Institute for Consumer Education. "I hope I had the opportunity to talk to several business people in the textiles, equipment, and food fidles in business, and I feel that they are extremely interested in th problems of the needs and desires of the ultimate consumer of thegoods. Since New York City as the world center of trade and manufacture as well as retail business, it is an ideal place for an Institute of this kind, for I believe that the only way that business and the consumer will understand each other's needs and determine ways of meetinng them will be through the avenue of education. Such work could have a profound effect on the school curriculum."

Another suggestion was for a program of recreational planning and an educational program to guide it. Recreation is already a more important industry than agriculture, manufacturing or commerce in several parts of the nation. Recreational education should be governmental, national, interstate, state, local, and some should be private. All of it should be explored and guided by education."

Social engineering was an important subject for consideration. One suggestion was for an Institute for designing a new type of community. "The city as we know it today is less than 100 years old. It is parasitic upon its own population. The rural community has meanwhile been rendered archaic by recent developments so that its population is rapidly becoming depressed and underprivileged. The need for designing new and fundamentally different community patterns, is recognized by the professional planner, but since education has largely ignored the issue, the citizens is practically unaware of its existence."

The creative activities of individual professors are in themselves embryonic institutes." Dr. Mort explained, and in the relationship of research assistants and scholars to these professors, we have the simple organization which we believe will come more and more to characterize the Advanced School of Education."

SHEEPMEN PLAN STATE MEETING

The annual Kentucky ewe type fair and lamb show is to be held at the College of Agriculture in Lexington, Tuesday, June 13, according to announcements by Richard C. Miller of the College who is making arrangements. Ewes of many different types, as well as lambs from ewes of various western types, will be on exhibition for comparative prposes. It is planned to have the lamb so foot for observation and discussion during the morning and to see the same lambs on the hooks in the afternoon.

Aside from the prominent Kentucky sheep raisers and members of the College of Agriculture staff, out of state speakers of national prominence ill appear on the program. A banquet is being arranged for the 13th and a tour of flocks in Central Kentucky on the 14th when various types of ewes and their lambs will be observed. For years this annual meeting has attracted more attendance than any other livestock meeting held in the State. An effort is being made this year to provide a more elaborate and better demonstration than at any of the meetings held in the past.

Many out of state delegations have indicated an intention to attend the meeting and remain over for the tour. The meeting will start at 10 a. m. in the LiveStock Pavilion, and the tour on the 14th will start from the Pavilion at 9. a. m.

PAYS TO FERTILIZE PERMANENT PASTURE

In answer to the frequent question of whether it pays to broadcast fertilizer on permanent pasture in Kentucky, Dr. E. N. Fergus of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington replies, "Definitely yes, provided the pasture has a reasonably good sod and is on a soil that needs fertilizer."

Results of pasture top-dressing experiments conduted in Kentucky in cooperation with the Tennessee Valley Authority during the past four years indicate that applications of about 140 pounds of 20 percent superphosphate per acre per year to permanent pastures outside the Bluegrass region will increase the herbage production about 20 percent and protein production per acre about 25 per cents. Liming did not increase hebage yields but did increase protein production. Summarizing all results, it appear that each dollar expended for limestone and phosphate produced an income of $5 measured in terms of value of protein, calculated at its market value in concentrates or else in terms of gain in weight of beef cattle.

A second question often asked is whether fertilizer would be more effective if applied undr th sod of a permanent pasture, instead of broadcast on the pasture. Dr. Fergus' answer is, "No, provided the sod is good enough to produce a satisfactory cover after treatment." Tests of the two methods of application show that broadcasting is always as effective as sub-surface treatments and generally better.

Fenerally speaking, says Prof. Fergus, it is best to apply fertilizer to pastures between fall and spring, but the work may be done any time it is convenient. Perhaps livestock should be kept off a pasture after top-dressing, and until the material has disappeared from th eherbage.

In Hopkins county it is estimated that 26,000 acres of rich bottom land would be tillable if drained.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SUMMER SUNSETS

Silhouettes against the sunset make striking snapshots.

SUMMER'S gorgeous sunsets are splendid snapshot material, and sunset pictures are easy to take, whether you have a simple box camera or a high-grade folding camera with ultra-fast lens.

Charming silhouettes of persons can be made with the sunset as a background, and sunset shots across a lake or stream, with reflections, are remarkably beautiful. The effect of a sunset is heightened by a good foreground, such as a "frame" of trees or overhanging leafy branches. In the country, try shooting the sunset with a piece of farm machinery silhouetted against it. A plowing scene, with straining horses silhouetted against the sunset sky, makes a successful snapshot.

One of the most important points in picturing sunsets, is to obtain a strong, vigorous cloud effect. Good clouds are often better than a riot of brilliant color, at least for black-and-white picture purposes. In many cases, a more striking result will be obtained if you place a color filter over the camera lens. The filter brightens its own colors, and darkens its opposite or complementary colors. When in doubt, shoot one picture with the filter and one without. A good sunset is worth an extra shot or two.

Either chrome type or panchromatic film is excellent for sunset pictures. Short exposures are desirable, in order to subdue detail in the foreground. If yours is a box camera which has a choice of lens openings, use the smaller opening. With rapid-lens cameras, try an exposure of f.16 at 1/50 or 1/100 second. If the sunset is quite bright, and you are shooting across water, you may use an opening as small as f.22.

Watch the sunsets—keep your camera loaded—ready for action—and you will add many a charming snapshot to your collection.

John van Guilder.

WITH THE REDS

As the National League pack passed the quarter pole, the Cincinnati Reds, making their second tour of the East, found themselves occupying the lofty first-place perch.

Before the Reds again appear at Crosley Field, on Thursday they will meet the Philadelphia Phils in a night game, the first nocturnal battle ever played by the Reds in Philadelphia. After an off-day Friday, they will go to Brooklyn to meet the Dodgers in three games in two days, with the twin bill tabbed for Sunday.

Baseball's Centennial will be celebrated Monday at Cooperstown, the picturesque New York village where baseball was born. Every major league club will be represented on that day to dedicate Baseball Museum and Hall of Fame. A three-inning game between stars of both leagues will be played, with Johnny Vander Meer and Ernie Lombardi representing the Reds. The rest of the Reds will be in Rochester to meet the Red Wings in an exhibition tilt.

The powerful flood lights of Crosley Field will blaze for the first time this season on June 15, as the Reds and Phils skirmish in the first nocturnal affair of the local season. Before the game there will be a mammothdisplay of fireworks and an exhibition by the University of Cincinnati band, one of the finest hythmical units in this section of the country. Ticket for the night game are now on sale at the Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets.

MUSIC IN A SHOP

(This article is supplied by Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City, as a contribution to public information on education.)

Your child will need music as long as he lives. If he learns to love it as a small tot, so much the longer will he enjoy it. And since human nature is what it is, he will be happier making making his own music than listening to the more ambitious compositions of others.

This is the story of a teacher who is also a mother, who ad smiled as all mothers at sweet baby songs chanted monotonously over and over while small bodies rocked in rythm.

Since she was a music teacher as well as a mother, she began to wonder what happens to the spontaneity and joy of little children who start out by singing as naturally as little birds and frogs sing—and who before they reach adolescience have slipped quietly and finally into the great audience of those who listen and look, but do not participate.

Cirrection, along with charity, begins best at home. She began to examine her own methods. At the time ed to be carried over such a handi-

First, her attention was focused upon that system of foreign syllables (the Latin do-re-mi) of the middle ages, still used by most teachers of music. Undoubtedly they clutter up the learning process for the immature mind of the child who must translate: Do is the first one, I'll sing the first note of the eight-note scale; sol is the fifth one, and I must sing the fifth not." Granted: a need for simplification. Why not use "one-two-three" etc., instead of 'do-re-mi'? And so she did.

Then she examined the custom, in force for the hundred years that American public schools have taught music of presenting printed music to beginners. Staff notation by which printed music may be read, is a complicated adult process evolved to its present system through many intricate stages and there is nothing small group of children. This made ordinary child, not sufficiently gifted at the music mortality rate? Any childlike about it. Who can wonder experiment practical.

The question is not whether Johnny shall be taught to read music by note, but when. Note-reading is the key to that magnificent store of musical literature of the world that will enrich all of his years to come. But not until he is mentally and psychologically ready for it. Taught prematurely it will set up a reaction against all music, and Johnny will decide that such complicated business is not for the likes of him.

So the question: How could our teacher friends simplify not-reading? Answer; by using those same numbers, 1 through 8 to stand for notes. A dash to represent an extra beat if a note is held. A circle around two numbers if there are two to a beat, a circle around three numbers to indicate a triplet. Simple, an it works.

Now for an instrument. Little fellows are usually led up to the piano —an enormous, complicated instrument, the result of man's highly inventive genius; an instrument that requires not only a complicated finger technique, but also the deciphering of a bewildering set of symbols before the child can be initiated into its secrets. Or they may be presented with violins which make even greater technical demands and require finger adjustment. Need simple instruments on the child's level.

There ensued a hunt through written history and through museums for simple old instruments of bygone peoples. Many specimens of primitive and ancient instruments has been collected in museums, but their possibilities in the musical education of children seemed to have been entirely overlooked by music educators.

Out of their numbered cases for examination came all the old drums and rattles of many shapes and sounds. Pan-pipes and flutes, trumpets and whistles collected from Central America, Africa, and faraway savage islands began to be respected for what they had to give children of the present day. Marimbas, gambangs, and zanzees broke the silence of centuries. Crudely shaped stringed instruments—hundreds of them—bows, Harps, rebecs, fiddles, psalteries, lutes, one-stringed two-stringed five-stringed, forty-stringer, any type one could wish—all were examined for their possible values to children.

Out of the hundreds of instruments studied, and after many experiments with and without children a tentative selecion was made. Since rhythm is the first element of music which a child desires to express, drums (kettle drums, barrel drums and tabors) were considered important. Other simple percussion instruments which produce sound by a blow were bells(ordinary bells, sleigh bells); Chinese gongs; marimbas, which consist of a series of bars of hard wood graduated in length and provided with sounding boxes—instruments quite often found the base of Christmas trees, and therefore already popular with the children. A brass wind instrument called the tuba, and asimple trumpet similar to those used by the ancient Romans were particularly acceptable to small boys. Various wind instruments, such as reed Pan-pipes, shepherd's-pipes, ocarinas shaped like sweet potatoes, simple transverse flutes and recorders with big clear notes dear to Shakespeare's Hamlet, were added to the collection. Simple stringed instruments included Egyptian and Irish harps, Chinese kins with silken strings; lyres so often appearin Greek legen; psalteries mentioned in ancient Hebrew documents as accompanying the psalms; simple banjos; monochords of medieval days with one string; rebecs, ancestors of the violins; dulcimers, forerunners of the piano; and viols and fiddles to be played at the knees. Add glass harmonica, with tones produced by friction from a number of glasses filled to various heights with water, and you have the entire fascinating collection.

But where were these instruments to be obtained? Only a few could be bought from music stores. Clearly they must be made. And by whom? If posible by the children who were to use them. And why, indeed, could children not make instruments such as primitive peoples in different parts of the orld had made? They could and they did.

Intuition suggested, and experience proved, that a youngster would create simple melodies for an instrument which e himself had shaped. He would do it as a matter of course, as the next step. Charming bits of ment which he his self had saped. on scraps of soiled and rumpled paper shared Johnny's pocket with marbles and chalk and other odds and ends. Parents became interestd and jotted down in the teacher's musical shorthand bits of songs which Sister crooned to her dollies.

Then came an opportunity for this music teacher of ours to work with larger groups of children in Lincoln School an experimental school of Teachers College, of Columbia University. She accepted a position in this shool, which welcomes new and exciting methods of presenting subject matter, and went ahead on a larger scale with her work of helping smal lchildren to make music instruments suited to their mental, physical, and musical levels.

That was 20 years ago, and some measure of fame has found this small woman. Satis M. Coleman by name, who has seen her books translated into several languages, and her gospel of creative music spread all over the world. Ten years ago at an international educational conference she gave a series of lectures to representatives from 49 countries. Even that grand occasion was as nothing compared to the day when her own young musicians of the third, fourth, and fifth grades at Lincoln School played their own symphony, on their own instruments. But that is another story.

We parents and teachers,' she says, will come to realize that the more our civilization advances through science, the more we need art to keep the balance, and the greatest of all balancers is music." And she adds, "Musical ability exists in some degree in every so-called normal child. In a wide experience with children, I have never dealt with a child who had not the capacity for some kind of musial experience which was vital to him. It is our duty to see that he gets it."

This litle lady practices what she preaches. So do her pupils; up and down he scales, on marimbas, drums and fiddles!

AT THE JAMES

Five outstanding pictures are booked for your entertainment at the James Theatre this week. The first being the "Oklahoma Kid.' Never before has there been a frontier epic like 'Oklahoma Kid' because there has never been a star like James Cagney to play it—co-starred to Humphrey Bogart and Rosemary Lane. Showing Friday and Saturday, June 9th and 10th.

After twenty years of motion picture achievement comes a great motion picture "Wuthering Heights" starring Merle Oberon-David Niven. Love and despair burned in their tortured eyes. Thrill to the Haunting beauty of this deathless romance. He married a woman he lothed to spite the one woman he loved. She thought she could escape a strange, fierce love by marrying another man. The screen year's mightest moment —when her soul rings with the other man's vows of vengeance. To Be In Louisville

Helen Arnold is the beautiful blonde songsness expected to eclipse the full moon schedule to enhance the naural beauty of Lousiville's out door theater which opens July 3 with the "Sudent Prince."

Iroquois Ampaltheater's sylvan stage wil shine with colorful settings and songs to background three of America's greatest operettic singers, Helen Arnold, soprano, Conrad Thibault, baritone, and Clifford Nowdahl, tenor.

Miss Arnold's debut occured in the St. Lousi Municipal Opera where she remained twelve weeks although orginally scheduled for a mere seven days engagement. Her popularity in Missouri's summer theater brought her to the attention of George White who engaged her for several seasons in his Music Hall Varieties and "Scandals."

The Shuberts later signed Miss Arnold to sing in revivals of "Blossom Time." At the inauguration of the Randall's Island Stadium in New York City, she sang the role of "Katie" in the Student Prinbe", triumphing the following week in the femine leading role of "Roberta."

Directors of the Louisville Park Association have taken Miss Arnold directly from the vast stage of Radio City Music Hall where she has been singing for the past few months. This petiet lady with the glorious voice will make her first personal appearance in Louisville during the first week of July. She is well known by radio fans having appeared as guest artist on many of the big airways shows.

Basketball Star Taken To Hospital

James Chapman, age 18, years of Verona, was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital for an emergency operation Monday, June 12 by J. L. Hamilton Amublance service.

During his high school years, Jimmy achieved one of the greatest honors to be bestowed on an athelete, when he was named on the All-Tournament guard on the basketball team for 1938-39. He now is an outstanding base ball player for the Verona baseball team which is fighting for top position in the Campbell County League. The team will sadly miss Jimmy's presence.

HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION HELD MEETING

Make Application To State Highway Department

At a meetnig of the U. S.25 Highway Association of Northern Kentucky held Wednesday night, June 7 at Kenton Terrace, it was decided by those present to make application to the State Highway Department to begin operations by building six (6) miles of road at the south end of the present four-lane highway and extending to a point near Richwood.

A Committee consisting of A. B. Renaker of Burlington and John L. Vest of Walton, Boone County, Dr. H. C. Mann of Crittenden and A. Threidkel of Corinth, Grant County, and Simon Billiter and R. N. Lucas of Kenton County, as Committee to appear before the State Highway Commission at an early date to discuss the situation with the Highway Engineer.

In addition to the six above named, it was unanimously agreed that there should be added to the Committee one person to be designated by the Fiscal Court of Grant County.

The exact date on which the committee will go to Frankfort is not yet known, but will be fixed as early in the future as is agreeable to the officials at Frankfort.

It is hoped that by this method that some action may be taken during the late summer and fall of 1939.

Bob and Gene Wins 5th Straight

The strong Bob & Genes' baseball team, winner of last year's crown have finally come into their own, taking the last five games in stride, and are now bidding for their sixth game in as many starts, when they meet an equally strong team in Carling's Beer, Sunday, June 18, at Crescent Springs.

Sunday they won from Cold Springs by a score of 5 to 4.

The highlights of the game were, when Ryle, pitcher for Bob & Gens' who was in rare form, struck 12 of the opposing team and allowing them 4 runs and 12 hits, which were well scattered.

4-H Club To Have Show

Two hours of talkng pictures, featuring the film dramatization of the famous 4-H novel, "Under the 4-H Flag" will be shown free to the people of Kenton county Wednesday, June 21 at 8: p. m, Eastern Standard Time, according to an announcement made this week by The Venard Organization of Peoria, Illinois.

The show will be given at Simon Kenton High School Bld.

There will be no admission charge and no free-will collection of any kind, The program was produced primarily in the interest of the 4-H movemen, but families and friends of 4-H members and all others interested in agriculture are invited to attend.

In addition tothe six-reel feature picture, a 4-H newsreel showing important events in the 4-H and agricultural calendar, an educational short " Hidden Values" and a cartoon comedy will be shown.

Of further interest to those who attend the program is a contest whose award money totals $2,000 which is being held concurrently with the sowing the picture.

The twenty-four counties whose attendance at the show is greatest in proportion to the counties, rural population will share in $2,000 in awards. The county winning first award will receive the first prize of $1,000 which will be turned over to the county club agent for use in 4-H program.

The feature picture is an all-talking film version of the celebrated 4-H novel, "Under the 4-H Flag" by John F. Case, editor of the Missouri Ruralist and former president of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture.

The story is, in effect, the projection of the old-fashioned ideals and principles through a colorful and fast-moving drama. It as a lot of good sound constructive thinking about agriculture in general and 4-H in particular but it also has its share of dramatic thrills which involve the sinister doing of a gang of counterfeiters who have a secret rendesvous in a cave near an old farm where the hero—a boy who is just getting interested in 4-H work and his family live. It moves at a rapid pace thru mysterious warnings, shots in the dark, a summer full of hotly contested 4-H projects and competitions, and reaches a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show in Chicago, where the mystery is unraveled and the rascals brought to justice.

Verona Team Wins Again

Behind the masterful pitching of McClure, the Verona Baseball team defeated the strong Braysville team by a score of 3 to1. McClure allowed but 4 hits and one run.

The closeness of the score made the game made it very interesting throught the game.

Verona meets the Pepsi Cola, one of the strongest teams in the Campbell County League, Sunday June 18. Come out root for your favorite to win another game.

FATHER'S DAY

Whether he dwells in a cottage or palace . . . in some third floorwalk-up or in the swankiest apartment in town—It's HIS DAY! Sunday, June 18th! It is well to remember that from a wee bundle of humanity in your Mother's arms it has been DAD who stood as a comforting bulwark both of you and the stern realities of a stener world.

It's Dad who has provided—both in good and bad—for your growing years. It's Dad who removed the abstacles and smothered the way for your young feet as they danced so gayly toward life. It's Dad to who you turn, even today, for advice and counsel when the path again becomes dim and the going rough.

So on this Father's Day why not pay your respects to a "real Dad—your own! Show him, with so remembrance, that you Do appreciate and remember.

Jury Convenes Fourth Time

After convening yesterday, for the fourth time, the Kenton County grand jury impaneled by Judge Johnst Northcutt in Kenton Circuit Court in Independence May 8 was adjourned until June 27 by Judge Northcutt.

Addressing the jury, Judge Northcutt expressed the opinion that by June 27 the Kentucky Court of Appeals will have handed down a decision in a suit in which he seeks to determine his right to name a Commonwealth Attorney pro tem to conduct the grand jury investigations.

We will be in position then to know what we can do and that We cannot do, Judge Northcutt told the jury. He expressed the opinion that the county had benefited as a result of the jury's being in session.

Boone County Wool Pool Sold Monday

The Boone County Wool Pool sold Monday, June 12th 12,683 pooled fleeces consisting of approximately 65,000 pounds of wool to Tucker and McLoney of Cynthiana. The price, while not announced until the date of delivery, was reported quite satisfactory and considerable above that received last year. The clip will be delivered this coming week.

Pool members will deliver their wool at one of the three points in the county; namely, Walton, Tuesday June 20th; Burlington, Wednesday, June 21st and Petersburg, Thursday, June 22nd. Each grower will receive full payment for his wool as soon as it is weighed.

Kentucky To Keep Its Bridges Home

In replay to persistent rumors that the state of Ohio under its revised bridge law might attempt to purchase the two kentucky-owned bridges here and group them with the Supension and Broadway spans in an Ohio-owned group. Robert J. Humphreys, Kentucky Highway Commissioner, today issued the following statement at Frankfort:

"The State Highway Department is now operating the L. & N. and the C. & O. vehicular bridges economically and they are thriving. We intend to continue to operate them and to free hese bridges in reasonable time. We have had no proposal of any kind from the Ohio Bridge Commission and I know of no state offical or anybody who has had.

"We bought te two bridges at Cincinnati to operate tem under the Kenucky bridge law. We are more than pleased with the returns these spons ave made and we intend to free them for the public at the earliest possible time.

Attend Exercises At Ohio Wesleyan

Saturday was Alumni Day, when about one thousand sat down in the large gymnasium by classes, to a fine luncheon.

The after-dinner" speeches, especially about the brother and sister H. Huges, were full of witty and pleasing reminiscences which all enjoyed. Bishop Hughes inquired especially abou the brother and sister of Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. Bedinger, were in his class in college.

Saturday night delightful class reunions were held, when all were as though college boys and girls again.

Sunday the large chapel was full when the Baccalaureate Address was given by President Edward L. Rice, and the evening Sacred Concert, with al arge chorus and orchestra and the magnificient pipe organ, all directed by the master hand of Prof. Rixford Keller, were worth going far to hear.

Monday the Commencement Exercises were held with an address by Dr. Frederick Morgan Davenport of Washington, D. C., and the conferring of degrees. The pleasant drive home brought to a close four red-letter days.

JUDGE GOODENOUGH SEEKS RE-ELECTION

"Judge Joseph P. Goodenough who has served the citizens of Covington for the past 12 years as Judge of the Covington Police Court, is a candidate for Judge of the Kenton Circuit Court, Criminal Division. Judge Goodenough has made many friends since he has been on the bench of the Covington Municipal Court. He has easily triumphed three victories as Judge of this Court. In 1934 Judge Goodenough was a candidate for Congress for the Fifth Congressional District. The Judge carried Kenton County by a vote of 8,100 to 4,000 over the present Congressman, Brent Spence. The Judge has many friends in the rural sections of the County because of his many speeches bebfore the Churces and P.-T A. organizations. "

Last week a large crowd attend the R. G. Kinman sale in the above city mentioned.

Now Is Time To Clip Pastures

Pastures, like hair, need clipping—but for the same reason, according to Ward T. Darnell.

Permanent pastures should be clipped with a mowing machine this month for two good reasons, Mr. Darnell says. The first is that some of the pasture plants may have reached the heading-out stage, become tough and unpalatable, and clipping will stimulte a fresh, nutritious growth of grass to provide grazing late in the season. The other reason for clipping in June is the control of weed.

Because of a wet spring weeds in pastures are especially prevalent this year, Mr. Darnell points out. Systematic clipping is required to keep them from maturing seed. Not only that, but weeds injure pastures by shading and crowding out valuable pasture plants. They rob the soil of moisture that is needed during the hot dry days of July and August.

Increase of permanent pastures is one of the best methods of preventing soil losses. It is one of the keystones around which a better use of the land revolves, Mr. Darnell says. Clipping, along with reseeding and the use of limestone and phosphate, will work wonders in the pasture field, Mr. Darnell points out.

SHIRT TAILS

Are Americans irresponsible spendthrifts?

This would appear to be the only logical conclusion to be drawn from the fact that during the past eight years the yearly additions to the public debt have averaged three and a half billion dollars, which is more than the total cost of government in 1929, not withstanding new and heavy taxation that has been imposed since then. By July 1, 1940, the President estimates that the Federal debt will be $44,458,000,000, as contracted to $16,000,0000,000 in 1932. Interest alone on this vast amount now consumes 20 cents of every dollar of tax revenue or over $1,000,000,000 a year.

All the flag waving in the universe cannot save a spendthrift nation from revolutionary choas. And that is something that the general public does not yet seem to realize. Public officials in the nation's capitol are now almost helpless to stem the tide of spending, even if they so desired. Every man women must come to realize that the federal debt is rapidly approaching proportions that threaten the very foundations of individual liberty.

There is no such thing as "free money." As one public official, a United States Senator, recently pointed out: "We get the money from you . . . and you don't get it all back . . .We take your shirt and give you a little piece of the shirt tail. Then you go back home waving it and shouting, 'Look what Uncle Sam gave me.'"

"SUPERVISION" SHOULD NOT MEAN "MANAGEMENT"

On essential of national prosperity, observed a recent economic survey, is the existence of a "private banking system, publicly supervised, operated primarily for the benefit of indivduals, industry, commerce and agriculture."

It should be kept in mind that there ment "supervision" of banking and overn- is a world of difference between government "control" or "management"" of banking.

Government supervision is proper and necessary. Government "control" of banking, on the other hand, would amount to government control over practically all of the financial resources of America. Every bank account would be more or less the plaything of politics. Immense financial power could be used for political ends and purposes.

Our American priviate banking system has worked. It has built our industries and homes, and has done much to help give the highest working and living standards in the world. It has been largely responsible for our world-supremacy in every field of commercial endeavor. To weaken banking as a private enterprise is an invitation to disaster. That would place the savings of the American people more and more under the not-so-tender mercies of politicians, few of whom would be employed by a private citizen to invest his savings or manage his business.

NOT FOOLED

The farm marketing cooperatives have been subject to many attacks. They have been denounced by selfish dealers, who dislike doing business with organizations which can meet them on equal tterms in deciding prices. They have been revealed by others with an axe to grind at the farmers, expense.

The farmer, by and large han't been fooled. The membership rolls of the marketing co-ops have steadily increased. So has their volume of business. An this has happened because the organizations have produced results. They have broadened and stabilized markets. They have often improved prices. They have helped the consumer, by assuring him of a trustworthy supply of farm products. And they have done invaluable work in improving standards of farm maintenance and operation.

The cooperative marketing movement brings business principals to the craft of agriculture, and provides the eventual solution to many ofthe farmers' most difficult problems.

ARE TAXES BUSINESS?

Whether taxes are are not business deterrents depends to a large extent upon whether government activities are necessary activities, whether they are efficiently performed, and whether government policies as a whole are sound. Given a certain amount of revenues to be raised, however, for whatever, reason, it is obvious that certain ways of raising them will have a more deterrent effect on business than others. What the present advocates of tax revision are now advocating is merely the adoption of the least harmful ways of raising the existing level of revenues and the repeal of the most harmful ways. That problem should not present insuperable difficulties. In fact, there is remarkable agreement among the tax revisionists concerning the necessary program.—New York Times.

TOWARD BANKRUPCY

Those economists who are wondering just how much longer the world can go on building up its armaments without entering bankruptcy are getting more and more food for sober thought and argument.

We are the richest country in the world, and our $1,126,000,000 national defense bill for the next fiscal year is the largest in our peace time history. Yet this is hardly a drop in the bucket compared to what Europe and Asia are spending. Great Britian's budget close to $3,000,000,000. Japan's is over $1,500,000,000. France's is about the same as ours. Italy's is $611, 000, 000 and will probably be increased. Germany doesn't publish figures of this nature, but her expense is huge.

Lastly—hold your breath here—the U. S. S. R. has announced a defense budget running to the almost unbelievable plenty of headaches among Russia's posum of $7,700,000,000. That is creating tential enemies.

These figures show why the standard of living abroad is steadily dropping. In Germany, it is said, one-fourth of the entire national income goes for arms and public works, neither of which is edible.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

JAMES PRESTON

A pebble on the beach is still just a pebble, even when transferred to the "social position" of a rock garden. There is no metamorphosis.

But take a political peble from Podunk to Washington and the metamorphosis is astounding. He, or she, become a self-syled social lion or lioness, overnight and no social height is too great to discourage the climber.

So it is that a good many pebbles who felt flattered to be invited to a Saturday night shindig at a neighbor's home in Podunk, are causing no less a personage than an Ambassador to lose sleep and poise in Washington these days. It is all because they can't get an invitation to meet the King and Queen of England.

Two weeks before he scheduled arrival of Their Majesties, the guest list of those invited to the offical garden party at the British Embassy was announced. It ran into many hundreds of names. Those appearing on the list were the Congressmen, the top-rung officials of the administrative branch of government, and the recognized social leaders.

But missing from the guest list were the so-called bright young men and women who have filtered into Washington (and into responsible, well-paying government jobs) in the last few years. And so it was that this group began raising a terrific rumpus over their social hurts. Reasoned this group: If we are big enough to make business men and John Taxpayer bow to respect before us, aren't we good enough to bow before the visiting Royalty?

The energy that has been extended bythesesocially ambitious ones in an affort to get on the guest list, in many cases, exceeded the energy they expended to get their choice jobs. It is the most interesting—and biter—social war waged in the Capitol since the famous Dolly Gann-Alice Longworth feud of many years ago.

Indeed, the metamorphosis of a political pebble is strange when fortune lists it from the unknown and commonplace of Podunk to the potent pot of politics and patronage in Washington.

Mut the struggle for social recognition is only for the slighted brine trusers. The Congressmen and the administration top-rungers have a war oftheir own and the stakes are considerably higher. That struggle is over the question of: "More experiments or a return to normalcy?"

It is a more furous battle than is portrayed in headlines. It is keeping a lot of administration strategists working overtime trying to head off that return to normalcy."

Typical of the issues is the tax question.A formidable group of Congressmen decided afew weeks ago to take this matter into their own hands and write a new tax schedule. Their goal was to ease some of the tax restrictions on business so that investment would be stimulated. Until business and investment is stimulated, this group reasoned, there can be no recovery.

When the plan was presented at the White House the answer—was "no". Finally, however, when it appeared certain that Congress would have its own way in the matter, regardless of administration wishes, there was a face-saving retreat.

Some observers are saying: Now that Congress has gotten a new taste of the authority which was rubberstamped away a couple of Congresses ago, it is going to be difficult to head off anything it sets its mind to accomplish.

That is why there is a quiet effort being made by administration spokesmen in Congress to bring about adjournment as soon as possible. They don't want to gamble on what Congress might get into its head.

MORE BEEF STEW: Ever since the White House proclaimed Argentine beef to be cheaper and superior to American-grown beef, and ordered the Navy Department to buy the South American product for the Navy mess tables, the administration has wished it could awake and find the whole thing a dream. It hopes the Congressional tempers which reached the boiling point over the question will cool and that the matter will soon be forgotten. But Washington restaurants aren't helping much. They are careful to point out on their menus: "This beef is U. S. grown."

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

SOME RAIN AND SNOW SIGNS

If you want to know about the weather, consult local signs, or superstitions, if you prefer to call them by this belittling name. Many of these signs have some basis in meteorology; others are sheer nonsense. But the folk believe the foolish lines quite as readily as the more logical ones.

Here are some queer ones: If you wish to play the part of a rainmaker kill a snake and hang it up with its belly to the sky. I have often tried this, but I am afraid that the snake must have had enough life to turn over after I left it. You remember that a snake, no matter when is is killed, does not die until sunset. All of the snakes I have hung up were still alive by this rule.

It never rains a night in July. An old weather man of my boyhood always maintained this, year in and year out. I kept records one year to prove him wrong and succeeded admirably. In 1938 we had some of the best gully-washers on July nights and a remarkably heavy rainfall: over nineteen inches, for the month.

Whenever tree toads sing noticeably and when rain crows (Yellow-billed Cuckoos) call look for rain. As a bird student I have never found any truth in either ofthese imens, though I am probably not sufficiently intune with nature to pass judgement yet. I wonder whether raincrows shut up entirely during dry seasons.

When chickens run to shelter at the beginning of a rain, expect only a short shower. If they remain out in the weather, look for a big rain, one long continued. Chickens, as everybody know, are wise, anyway, and may know the weather, as well as they know the prospect of visitors. In the latter instance the rooster crows before the door of the house.

To be sure that snow is just around the corner, listen to the noises made by the burning wood in the fireplace. If it makes a sound like heavy shoes walking on snow, there will soon be snow to trap on)pronounced "tramp"). Just what this means in summer I do not know, largely because we do not have large fires in the fireplace then.

Now for a few that may have a bit of truth in them. A red sunset portends a clear doy onthe morrow, say some weather prophets; other declare that the reverse is true. Haloes around the sun or moon mean falling weather, rain or snow according to the season. To know how long the storm will last, or how long it will be before it starts, count the stars inside the halo around the moon, a day for each star.

Morning rains are brief. ' A morning rain is like an old lady's dance." Except in winter it is literally true that most of our rains come in the afternoon. In rainy seasons, though, all signs fail, just they do in dry ones. Another version of this belief is that if rain starts before seven in the morning, it will end before eleven.

A clearing of the sky late in the afternoon means clear weather the next day.

Rainbow at night
Shepherds' delight."

Conversely, early cloudiness in the day foretells rain later in the day, even though morning rains may be brief:

Rainbows at morning
Shepherds' warning."

PROGRESS REPORTED IN GRAYSON COUNTY

In a report of farm progress in Grayson county, Kentucky, County Agent R. T. Faulkner says that returns from poultry has increased from $350,000 to 8,000,000 annually in five years. In that time eggs produced per hen per year rose from an average of 80 to 169.

The county's conservation progrem in the past five years includes the building of 248,800 feet of terraces to hold the land from washing; the setting of 183,800 forest trees, the application of 41,218 tons of crushed limestone and 2,779 tons of superphosphate, and the turning of 6,682 acres of green manure crops.

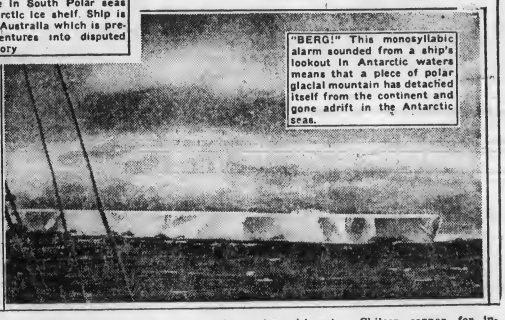
ANTARCTICA, NEW ELDORADO, DRAWS MAJOR POWERS OF WORLD

ANTARCTIC VETERAN: Lincoln Ellsworth, flying conqueror of the North and South Polar regions, upon whose claims to territory in the Antarctic rests much of the chances of U. S. victory in the brewing international dispute centered within the "last horizon."

IN SOUTH POLAR GRIP: Motorship Wyatt Earp, base craft of Ellsworth Antarctic expeditions, held fast in grip of ice pressure in South Polar seas nearby to Antarctic ice shelf. Ship is now owned by Australia which is preparing new ventures into disputed unknown territory



PIONEERING AMERICAN: Richard E. Byrd, rear admiral retired from the U.S. Navy, whose explorations in Antarctica, with those of Lincoln Ellsworth, have given Uncle Sam a claim to a big portion of Antarctic continent.

BACKBONE OF ELDORADO: Crest of range in the South American Andes. The valley-like foreground is merely a dip between high Chilean peaks, and almost matches in height the snow-capped summit in the background.

"BERG!" This monosyllabic alarm sounded from a ship's lookout in Antarctic waters means that a piece of polar glacial mountain has detached itself from the continent and gone adrift in the Antarctic seas.

By ELIZABETH ALBRECHT

The frigid "Third World" about which the Greek philosophers theorized is occupying the practical attention of the leading nations of today.

At the lower axis of the earth, the ancient savants predicted, there would some day be found a frozen land mass where a new kind of life would be lived.

Whether believing the Greeks or not, modern major powers are devoting expert consideration to Antarctica, that white and silent region constituting one of the greatest continental portions of the globe.

It is again the Have and the Have Not countries who are seeking a piece of the great wealth which is believed hidden within the "last horizon." The Haves, of course, will not relinquish what they own or any part of that to which they may have a claim; the Have Nots must find new sources of supply for what is not obtainable at home.

The United States, England and Australia, Norway, Germany, France and Japan, among others, say they are entitled to at least a part of the glacial desolation into which Captain James Cook sailed in 1773.

Of Antarctica, Sir Douglas Mawson, Australian explorer, says geological research is certain to disclose ore deposits. "Already copper, molybdenum, lead, zinc, antimony and other useful metals have been recorded as a result of our own work," he has stated.

In 1935, Sir Douglas declared: "There would be no difficulty in establishing land settlement at a few favored spots along the coast, provided commercial developments can offer sufficient inducement. Thus, should reasonably rich mineral deposits be located it is accessible to railheads there need be no delay in working them."

"I visualize," he continued, "that before long operations will be conducted from Australia and New Zealand into the southern regions much after the plan of the Hudson's Bay Company. * * * * Such a system of exploitation should not be long delayed. These Antarctic territories are important, and our respective governments should take the necessary steps to preserve and develop this inheritance."

Australia, seemingly in line with the recommendation of Sir Douglas, has just purchased from Lincoln Ellsworth, American explorer, two airplanes and a specially-equipped motor ship for Antarctic reconnaissance. At the same time, the Washington administration has projected tentative plans to send a map-making expedition into the South Polar regions to do topographical work in areas already explored by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Ellsworth, two Americans who have claimed much of the disputed continent for their country.

Nazi Germany, after aerial surveys from the base ship Schwabenland, is attempting to jump Antarctic claims long ago conceded to Norway at least by virtue of sustained whaling operations along the coast. France has laid claim to Adelie Land in the Australian sector, and had her claim redefined in 1938. Japan, via a comparatively casual adventure in the region, plus subsequent whaling operations, is voicing a right to territory there.

Ellsworth and other authorities share the opinion that the mountain ranges which he discovered in the interior of the South Polar continent are a continuation of the Andes, the eldorado range for much of the wealth of South America. Chilean copper, for instance, has been found so plentiful and economical to produce that the United States has put into effect an import tax against it.

Ellsworth believes that the American-claimed terrain on the Pacific side of Antarctica, where the Andes would again become mountains after a submarine dip below Cape Horn, will be found to be the most valuable part of the continent. No one knows for a certainty what is within the vast, white silences, but it seems certain that some one is going to find out soon.

THE FARM AND HOME

Many poultry raisers provide artifical shade if there is no natural shade. Pullets do better where they have access to shade, clean range and fresh water. Outdoor feeders should be protected from the rain.

Attention to the feet of sheep, including trimming, insures natural walking and is a precaution against sore feet and foot rot. Under Kentucky conditions, hoofs do not wear rapidly, and if not trimmed may cause crooked legs and bad pasterns.

In canning fried chicken, do not roll nor pack too tight. Precook in hot fat or brail until nicely browned. Season, allowing a teaspoon of salt per pound of meat, and pack a while hot in hot jars. Partly seal glass jars, process and completely seal.

The farm dam should be located where the subsoil is tight and nearly impervious to water. Avoid locations over gravel, sand or rock containing seams or layers. The nature of thes soil can be determined by the the use of a soil auger or post-hole digger.

Eggs or mixtures containing a good deal of egg should be cooked slowly at a low temperature, so that they will be tender when done. Children enjoy scrambled eggs, hard cooked and served with white sauce, or made into omelets.

Though house cleaning inthe old-fashioned sense no longer is done by most homemakers, certain jobs remain to be done seasonally, or even monthly or weekly. In this way the house is kept in an excellent state at all times, so that an annual tearing-up is not necessary.

4-H CLUB LEADERS PLAN CONFERENCES

About 300 men and women who act as volunteer 4-H club leaders in Kentucky will attend three conferences this month ti review club work and discuss programs for the year. Among the subjects to be considered are music, recreation, contests, shows and fairs.

The conferences will be June 19-21, at Camp Fahoma in Fayette county, for central ciunties; June 22-24, at the Robinson Experiment Substation at Quickland, for Eastern Kentucky, and June 26-30, at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton, for western counties.

FARMERS INSPECT CROP EXPERIMENTS

In addition to seeing how lime and phosphate improved crop production in the tests which have conducted to 20 or mire years, the farmers this year inspected tests made in cooperation with the Tennessee Valley Authority in which different forms of phosphate fertilizer were used. Wheat and clover were better where phosprate was used on both limed and unitmed land.

Good bluegrass sod where phosphate had been applied on iimed iand, at both Greenville and Campbellsville, attracted attention.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Twenty-two varieties of hybrid corn are being tested in a one-acre piot in Mercer county.

Wooi and iambs will pay the cost of 30 western ewes, purchased last fali by Henry Hail, Pulaski ciunty.

It is estimated that 4,000 acres of hybrid corn were planted in Lincoln county.

Varieties, fertilization and marketing of sorghum molasses were disiussed at a meeting in Hankcock county.

J. D. Duke, a Metcalfe county farmer, at the end of 10 weeks had list only six of 900 chicks.

Thirty-five rural carpenters in Taylor county attended a meeting to discuss farm building plans.

An annual spring garden tour is a feature of home demonstration work in McLean county.

A farm credit survey ad business analysis are being made in communities in Grant county.

JOBS OR MATRIMONY FOR JUNE GRADUATES IN HOME ECONOMICS

The Kentucky & West Virginia Power Company has empioyed two home economics graduates of the University of Kentucky. The young women are Florine Hurt, Alabny, Ky. who will be stationed at Pikeville, and Helen Praz, Lexington, who will be located at Huntington, W. V.

Four June graduates have decided upon matrimony as careers, while five others will teach. Virginia Nichols, Paducah, will teach at Vine Grove; Mary Jane Smith, will teach in her home town; Mallie Turner, Drift, will teach there, Ray Wood, Lexington, will teach at Hodgenville, and Jean Wilson, Richmond will teach at Kingston in Madison county.

Jennie Mae Trigg, Louisville, will serve as dietetian for three months at the Daviess County Hospital, Owensboro, substituting for Miss Emily Bennett, regular dietetian and secretary of the Kentucky Dietetics Association, who is on leave.

The marraige rate of home economics graduate seemingly is exceptionally high, according to a recent survey—establishing that technical knowledge of how to run a home efficiently is regarded as an asset. The divorce rate is outstandingly low among the young women who while in school acquired a sound philosophy of the home.

GRASS MOTO FOR COUNTY

Grass the pocketbolk of agriculture" is the motto adopted in Hardin county, Kentucky. In four years, 135,816 tons of limestone have been spread and 32 percent ofthe crop land of the county covered, reports County Agent A. J. Thaxton. In 1937, Hardin county heid the limestone record for Kentucky and ranked third among all countries in the United states.

TO PEOPLE BOONE—GRANT

and before the year is over I hope to know every one of you. Like the rest of you, I am trying to be a farmer and a business man and because of my experience, I understand the problem that faces every one of us. Your interests and my interests are the same. We both want to see the farmer restored to the prosperity that he is due, and we both want economy in Government, and a square deal for big and little alike.

If we don't get this we will all suffer, and this is my platform, and on it I will stand or fall.

I am fortunate enough to have a family and they live in the country I help to build for them. My three girls and one son will marry citizens of this community, and all they receive from life will depend upon the community that we leave to them.

It is my own wish that your children and my children may have a finer country and greater opportunity than we have known. And if you elect me your representative, every vote I cast will express my sincere effort to help my community, my district and my country.

I deeply appreciate the importance of this office which I now seek, not because of the small salary, which averages less than $1.00 per day for the two year period, but because the man that you send to Frankfort will represent, in the eyes of the State, every citizen of Grant and Boone Counties, and this is an honor anyone should covet.

I have repeatedly stated that I would not make a lot of promises, because I have known you too must tire of them. However, I will make one promises, because my desire is that I may be permitted to live out my life as your friend and neighbor, so I promise you to try to conduct myself in such way, both in private and public life, as to be worthey of your regard.

You know that I have tried my best to get the Dixie Highway reconstructed from Covington to Lexington, realizing that this great road is the life line of industrial prosperity for our communities. I have spent my time and my money trying to organize an association that would have enough influence to procure us this road. Personally I favor following the existing route, which I consider the best available. Sould anyone question this, you have my written statement showing where I stand.

I also stand four square for improvement of the County roads, and if you give me the opportunity I will do my best to make it thepolicy of our State Government to cooperate with the Federal Government and build roads which we can travel with safety.

Assuring you that I will appreciate your support, and if I receive the honor of this office, you will always find me just the same blunt, friendly country boy thatI have always been,

I am your friend,

Resolutions Of Respect

Resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors of Verona Bank, Verona, Ky. at the regular board meeting held on June 7th, 1939.

There was a vacant seat by the death of our beloved associate J. W. Roberts who had been a member of this board since Jan. 1st., 1915 and has given his ability and time to the welfare of our institution.

The remaining members of the board are deeply grieved over their great loss of such a valued, untiring and able associate.

Now therefore the following resolution is adopted:-

Be it further resolved that in the passing of J. W. Roberts, the Verona Bank has lost a very valuable director whose place will be hard to fill, that Gallatin County has lost one its most honorable, upright and valuableCitizens, that his Sister has lost a kind and affectionate Brother.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these ressoltions be printed in the Walton Advertiser and the Gallatin County News, a copy sent to the bereaved Sister and a copy spread on the minutes of the Veron Bank.

"ARE THERE ANY QUESTIONS"

This information service on education is brought to you by special arrangement with Teachers College, Columbi a University, New York City. Questions on education may be submitted through this newspaper.

QUESTION:

May daughter wishes to secure library work when she finishes High School. I understand that most it not all such positions are secured thru Civil Service Examinations. I would like to know what High School course she should take to prepare her for such a position.

REPLY:

Liberainship is coming more and more to deman da college educatin. in addition at least one year of training in an accredited library school is being required. though some libraries do maintain training classes for the lower classes of work in their own service.

The American Library Association has set up a board to inspect and ted schools, with some information accredit library schools. This board publishes each year a list of accredi- about each, which may be had by North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Any high school student interested in library work should write for this pahplet and plan his high school program in accordance with the entrance requirements of the appropriate library school.

High school years should be filled with general reading, with developing an intimate knowledge of books. It should be possible to get into the school library as assistant or monitor and gain some acual experience in the work.

Most library schools assist in placing their graduates. Many state and municipal libraries are now filled from eligible lists established by Civil Service Examinations. An xaminatin is given for library page or clerk which does not require special training and is open to high school graduates.

A recommended book on this subject is Careers for Women by Catherine Filene. Houghtin Mifflin, 1934.

QUESTION:

What are the figures on serious crimes (muder robery, etc.) committed by youth as compared to those committed by other age-groups?

REPLY:

Figures published by the New Jersey Juvenile Delinquency Commissin relating to a study of this problem in New Jersey indicate that he proporion of persons 16 o 20 years of age arrested for serious offence (criminal homicide robbery, aggravated assault, larceny, etc.) is higher than for any other age group. In 1936 the rate of arrests for such offenses per 10,000 persons if each age-group was 85 for those aged from 16 to 20; 63 for those aged 21-24; 50 for the 25-29 age group; 33 for the 30-34 group; 28 for those aged 35 to 44, and 12 for all 45 or over.

Of the total arrests for serious offenses in 52 New Jersey cities in 1936. 29 per cent were of persons 16 to 20 and 16 per cent of persins 20 to 24. National figures indicate that this condition is national and not merely local. Of all arrests for serious crimes in 1936. 27 per cent were of persons under 21 years. Of the arrests for all offences only 17.4 percent were of persons under 21.

QUESTION:

How do high school students of students of superior mental ability differ in interests and activities from those if inferior mental ability?

REPLY:

According to a study made by Dr. C. M. Blair of the University of Illinois it was found that high school students of sperior mental ability were generally more activ in school affairs than those of inferior mental ability.

They more frequently had hobbies read more books on biography, history, science and travel, preferred generally such out-door sports as hunting, fishing, boating and camping instead of competitive school atheletics. It was found that the more gifted students were far more interested in world affairs than less gifted students.

Of those studied many superoir pupils were school officers and leaders, were as pratically one of the inferior pupils were in these categories. On the other hand Inferior pupils took part in sports and athletics much more frequently than the gifted pupils.

Reading, building models of airplanes and boats, photograhy and writing werethe favorite hobbies of the gifted pupils. Boys inthe ungifted group listed collecting most often as their hobby; the girls listed sewing, knitting, and cooking.

31.8 per cent of the mentally superior boys under study listed mathematics as their favorite subject as compared to only 8 per cent of the inferior boys. Shop was the best liked subject ofthe mentally inferior boys and home economics of the mentally inferior girls. English was given as the preferred subject by the superior girls.

QUESTION:

REPLY:

"A school is concerned with the development of a pupil's initiative. This development may occur in closs, and as schools are now organized it frequently finds a favorable opportunity for development inthe school's extra-curricular activities." Elbert K. Fretwell, Professor of Education at Teachers College, Columbia Univer-sity points out.

"Under wise guidance, pupils can participate with profit to themselves and the school in the formulation of school policies. This participation doesn't at all necessarily insure wiser policies, but can furnish a favorable opportunity for pupils to understand policies and to learn how to face and analyze problems and to go in proposing wise solutions.

The purpose of pupil participation in formation of policies is primarily forthe education of the student. The extent to which they can participate os of course diermined by their ability, their previous experience and the quality of guidance that they receive from the school.

Pupil participation in no way relieves the principal or the school authorities of responsibility for anything that happens in the school."

GAME AND FISH

Conservation Officer J. C. Colson. Somerset, Ky., reported to the office here that with the assistance of Officers Mack Wilson, Alonzo Bradley and R. M. Bary, eleven fish traps had been removed from Buck creek between Bent bridge and the mouth of the creek, in Pulaski County.

Colson and Wilsonalso confiscated a small boat, two trot lines and other equipment just above the Burnside bridge onthe Cumberland River They were being used by illegal fishermen. The violators made their escape when they saw the officers approaching.

Officers Sam Embry, Hub Blevins, C. C. Walker, K. I. Price, and B. L. Britton made a raid on a fishing camp on the backwaters of Herrington Lake and captured two men, Cecil Wells and Elmer Davis, who live near the lake close to the Boyle-Garrard County line. The two men were fishing in the lake with trot lines and nets.

The two men were fined a total of $81 and in default of payment were sent to the workhouse at Danville to serve out the fines at hard labor.

The court ordered that trot lines, nets, tubs, and the boat used by the men be confiscated. A quantity of fish taken from the trot line by the officers, were also confiscated.

A 51-pound mud catfish was caught recently by three Glasgow, Ky., fishermen, Ewing Isenberg, J. S. Hester and Less Boone, in Green River near Martin's Ferry in Butler County.

This is no fairy tale as pictures of the catch have been received by Major James Brown, Dicreoor of the Division of Game and Fsih, and in turn are being passed on to the public.

The men set out about 30 poles and the cat was found on one line and snared in two hours the next day. They had a hard time getting him in close to the bank and when they did, Boone jumped in the water and ran his hand through through the fish's gills and with the other two men pulling on him, they finally landed the monster. Boone's shirt was ripped from his back by his companions during the scramble up the bank. The catch measured 46 inches in length.

"You mustn't repeat a word, Estelle"

SECOND VOICE: You did?

FIRST VOICE: Yes, Estelle. I just couldn't understand it at first. You remember what a perfectly atrocious cook she used to be. It seems her husband had Shellane installed not long ago. You know—that gas they squeeze into cylinders and deliver to your home?

SECOND VOICE: Yes.

FIRST VOICE: Well, anyone can be a good cook with that Shellane, Estelle. All you have to do is set a regulator and walk away. It hardly seems fair, does it?

SECOND VOICE: I must say it doesn't.

FIRST VOICE: You know, Im' going to insist that George get Shellane for me, too. They say it's just like having city gas service—no ashes or dirt or scrubbing or anything. It saves nearly three hours of work a day, they tell me.

SECOND VOICE: It certainly does.

FIRST VOICE: What did you say, Estelle? I can hardly hear you. Anyway, this Shellane is very reasonable and look at what it's done for Mrs. Wilkins. Why she used to look positively decrepit. Now she looks years younger.

SECOND VOICE: She feels it, too.

FIRST VOICE: What did you say, Estelle? Your voice sounds so different today. Have you got a cold?

BECAUSE LIFE DEPENDS ON TIRE SAFETY—They Choose Firestone CHAMPION TIRES

FIRESTONE WINS 20th Consecutive Victory In Indianapolis 500-Mile Race

A merciless sun beat down upon the speedway as Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Champion Tires. The blistering brick of the main stretch and the granite-hard surface of the turns and the back stretch put tire safety to the test supreme! Record after record was shattered. Speeds reached as high as 160 miles an hour on the straightaways, as 33 of the fastest drivers in the world waged a breath-taking battle for gold and glory.

Never before in all the history of the motor car have tires been put to such a torturous test. And never before has any tire so firmly established itself as a Champion in construction and performance, as well as in name. Here is dramatic proof of the extra strength which the revolutionary new Safety-Lock cord body provides in Firestone Champion Tires—of the extra protection against blowouts assured by the new and advanced Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process—of the extra mileage resulting from the tougher, wear-resisting rubber compounds in the sensational new Gear-Grip tread.

No longer can there be any question of which tire is safest. One tire—and only one—provides these exclusive safety construction features. One tire—and only one—has been on the winning cars at Indianapolis for 20 consecutive years. Motor car manufacturers enthusiastically adopted the Firestone Champion Tire for their 1939 models. Order your new car equipped with this amazing tire. Or drive in and let us equip your present car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the one tire—and only one that is safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

WILBUR SHAW, the 1939 winner
On May 30th, Wilbur Shaw drove to his second victory in the 500-mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Champion Tires at an average speed of 115.03 miles an hour. Champion race drivers, whose lives and chances of victory depend on tire safety, know tire construction. That is why they select and buy Firestone Tires for their racing cars.

THE GARDEN

A NUMBER OF THINGS

By John S. Gardener,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

Mexicon Bean Beetle:

To date, four complaints have been beetles, the holes in the leaves angusent in about the true Mexican bean lar, instead of roundish as the Southern bean beetle has been making. By the time this column appears, the Mexican bean beetle may be present in full force, and this reminder is given gardeners to be increasingly on the alert, so that control measures may move forward with no delay.

Briefly, they are, to have at hand a duster or a sprayer with an upturned nozzle to put the material where it must always be put; to have calcium arsenate or magnesius arsenate ready, depending on whether dust is to be used ir liquid spray. Arsenates may be used safely until pods began setting after which rotenone or pyrethrum should be substituted, which though deadly to insects, cirry no danger of poisoning human-kind. The other feature if Mexican beetle control is to maintain the proper schedule, which is to spray or dust immediately the first eggs are laid, then to repeat in ten days and, to make assurance doubly sure, in five to ten days again.

Kentucky Extension Circular No 257 carries full details; it may be obtained free from the county agent or by writing the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

STRIPPED CUCUMBER BEETLES:

Calls and letters about this insect have been numerous, and although the most effective control regime is that carried out while the seedlings are breaking through mrch may still be done to alleviate this pest's ravages. A dust is recommencalcium arsenate, one part. This is ded, made of gypsum, 18 parts and sifted through a sack, always about the center of the hill. The ssedule is every three days, and mmediately after each shower until at least 15 days ave passed. For cucumbers, the dusting may be continued profitably for much longer than 15 days. In fact, it appears thanthe longer protection is given, the longer picking can be continued, at least, up to sixty days. Bnt Kentucky Extension Circular 262, to be obtained in the same way as the other, gives complete directions.

Birdeux Mixture:—A few weeks ago was described a way for gardeners to make their own Bordeaux in garden-size quantity. Bordeaux would help all the vine crops by saving the leaves at the center of the hills, to help fruit size amount and quality. It ould also reduce the number if "sun-burned" tomatoes, by helping the plant retain its lower leaves, to shade the fruit. There will be more fruit, too, as a result of saving the foliage, which feeds the fruit on any plant.

Bordeaux could conceivably add a few bushels to the potato crop now making, by deferring the premature killing of vines by blight. Bordeaux is almost indispensable in keeping eggplants alive, to save them from flea-beetles and blight. It could also be used on beans, for leaf spot, soon, and "rust" later. With magnesium arsenate added the combination would stop the Mexican beetle, as well, if properly applied.

Gardeners who have not used Bordeaux should make it acquaintance, to be agreeably surprised to learn how valuable a garden aid this spray is. In Kentucky Extension Circular 309 are found complete directions for making Bodeaux and using it.

REPORTS PROGRESS IN STATE DAIRYING

How butterfat production per cow is increasing in Kentucky is brought out in the annual report which the State College of Agriculture recently made on the progress of dariy herd improvement associations. In 1938-39, in the three oldest associations in the state, 1,617 cows averaged 263 pounds of butterfate inthe year. In 1937-38, in the same associations, 1,642 cows averaged 366 pounds of fat.

In 1928-29 there were 45 cows that averaged 400 pounds or more; in 1937-38, 414 cows. Nine herds averaged 300 pounds in 1928-29; in 1937-38,, 53 herds went over the 300-pound mark.

The report shows that the average dairy cow on test in Kensucky in 1937-38 produced 7,084 pounds if milk and 310 pounds of butterfat, consumed $59.19 worth of feed and returned an income of 92.07 above feed cost.

Nobody's looking for bread these days, but everybody's looking for the money to meet thenext monthly payment on his automobile.

This important controbution to historical research was published by the University of North Carolina press this year. Dr. Lloyd's career has been varied. He has been interested in school work and young peovle, having coached athletics, directed debating, dramatics and other extra-curricular activities. His debating team during his five years at Morehead State Teachers College were outstanding in their performances.

For the past three years he has been on leave of absence from his position as head of the History and Political Science Department at Morehead, in orde rto serve as the Director of Public Assistance in Kentucky.During this period he has had the responsibility of administering of approximately twelve million dollars to Old Age Assistance receipts over the entire State. His work as Director of this Social Security program has been highly complimented by both State and Federal officials.

Dr. Lloyd stated that, while he would not announce his complete platform until later, he was in position to state definitely that he would advocate the following:

1. That above all things the State Department of Education should be the servant of the Public School System instead of the schools being the servants of the State Department of Education.Under his leadership the Education Department will become a professional department in the State Government.

2. He proposee, when erected, to sit down with the next Governor and discuss the school program and work out in cooperation with the Governor the very best type of educational program needed to advance the cause of education in Kentucky. He is particularly interested in providing more adequate salaries, greater security of tenure, and a practical retirement system for the school teachers of the State.

3. He favors an equalization fund legal under the State Constitution, but under no cnditions would he favor a system which would penalize the better schools. Dr. Lloyd said that this was not necessary to provide adequate aid for the poorer school systems.

4. He favors voluntary consolidation where it will improve the efficiency of the school system and opposes forced consolidation from the State Department of Education. He state that under his leadership the Department of Education would encourage the transportation of school children in their respective communities where road conditions and community spirt were favorable to it.

5. He state that he would encourage the Department of Education to cooperate more fully with District and State Educational Associations, both white and negro, in the interest of a State-wide Educational program. He also pledged cooperation with private and public colleges throughout the State.

6. He pledges himself o encourage Teachers Associations over he State in the splendid work which they are doing.

7. He stated that, under his leadership, the Department of Education would cooperate and help in every way possible the fine educational programs sponsored by the American Legion and the Legions' Womans Auxiliary.

EDUCATION EXPLAINS ITSELF

"Education is not merely books and schools; science is not merely machinery and test tubes. To show that the two together can constiuts "Wing for Man"—that he may "Know" by science and Grow by education, is the aim of the Science & Education, which opened the last week of May at the New York World's Fair.'

The Exhibit, sponsored jointly by the Adult Education Association of America and the Fair, expects to attract hundreds of thousands of teachers and lay visitors. Graphic murals, documentary films and an encyclopediac Information Bureau are there to explain the aims and progress of education.

A wall covered by photomurals depicts the growth of education in the United States. The dates 1789, 1854, and 1939 are chosen as epoch years. Montage backgrounds show the type of classes, schools and teaching methods in each of these eras. Symbals indicate the great increase in educational faeilities and state aid to education. Another series of thirty-two panels trace the process of education from infancy to the end of life. 'Education Begins when Life Begins" the introductory motto declares. Education Never Ends," a concluding motto reminds.

The building includes a "Little Theatre," reserved for use of educational scientific and medical groups. Here without charge are shown excellent documentary films on' such varied subjects as city planning, work of Nobel prize, Einstein explaining his cosmic ray theory. Reservation schedule for the Theatre gives an interesting indication of the varied groups active in educational work: League of Women Voters, Ottawa Teachers Association, New History Society Women's City Clubs are among the groups who will meet for lectures and film showings.

Facts supplied by the Information Bureau provide an education in themselves. 'Where can material be secured on vocational opportunities? they are asked. 'Leaflets on vocational opportunities are published by National Youth Administration, Washington," they inform. "Is there any available material on cause and cures of cancer?" "New York City Cancer Committee publishes literature and operates a specialized information service." "National Bureau for the Advancement of music, 70 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City, provides material on oranizing school orchestras." The questions are endless. "And very educating," commented the oracle who must supply the answers.

As is the Fair itself. 'A planned trip to the Fair can be of more value than two weeks in school," Columbia University, who arranged visits to the Fair by all of his classes. Education Centre has prepared an index and directory to all information and educational items found at the Exposition, which they beleive well proves Dr. Reynold's contention.

If you want to get an idea ofte unfiled wants of the people of this country, ask your wife to make a list of the the things she'd like for herself, the children, and the house.

With The Reds

As the National League season grows older, it is becoming increasingly more obvious that the Cincinnati Reds are a tough outfit to contend with. After a highly successful tour of the East, the Reds are now ready to discard their traveling bats and give attention to the task at hand— thirteen consecutive games on the old home lot.

The Philadelphia Phils were to play at Crosley Field in a ladies' day attraction Wednesday. On Thursday night the powerful floodlights will be turned on for the frist time this season, as the Reds and Phils tangle in a nocturnal coslest, with play starting at 8:45. A huge display of fireworks, stirring martial music, and other special attractions will precede the battle and do much to make the evening a memorial one.

Over the week-end the Boston Bees will be the guests of the Redlegs. Casey Stengel's mes will play here Saturday, and on Sunday the teams will meet in the first doubleheader ofthe local season.. The serlegs. Casey Stengel's men will play game Monday.

An other night game is slated for June 21, with the Brooklyn Dodgers as the opposition, concluding a two-game series that starts with ladies' day attraction on June 20. Then, after the usual off day following a night game, the New York Giants will show their wares in three straight tilts, starting on June 23.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY:—
Stagecoach—With Claire Trevor—John Ford-Andy Devine. Insulted and reviled, she boarded the stagecoach with eight hostile travelers who never dreamed of the strange hours ahead that would prove her the bravest of them all. Every emotion you can feel demands that you see this picture. Excitement thundres across the screen to answer your craving for adventure. Danger holds you in its tensest grip—and never lets you go.

SUNDAY, JUNE 18th:—
Confessions of a Nazi Spy—with Edward G. Robinson-Francis Lederer-Paul Lucas. This is a melodramatic relavation onthe screen of events spread in headlines not many months ago. That story, incredible in its revelations of amateur and bungling but widespread spy activity conducted in close connection with intensive, energetic and closely controlled propaganda through the Nazi American Bunds, follows faithfully, naming names and depicting places as te newspapers told the story, the confessions and grand jury testimony of four nazis now in Federal prison for espionage and of two others who returned to Germany under sinsister circumstances before the trial started in New York. The overriding note of this picture is a plea for the defence of our principles its theme is that Nazism and Nazi propaganda constitute a threat to these principles, and its aim is to create in audiences an awareness of this menace and to arouse them to a defence against this or similar attacks.

MONDAY, JUNE 19th:—
The Terror Of Tiny Town— with Billy Curtis—Jed Buell's Midgets, worlds smallest people . . Years biggest novelty. First all midget show ever filmed. They fight sing and love. Half-pints in ten gallon hats.. A hundred happy tom thumbs in a bigtime hit.

LEGUMES IMPROVE BLUEGRASS YIELD

Many pastures in Kentucky could be improved by growing a legume in combination with grass, says a statement from the Agricultural Experiment Statoin at Lexington. Tests indicate that legumes grown with bluegrass increase the yield and feeding value ofthe pasture.

For the past seven years an Experiment Station mixture of bluegrass and legumes has produced almost twice as much dry matter as bluegrass grown alone. Weeds constituted a large part of the yield when bluegrass was grown without a legume. The addition of a legume to the bluegrass has more than doubled the amount of protein produced per acre, and there fore has greatly increased the feeding value. Phosphorus, an element important in the production of strong, healty animals, as almost twice as abundant in the bluegrass-legume herbage as in the herbage from bluegrass alone.

U. S. income last year was $64 billion decline of 11 per cent from 37.

Queens for the Fair

When the World's Fair opens in New York in the spring of 1939, the dairy industry will be well represented. Five breeds of dairy cattle —Ayrshire, Brown-Swiss, Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey—will each have thirty outstanding cows in the "Dairy World of Tomorrow." These 150 cows will be milked in the Borden Building on the Central Mall, using a rotolactor equipped with magnetic milkers to do the job. Calves and bulls representative of each breed will also be on exhibit.

The animals are chosen by a special committee from each Breed Association, and will come from all parts of the United States and Canada as representatives of the best that the breed can produce. The Ayrshire cow shown above is one of the animals chosen.

In this exhibit not only the production of milk will be demonstrated, but the handling, bottling and sale of it will go forward under the eyes of the public. About one-third of the milk produced by the cows of this country is used as fluid milk. The rest is sold as butter, cheese, ice-cream, casein for paint, billiard balls, paper sizing, milk sugar for medicines, and in literally hundreds of others forms. The Borden exhibit will tell much of this story and give a better understanding of the place the dairy cow, as exemplified by these pure-breds, and the milk distributor play in the scheme of things.

ACP Field Work Begins June 26th

The checking of farm performance for 1939 ACP benefits payments will begin in Boone county on this coming Monday, June 26th, according to H. R. Forkner, county agents. Approximately 15 field supervisors will take the field Monday to cooperate with approximately 1050 farmers who have signed up in this year's soil conservation program.

Twenty one prospective field supervisors began a four day training class on the 1939 program at Burlington Monday. They will take an examination Thursday morning. Approximately fifteen men will be selected from the group of applicants to begin field work the first of next week.

The county ACP committee is anxious that the supervisors be most help possible to the farmers. The greatest item of unnecessary expense in the past has been the failure of the supervisor to secure and the farmer to give complete field reports.

The 1939 benefit payments for the individual farm are based on the field supervisor's report. Because of the importance that this report be accurate every farmer is urged to be with and assist the field worker when he visits the farm. Both the farmers and the field worker certify to the statement that every field on the farmer will carefully check this statements are true and correct. If the farmer ill carefully check this work for completeness and accuracy there will be few errors when applications for payments are made up this fall.

4-H Club Entertain In Burlington

Two hours of talking pictures, featuring the film dramatization of the famous 4-H novel, "Under the 4-H Flag" will be shown free to the people of Boone county, Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock, central standard time, according to an announcement made this week by H. B. Drake, assistant county agent.

The show will be given at Burlington school, Mr. Drake said. There will be no admission charge and no free-will collection of any kind. The program was produced primarily in the interest of the 4-H movement but families and friends of 4-H members and all others interested in agriculture are invited to attend.

In addition to the six-reel feature picture, a 4-H newsreal showing important events in the 4-H and agricultural calendar, an educational short called "Hidden Values" and a cartoon comedy will be shown.

Of further interest to those who attend the program is a contest whose award money totals $2,000 which is being held concurrently with the showing of the picture.

The twenty-four counties whose attendance at the show is greatest in proportion to the counties, rural population will share in $2,000 in awards. The county winning first award will receive the first prize of $1,000 which will be turned over to the county club agent for use in 4-H programs.

The feature picture is an al-talking film version of the celebrated 4-H novel "Under the 4-H Flag," by John F. Case, editor of the Missouri Ruralist and former president of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture.

The story is, in effect, the projection of old-fashioned ideals and moving drama. It has a lot of good principles irrogh a colorful and fast-sound constructive thinking about agriculture in general and 4-H in particular but it also has its share of dramatic thrills which involve the sinister doings of gang of counterfeiters who have a secret rendezvous in a cave near an old farm where the hero—a boy who is just getting interested in 4-H work—and his family live. It moves at a rapid pase through mysterious warnings, shots in the dark, a summer full of hotly contested 4-H projects and competitions, and reaches a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show in Chicago where the mystery is unraveled and the rascal brought to justice.

Ewe Lambs Sell At Premium Price

Two shipments of spring lambs from Western breeding ewes sold for a premium prices on Cincinnati market this past Thursday, June. 8th. William Ryle of Walton sold his second shipment of 13 lambs averaging 70 pounds for $10.75 per hundred which was a fifty cents premium above the market price on that date. Joe Gray of Burlington sold 17 lambs averaging 72 pounds for $10.50 per hundred which was a 25c per hundred premium. Both shipments were reported good enough to bring a larger premium had they been 10 pounds per head heavier, Mr. Graf reports this flock of 39 yearling western wess averaged 10 pounds of wool per head.

Boone county livestock producers inspected these shipments on the on the county marketing tour of the county marketing tour of the stockyards and packing plants on last Thursday. All reported the tour profitable in the study of preparing livestock to bring a better price. Farmers on the tour included Orville McNeeley, W. L. Presser T. W. Rice, Raymond Goodridge, Lee R. Hubert Rouse, Robert Greene, Atha Hubbard, Delbert Hubbard, Chas. Hedges, Preston Hedges, J. W. Doane, Kirtley McWethey.

Wool Sales At Its High Mark

Tuesday night H. R. Forkner, county agent stated that approxiately 30,000 pounds of wool was delivered at Walton on this date. 25,000 pounds were delivered in Burlington and 15,000 pounds at Petersburg, Thursday.

Boone county growers received $31.80, net and $26.80 for rejections, the price beinng higher than that of last year, when the growers received 24 cents for a clip totaling 57,225 pounds.

O. W. Cleek of Walton sold the largest number of pounds, when he delivered 2,500 pounds from 337 western ewes.

The wool was sold to Tucker and McLoney, Cynthiana buyer this year and all farmers apparently were well satisfied with the prices obtained.

Farmers Attend Sheep Meeting

Boone county farmers were represented in two important sheep improvement meetings the past week, the district meeting at Williamstown on June 16th and the State meeting at Lexington on the 13th, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent.

The demonstrations of breeding ewes and their lambs at the meetings indicated the most profitable breeding ewe for highest quality market boulett, cross bred Montana range lambs were the Hanshire, Ram-ewes crossed with purebred Southdown and Hapshire rams. The Southdown crossed lambs in most experiments produced around 50 cents per hundred pounds higher priced lambs but the Hampshire crossed lambs produced more weight in less time and showed they were particularly adapted to early lambs. The Hampshire crossed lambs went down in quality after June 15th. The white faced Montana range ewes were second most profitable and native Texas Merino ewes were least profitable in lamb production.

A complete list of all local farmers attending the meeting could not be securred. Among those attending the Williamstown meeting were: Chas. Hedges, J. C. Bedinger, John Adams, S. B. Sleet, John Conley, Joel Gray, William Ryle, R. P. Hughes and O. W. Cleek. Those attending the Lexington meeting included Lee R. McNeely, H. E. White, S. B. Scott and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Ryle.

Recreational Help For Rural Youth

In almost any rural community it will be found that young people with no money can find little to do in the way of recreation, There may be a municipal swimming pool, but there is usually an admission charge; and the old swimming hole is now fenced off or filled with abandoned autos.

Something has already been said here about the need for community organization of recreation for youth, and some suggetions have been made for useful community effort through the churches or the schools—best of all through the cooperation of all existing local agencies, groups, and interested individuals. WPA assistance in provididing public facilities or leadership can often be secured by the community.

Widespread experience shows that an active recreation program will greatly reduce juvenile delinquency and crime. Money spent on recreation for those most in need of it is a profitable investment for any town or county.

The Youth Community Centers has young people under the NYA program in a number of towns are worthy of wide imitation, with or without the help of Federal funds. An old church, residence, or business building, such as can usually be started at little cost, with donations from individuals or from the local book club and other organizations, and probably with the cooperation of the local public library. Volunteers can be found to do the work at both the town and the country end, and churches and schools will give their assistance. Such a volunteer rural library service also stands a good chance of getting assistance from the WPA or NYA, so that more books can be obtained and some of the young people paid for doing this work. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that long-term unpaid services should not be asked from the unemployed but should be voluntered by others.

Homemaking and the problems of marriage are a much needed form of education. Many rural schools already conduct classes in cooking, sewing, budgeting, and other homemaking arts; where such courses are lacking they can be introduced through the influence of local organizations. A women's club or church society can greatly strengthen this kind of school work by taking a continuous interest in it.

Many girls in rural areas have still much to learn about homemaking after they are married. A special feature of modern education consists in persuading people that their education should not stop with school. There are county home demonstration agents, and important part of whose task is to help educate young wives. Women's clubs and church societies can assist in this education by continuing their civic interest in young people after they are maried, and sponsoring groups for continued stoudy of homemaking and marriage problems.

MORAL JUDGEMENTS

Poor people in need of relief are a problem to relief officers and a burden to the taxpayers. But the fact that their problem should not lead us into hasty condemnation of their moral charcter. The poor people coughing along the highways in their rusty cars are not shiftless bums trying to make life hard for thrifty, self-respecting citizens who know enough to stay home. Most of them, are just the opposite. They are the individualistic Americans who have the courage and vitality to go get it. They are the ones who are not licked but still have hope. It is not their fault that hope is slim, but it is to their credit that a slim hope is enough to keep them on their way. In ournatural annoyance when some of them faint on our door steps, let us not forget that the iniative and courage that we are preaching, they are practicing. They are Americans in the old tradition, doing their best to fend for themselves. If sometimes they are overwhelmed by circumstances, it is not for lack of the pioneer spirit. Injudging them, let us not hastily turn against the traditional standards of American history.

All our life we've been hearing that the world is just on the verge of falling to pieces, and every morning we get up and look out the window, and there it is.

BACK TO THE COUNTRY

Investigators who have been studying the subject of where and how most people prefer to live have come to the rather unexpected conclusion that more young married people than elder ones prefer country life to city life, all the year around.

The general impression has been the other way; that the diversified interests and entertainment afforded by city life made it more attrasotive to the young than to the old.

It probaly is true that this charge of tastes is accounted for by the fact that modern improvements enable people to live in the country with all the comforts and conveniences which the cities afford and the added gratification of the ineradicable human urge to live amoung natural rather than artificuial surroundings.

The movement of population today is not merely from the cities to the suburban areas, buy beyond the suburbs, to the real country, where people can have a garden, keep cows or pigs if they want to, live naturally and simply, and at the same time get to town about as easily as they can from nearby suburban districts.

Modern highways and motorcars make a fifty-mile drive to and from a city office and factory almost as easy as traveling from the outlying sections of a great city to its center..

People who live in the country these days can have well-built homes, insulated and air-conditioned against Summer heat and Winter coal they have electric lights, modern plumbing, oil-burning furnaces and all of the other "fixings" which a few years ago nobody but city dwellers could enjoy.

The United States Census Bureau says that movement from city to country is definitely underway. There is plently of vacant land still unoccupied in every part of the United States to provide country homes for everybody who wants one.

By JAMES PRESTON

By metric measure Capitol Hill and the White House are only about a mile apart. But if the distance could be measured now on the basis of policies and aims, it would show them to be poles apart.

Differences are being smoothed over in spots and the wide breach is being kept out of the headlines as much as possible, but keen observers detect a bitter conflict.

Here are a few of the major issues on which the administration and the Congress have collided head-on:

1. Taxes: Congress wants to remove some of the burdensome tax load and thus stimulate recovery by permiting a more natural flow of capital, The White House until a compromise was worked out) was dead set against any change, arguing that taxes must be left alone to finance the government spending schemes.

2. Foreign Affairs and Neutrality: Congress wants to maintian a hands off policy in foreign troubles and to retain some responsibility and control over foreign policy. The administration want ta centralize this authority in the hands of the Presidents

3. Labor Act: The Congressmen want to satisfiy the public clamor for amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, but the New Deal helmsmen are determined to leave the present law on the books without change.

4.bSpending: Congress really wants to curtail spending, but the White House group thinks spending must be continued. The White House is unwilling to concede that past spending has failed to produce the desired results, arguing that recovery is in sight and can be reached with a continuance of the spending program.

As observers see the struggle from the side-lines, Congressional thought is being propelled by Mr. Average Citizen (who is paying the bill.)

There was more behind the White House dinner-conference with business leaders than was contained in the official explanation offered he press.

Many things were discussed, but the whole affair was carefully staged for a single purpose(which was not told to the newspapermen). Tha purpose was to head off amendment of tthe National Labor Relation Aca and to forestall an investigation of the Labor Board by Congress. It was a move to reconcile business men to an attempted through administrative changes rather than a revision of the law.

In other words those who planned the conference believe that if business can be appeased with promises, there will be no need for Congress to go ahead with its plan of appeasement by action.

ICE-CREAM SUPPERS

When ice cream was a luxury rather than a part of many normal meals, it was great sport to go miles across country to an ice-cream supper. Though this function is hardly dead as yet, it has so changed that I can write its obituary. It has been some fifteen years since I last attended one that had all the earmarks of the one and only genuine.

Most ice-cream suppers were ostensibly to raise money for some worthy cause, usually school or church. The women of the community contributed eggs, milk, sugar, and flavoring. Sometimes I have seen the cream made by dumping all of these raw, into a freezer; I have even eaten such. Stylish ones cooked the materials into a custard and chilled the custard in the well or cistern. Along with the milk, using coolers especially designed for the spring or cistern. Some boy or man was dispatched to the county seat to get ice and some other things that went along with ice cream: candy, chewing gum, cigars, soda pop, crackerjack. Meanwhile the women cooked tea cakes and other cookies to be served with the cream.

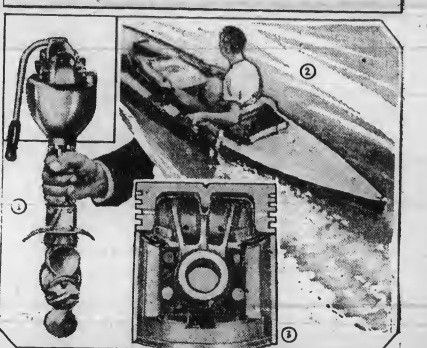
The great day arrived. Dusty buggies and wagons drove into sight. The stands had been built the ice cream was being manufactured in freezers. The other things were laid out, beyond the reach of bad boys, in the stands. Often a barker stood a few yards away and called the attention of the crowd to what could be bought. One such bay that I knew smaked the fine cigar that others could buy merely by stepping up. Much--envied boys or men ran the stands. I always wanted to be one of these and actually became one a few times. It increased one's social standing considerably among the smaller boys.

Soda pop used to come in heavy bottles with a queer stopper. It almost hurt the hand to press down the stopper slowly; a kid suddenly caused an explosion. One was sure to get some of the colored water and sugar and flavoring on his Sunday-go-to-meeting shirt.

Thetce cream aws the bif thing, of course. It was served in saucers, with teacakes added. Once when I was selling cream, a boy ate three saucers in rapid succession and walked off without paying, just as a joke on the stand. My dignity has not yet recovered from that affrant. Boys who had a few extra dimes treated their girls. Some boys were either the stingy or too poor to spend anything. We fellows who ran the stands felt ashamed of them and sometimes told them so.

Candy was just candy then, nothing fancy. Stick candy was the kind most often sold. We had whole buckets of it in pound packages and sold it with considerable profitering, through custom forbade our asking more than a nickel for a bottle of pop. Crackerjack, often pretty stale, was devoured in great gobs. In such package was a prize, often kept in definitely, some little metal toy or a small balloon, worth about five cents a hundred.

The numerous things we sold were jus exra. The real eating came with the dinner-on the ground. My mid-afternoon we could count on seeing several small children and sometimes older people who had eaten so much that they had become sick. Thus did we enjoy ourselves, creating lifelong stomach ailments for some of us.



CATTLE NUMBERS UP

Beef cattle numbers have increased in Coldwell county, Kentucky, due to improved pastures and to good supplies of alfalfa and lespedeza hay and corn, reports County Agent John F. Graham. Under average conditions, Graham believes good pasture is the largest con tributing factor to profits in cattle raising.

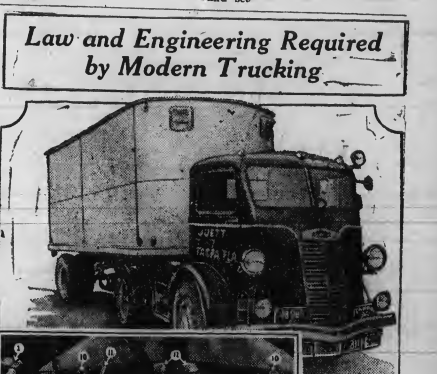
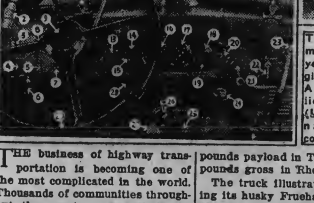
NEW LIGHT WEIGHT METALS REVOLUTIONIZE DESIGN





(1) Clarke Troller, lightest outboard motor in the world for its power; 1.3 horsepower, only 9½ lbs. (2) Kayak propelled by Troller. (3) Latest type of Bohnalite piston with positive expansion control.

DESIGNS, which only a very short time ago would have seemed impossible, are now being achieved with the new light weight alloys. The little Troller motor shown herewith weighs only 9½ pounds and yet it develops 1.3 horsepower. This light weight is achieved not only through design but through the fact that permanent mold castings of Bohnalite are employed. This strong but light aluminum alloy has proven itself extremely well suited for light weight powerplants, such as this, and has even made an enviable record for itself in the big, powerful airplane engines used for transport as well as war machines.

The cutaway piston shown here is an Autothermic type, which has the unique ability of holding its shape and clearance whether the engine is starting cold or is running at its highest operating temperatures. This also is an example of the use of Bohnalite, This type of piston made from this material is used on cars such as the American Bantam all the way up to some of the heavier duty Diesel design. The introduction of light aluminum and magnesium alloys, such as Bohnalite and Magalloy, is completely changing engineering processes and methods. It is making possible much lighter and more efficient powerplants for land, air and sea

Law and Engineering Required by Modern Trucking

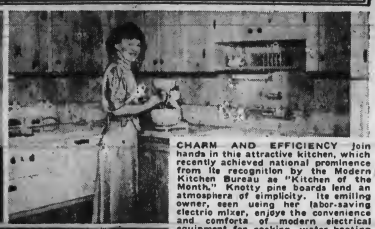
THE business of highway transportation is becoming one of the most complicated in the world. Thousands of communities throughout the country are entirely dependent on truck transportation for their existence so that the business of intercity truck hauling has become one of the greatest in the country, its scope may be realized from the fact that there are over three million truck drivers alone in the United States exclusive of those driving farm trucks. These men earn and spend over four billion dollars annually.

However, a tremendous array of laws and restrictions make the going anything but smooth for the truck operator, For example, the weight permitted by the different states varies all the way from 7,000 pounds payload in Texas to 120,000 pounds gross in Rhode Island.



The truck illustrated above puling its husky Fruehauf trailer cost $3,122 in taxes and license fees covering five monthly round trips between Cincinnati, Ohio and Tampa, Florida during the year 1937. The inside of the driver's cab is lined with certificates.

Even the truck driver himself must be quite an engineer. He not only has to know the state laws, highway rules and regulations but his safety instruments as well. Anyone who thinks that any "dumbbell" can drive a truck may change his ideas when he scans the instrument panel illustrated above. There are twenty-nine controls in sight and three others which cannot be seen.

DIVISION OF GAME AND FISH...

The Kentucky river has yielded up a rare specimen recently in the 'hellbender" or)Cryptobranchus Alleghainsis.) In saying that it is a rare specimen the Division of Game and Fish ishes to say that it has not been native of the river until the great flood of 1937 brought it up from the Ohio and Mississippi rivers Since that time it seems to have stayed and a few have been caught from the river, although most fishermen mistake it for tthe "common water dog" and either kill it or throw it back.

Minor Clark, biologist for the Division of Game and Fish, in identifying the creature, stated: 'The head is broad and flat and the snout rounded like that of the mud catfish. The tail is broad and much compressed, and with a fin along its upper edge; its length is equal to half the remainder of the animal. The skin is richly provided with mucous follilles, especilly about the head, while the sides are conspicous wit a corrugated cutaneous fold, which extends from the angle of the mouth to themiddle of the tail.

"The nostrils are small, close to the edge of the lips and the eyes ar small, with no evident lids. The limbs are short and stout, bordered externally by a fold of mebrane, which extends down to the outer toe. The back limbs are stoutest, and bordered behind by a second fold, which near the foot, passes into the external fold. The color is grayish to black and the "hell-bonder" differs from the common water dog in that It does not have gills but has a slit-down each side from front to backlegs, and it also has toe-nails which the "water-dog" does not possess. It is regarded as being poisonous but this idea is erroneous, nevertheless, its bite might be painful. It appears to be exclusively acquatic, and yet is capable of living for a long time out of the water."

The 'Hell-bender' cought in the Kentucky river was takenr nea Brooklyn Bridges and is now in the possession of George Chinn who operates the Cave House at Brooklyn bridge. The specimen is still alive and measures 18 inches in length and weighes 3 pounds.

"As much as we hate to admit it, there are still bands of chronic game violators who disregard the tenents of true sportsmenship by swooping down on a field or a stream and taking anything and everything they can lay their hands on. Undersized fish, quail, rabbits, and baited doves fall victim to their vicious practices. No amount of persuasion or education can change their attitude. True, there are not as many as there were 20 years ago, but they exist it sufficient numbers to cause a lot of trouble," Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish stated today.

"A favorite trick of this type of game hog is to shadow the local game warden, find out where he is going, and then go in the opposite direction to wrecy havoc in wildlife. They know the game warden's automobile and in some instances they even know the sound of his outboard motor. One lone warden against bands of lawless hunters and up on them while violating the game fishermen are helpless," Brnow pointed out.

"But now the Conservation Officers are sent from time to time into other territories to work and in this manner the violators have trouble in keeping up with the law and in many instances within the past few months those violators have caught because some strange warden came up on them while violating the game and fish laws," Brown explained.

Some violations of the laws carries penitentiary sentences, so it would be a lot the best to observe the laws and stay out of trouble than to destroy the wildlife wantonly and get into trouble with the law.

FERTILIZERS YIELD MORE, BETTER SIRUP

In sorghum production tests at the Robinson Experiment Sub-station at Quicksand, Breathitt county, Kentucky, land treated with a ton of limestone, 400 pounds of 16 percent superphosphate, 50 pounds of murlate of potash and 200 pounds of nitrate of soda to th acre, grew cane that produced 2,390 pounds of sirup per acre. Land alongside, but untreated, turned off 1,260 pounds of sirup to the acre. Sirup from the treated plots was darker in color and of better flavor than from untreated land.

LACK OF FARM LABOR CREDITED TO RELIEF

A shortage of farm labor in North Carolina has been blamed officially blamed officially on Federal relief policies.

After a study of the problem of getting adequate farm help the State Federal Crop Reporting Service reported that the shortage was due to the reluctance of workers to take farm jobs when they could receive relief wages.

CANIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR MAKES TALK

Terming agriculture, education and health as three question of vital importance to Kentucky, Rodes K. Myers, Bowling Green Attorney, launched his second raido address here tonight in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Lieut Governor.

"Touching as they do," said Mr. Myers, 'the fanancial backbone of the State, the future of her childhood, and the health of her citizens, all three are pledged my unqualified support, study, and attention, with the single hope and desire that I may know, when I retire from office that each has been helped a little by me."

Specifically, Mr. Myers outlined his farm program as opposition and resistance to any effort to increase taxes on farms; enactment of a law removing the power of a state board at Frankfort to arbitrarily fix the amount of farm assessments; matchinch of Federal Government funds calculated to improve and aid farm conditions; creation of a commission to develop a legislative program to alleviate rouble as a result of a growing farm tenancy.

On the subject of taxes, there is one matter that must be brought to the attention of the Legislature, Mr. Myers declared. For many years, he pointed out, the value of real estate was assessed at what the owner believed to be eighty per cent of its fair cash market value. The County Board of Equalizationthen convented and equalized the values. But, he continuted, the assessments were then forwarded to Frankfort and three men who were not familiar with land values in the respective counties in Kentucky then placed a blanket five, ten, and in many instances, twenty per cent raise on the value of every acre of land in Kentucky.

Such a power is unwarranted, believes Mr. Myers, who then declared that if nominated and elected Lieut. Governor he would urge the enactment of a law to remove the power of such a state board to refix farm valuations.

For several years the Federal Government has provided funds to assist State Departments of Agriculture to improve and aid farm conditions in general, said the speaker. This Federal money must be matched dollar for dollar, but this will not require very large appropriations and the benefits are well worth it, Mr. Myers believes. He will, therefore, "favor an appropriation by the next General Assembly which will match the various Federal funds in order that Kentucky may improve the position of the farmer with the result of mare lucraive crops, more fertile soil, and healthier live stock."

Stating that due to economic conditions there is a growing tendency toward farm tenancy" and that the Farm Bureau of Kentucky has requested all candidates for public office to make their views on the subject known, Mr. Myers said that he has no complete solution to the problem, but believes that a commission could be created by the State which, with the assistance of other research agencies already in existence, could develop a legislative program to alleviate a great deal of the trouble.

Such a commission, he thinks, should be composed of three farm land owners, three former tenants, who, by "industry and economy have become land owners," and three who are now tenants. The commission would study the farm tenant problem and make recommendations to the 1942 General Assembly, which he said is as early as it could report.

Turning to education, Mr. Myers pointed to his record in the House of Representatives in helping to frame an enact Kentucky's Educational Code, in leading to frame andenact Kentucky's Educational Code, in leading the fight for a per capita appropriation of $12, and his support of the Teachers, Retirement Law.

Declaring that since its enactment in 1934 he has resisted every effort to destroy by amendment or otherwise the Educational Code, Mr Myres then attacked the records of his two opponents who have had legislative experience, saying that the Journal of the General Assembly will bear out the fact that neither possesses the record of such protection.

Continuing, he then charged that while he made the fight for the $12. per captial appropriation, "one of my opponents in this race resisted this increase and sought by every means at his command to prevent the school per capita from exceeding $9."

...THE MAP...
The Brown Hotel is deeply indebted to Mr. Karl Smith of Louisville for his kind permission to reproduce, here, his famous historical map of Kentucky. . . . If you have not seen at least most of your native State—isn't this SUMMER a good time to start?

FIRST . . . . SEE KENTUCKY!
We Kentuckians live in the most glamorous and beautiful State in the Union. Our historic spots—our scenic beauties—are worth going thousands of miles to see—yet here they are, practically in our back yard! . . . This year, see Kentucky first! Whether or not your sight-seeing brings you to Louisville, by all means visit at least a few of the wonders of your native State. And if you do come to Louisville, remember that the Brown Hotel—the largest and finest hotel in the State—is waiting and eager to give you a real, old-fashioned Southern Welcome!

A Comparison of Taxes

"Motor Transport" and the Railroads

AN ERRONEOUS impression has been given by propaganda recently disseminated by the commercial trucking interests, to the effect that annual taxes paid in the United States by "Motor Transport" are $417,500,000 as compared with taxes of $528,000,000 paid by the railroads.

The trucks using the highways for transportation purposes, that is, the inter-city commercial trucks, are the only ones which compete, and are therefore the only ones which can fairly be compared with the railroads. They are the largest, heaviest and most destructive of all trucks that use the roads.

But they represent only about one-twentieth of all trucks in the United States.

Therefore, in comparing these competing forms of transportation and their contributions to the Government, it is obviously erroneous for the truck interests to take credit in their propaganda for taxes paid by all trucks.

Most of the payments which these inter-city trucks do make are neither property taxes nor compensation for the use of public property, but are made up of gasoline and license taxes such as all automobilists pay.

By far the largest part of truck taxes is paid by the operators of farm trucks, farm tractors, city delivery trucks, and other trucks which do not compete with the railroads.

These private truck operators are burdened by increased taxes and are interfered with in the use of the highways by reason of the operation of these large trucks for hire.

The annual taxes paid by the commercial truckers in Kentucky, for example, as rental for the use of the roads are only sufficient to build about six miles of first-class highway.

The railroads not only have constructed and maintain their own roadways, but also pay true taxes thereon for the support of the state government and all its sub-divisions, including its public schools.

URGES BETTER USES OF PASTURE AND HAY

Pastures is Kentucky's lowest cost and most valuable feed, says the farm conomics department of the State College of Agriculture. If pasture and hay crops are well managed, sheep and cattle make profitable gains with small amounts of grain. A plea is made not to over-crop, to mow small grain nurse crops to mulch the land, and to rotate pastures. Fall-seeded small grain prevents leeching and erosion and provides pasture.

Next to pasture, hay is Kentucky's most important forage. It is cheaper to provide shelter for hay than it is to bale it or leave it out in stacks or ricks. Saving of shock fodder and shredded fodder is emphasized. The man labor required for cutting, shocking and husking amounts to about 10 hours more per acre than for husking from the standing stalks. The value of the fodder for feed and bedding the greater ease of seeding grass and small grain, and the cleaner field for the hay crop provide good returns for the 10 hours of extra labor, it is declared.

Pastures Cut Beef Cost

A study wheih the Kentucky Experiment Station made of raising beef calves showed that the most successful farmers kept feed cost low by more fully utilizing pastures and low-grade roughage. In determining the cost of raising calves to weaning age, it was found that the cost of feeding the cow was 76 percent of the total cost of the calf, in the Bluegrass region, and 71 per cent of the gross cost in Union county.

A number of Letcher county farmers have bought purebred gilts and also high-grade dairy stock.

Dewitt Rowland, Daviess county, has remodeled his house and installed a wter system and sewage disposal plant.

Kentucky Politics

BY TYLER MUNFORD

Unless something happens to change the picture, this year's contest for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination will fall far short of arousing public interest that reached an all-time high inthe Chandler-Rhea race four years ago. In that race campaign strategists had no crowd problems. The more announcement that one ofthe two candidates would speak at a given place was sufficient cause for a county-wide turn out. Housewives left their kitchens, business men closed their stores, and hell in general broke loose on both sides. To say the least, 1935 was a warm summer.

There was a lessening of public interest in the senatorial campaign of last year as compared with the Chandler-Rhea affair, although both candidates spoke to large audiences. This year interest has not been aroused. Neither of the two major candidates posses the color of either Chandler or Barkley, and the burning issue of a sales tax and double primaries are not prevalent. Brown is a hard campaigner of the leather-lung type, but circumstances forces him to use the same tactics this summer ha thet he used in behalf of Chandler in 1935, against Logan in 1936 and against Chandler again in 1938. It's the forth time he has told the same story. Keen Johnson is the conservative speaker. He depends on logic and sound argument to get his message across. Such policy does not cause avid supporters to throw their hats into the air.

Lack of interest inthe campaign was demonstrated when Brown held his state opening at Morganfield. Not more than 2,500 ere present. At Campton he spoke to less than 200, and his other audiences have been small, according to newspaper reports. Whether Keen Johnson will attract larger crowds will be determined by his state opening at Shlbyville, June 24, and other public appearances following that date.

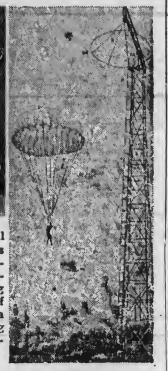
JOHNSON SUPPORT IN LOUISVILLE NOW OFFICIAL

Earrly in the campaign thih column observed that Keen Johnson was strong in Louisvile and would have the support ofthe Democratic Orgonization here. Last week the Jefferson County and Louisville Democratic organization officially went on record as endorsing the Johnson candidacy. This is the same organization that gave Senator Alvin Barkley a 31,000 majority in Jefferson County last year. The official endorsement means that every organization precinct orker is now "setting in" for the Richmond newspaperman. Political observers say the Louisville endorsement of Johnson will prove to be the major break in the campaign.

BROWN USES CAREFUL PHRAS IN REFERENCE TO ROOSEVELT

Careful phrases constitute the language Candidate Brown employs in trying to get over the idea that he has the support of President Roosevelt. " I violate no confidence when I tell you that before I announced for this office, I went to Washington and sat at the right hand of the President to ask his opinion of my candidacy, and I would not now be a candidate if it did not meet with his approval," Bron says.

It's mell known to one and all that the President is no halfway or piece-meal person. If he is for something, he doesnt, hesitate to say so. He as for Senator Barkley last year, and he said so in no uncertain words. If he was for Brown this year he ould say. The President appears to be holly unaware of and uninterested in the Kentucky party fight. This is best demonstrated by his silence.



Conidate Brown is always generous with himself in claiming White House support. He usually does it by inuendo as he did at the Morganfiled openin.

If andidate Brown is so sure of his position with President Roosevelt, he should made the direct statement, "The Presiden tis for me and is supporting my candidacy." This Candidate Brown will not do because he has no ground to stand on. A wager that President Roosevelt is not interested in behalf of either candidate in the Kentucky primary is as safe as Johnstown on a fast track.

ANNUAL 4-H Club MEETING ATTRACTS RECORD ATTENDANCE

The 19th annual Junior Week at the University of Kentucky attracted 733 4-H club boys and girls form 110 counties, and was rated as one of the most successful events of its kind evel held in the state.

The best farm practice team was furnished by Warren county, and the best home practice team was form Scott county. Other counties trailing blue-ribbon teams were Brettbitt, Campbell, Garrard, Hickman, Hopkins and Mason. Grayson county had the champion terracing team, with McCracken second, Calloway third and Graves fourth.

In the style revue of 67 girls from as many counties, Mary Louise Klein of Oldham county proved he best-dressed 4-H girl. Her club at Crestwood furnished the winner in 1938. Best judge of clothing was Lyda Mae Sutherland, Graves county; of foods, Charleen Burris, Bourbon county, and of room furnishings, Dorothy Parker, Franklin county.

New officers of the Kenucky Association of 4-H Clubs, elected at Junior Week, are Gerald Schaffer, Union County, persident; Dirothy Angle, Warren county, vice president and Ollie Frances Wilson, Madison county, secretary.

Brownie Bolton, Grayson county, and Frances Morgerson, Fayette county, received medals for outstanding 4-H club work.

CLIPPING CONTROLS WORMS IN CORN-EAR

Several years of tests at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station show that corn-ear worms can be largely controlled by clipping off the ends of the ears after the pollen has ceased falling and the silk shows signs of browning. In trials last year, clipping resulted in 85 percent of the ears being free from worms, whilein unclipped corn one 24 1-2 percent of the ears had no worms. These experiments have been of special value to truck gardeners.

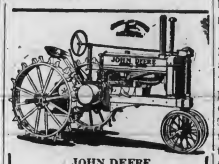
BOSS TOM TAKES NO CHANCES; SWOPE ENTTERS RACE

Boss Tom Rhea, head man at the Brown state headfuarters, today finds himself torn between two loves —Brown and Judge King Swope. This situation developed with the entry of theable Lexington Jurist in the Republican primary. Whether the Russellville polittician had anything to do with Judge Swope entering the race, this column is not advised, but his great affection for Judge Swope was demonstrated in the 1935 campaign when he repudiated his on party to throw his support to the Lexington jurist who was the G. O. P. nominee.

Rhea is a leading disciple of bipartisan politics. Perhaps he is weaking on Brown's chances inthe Democratic primary, and figures a second chance for power that would go with another bolt.



County Agent O. M. Shelby reports that in Crittenden county the grading of strawberries was more perfectly than in any previous year.

Fifteen Meade county sheep producers delivered approximately 3,500 pounds of woll to be sold through the Kentucky wool growers' cooperative.

NO MORE HOOKEY

Should the school fit the child, or the child fit the school?

"We once heard a dear old gentleman refully explaining his corns. It seems that when he was a small child his father felttin honor bound to purchase the boy's shoes from a brother lodge-member, who seasonsilly yielded to temptation and business acumen, hooked down a dust covered box from the top shelf, and presented buttoned shoes to Willie. And "Willie had to fit the shoes—they never did fit Willie."

Many a Willie trudges daily to a school which afflicts him with equal pain. The problem is sufficiently acute in the eyes of the New York City Board of Education to call for an experimental school, set up for five years to explore the best methods of educating children on the frienges of the I. Q.s of 75-90, who learners with I. Q.'s of 75-90, who comprises between 20 per cent and 25 percent of the general school population, and the brilliant pupils with I. Q.'s ranging from 130 to the top of the scale, who represent about 1 per cent of a school enrollment.

Accordingly Public School 500, known as the Spreyer School, was established a few blocks from Teachers College, Columbia University, to be operated jointly by that institution and the New York City Board of Education. There are in the school seven classes of slow learners and two exceptionally bright youngsters. Their education is handled separately.

The slow children came mostly from neighborhood schools which were asked to send for mentaltesting retard pupils who showed maladjustment through truancy and behavior problems. Those who fell within the 75—90 I. Q. range were enrolled.

Doesn't hurt a child to find himself in a school full of slow learners? Not as much as it hurts to sit among people who understand what he doesn't understand, who lead where he can't follow, who " pass while he "fails" again and again. It is impossible to set-up any kind of school organization which prevent children from learning what their relative level of intelligence is. Any child is smart enough to know whether he is "dumb" or not. The teacher at the Speyer School makes no pretense of deceiving him on that point; on the other hand, she leans over backward to avoid rubbing it in.

She explains to him that he needs special help in some subjects, because all people are different and need different kinds of help. She shows him that here he is recognized as an individual, liked and respected because of what he is, and not condemned because of what other people are. His responsibility is to make the most of what he can do, and someone who understands will guide him in that direction.

Needless to say,this guidance is no job for the type of personality known as the "ornery critter"; it takes love and patience hard work and imagination; it takes time in great chunks. Since the emotional ultimate depends upon the teacher she will if possible stay with the same group for the five years of the school's existence. How about the report card bugaboo? Several times a year he takes a standard test in each subject, because he wants to check his progress or lack of it. And whose is the record? His. Communication between parents and the teacher is close and personal. If the teacher tried to report on any kind of general city standard these children would always fail. Confidence in the teacher through personal acquaintance and occasional informal reports answer the parents' questions.

And what of 'hookey?" The first few months a full-time truant officer was employed. When the children realized how much fun this kind of school was going to be and what they missed when they stayed away, the truant officer was out of a job.

How do teachers teach these children? They give them things to do, things to see, things to make, places to go. They provide instructive and entertaining movies several times a week since slow children absorb much information through movies, slides, and other pictures. (Interests formed through these will send them scuttling to books for further information.) They take them on frequent trips for observation of some point under discussion. They teach arithmetic through buying, through scoring games; sewing thru a need for aprons or curtains; science through following such interests as photography back to the "how". Remedial and supplementary work in reading is taught individually. (In some cases gains of as much as thirty months of reading ability have been accomplished in ten months.) Writing is a necessary effort toward procuring guest speakers, or special information; to. Very few textbooks are used, and ward filling the school newspaper. these for reference much as a library would be used.

Imagine the advantue of learning geography and history, studying immigration, foreign customs and cultures, gaining a friendly feeling for people all over the world who were brought within reach by pink and blue and yellow bonds of confetti such as friends throw across a widening strip of water for 'bon voyage" to travellers when a steamer leaves port.

Yes, Willie has found a school which fits him like his epidermis. He is getting things done here, and as someone has said. 'Nothing succeeds like success." Too bad that it is only an elementary school, that there is no high school orthe same level and that "where-do-we-go-from-here" is so close to the erstwhile happy Willie This is the immediate worry facing school people.

Educators are at work all over the United States on the same problem. Perhaps when they combine their answers, all the slow-learning children will have the same chance to shake off that sense of futility and frustration developed by the wrong elementary school environments. Perhaps there will be high schools to carry on the good work, and to lead these little Americans toward good citizenship. When the public sees the problems and adopts our Willie's closs motto—TO BELIEVE YOU CAN DO A THING IN THE WAY TO MAKE IT POSSIBLE

FRENCH ENDIVE

By John S. Gardner,

Kentucky College of Agriculture

Gardeners who are in search of a "new" vegetable might well consider French Endive, which by the way is neither French nor the endive gardeners and seedmen know. Much of it is imported from Belgium and the Netherlands, and its seed-catalogue name is Witloof Chicory, close kin to the chocory our forbears used for coffee.

It has been given its name by resaurant men, and is he "head" the leaves make when the roots are forced to make second growth. Served with dressing, it makes a trat salad, much prized by gormets, but quite within the scope of any gardener to grow. Although professionals use quite elaborate forcing structures, surprisingly simple expedients can be made successfully to serve.

June is the month in which seed is sown, in drills far enough apart for a wheel hoe conveniently to work between them. One ounce of seed sparingly enough for each plant to have enough room. Thinning may need to bedone; the stand should be two inches.

A root crop, ot should go without saying that the seed bed should be well-prepared and deep. Fertility should be balanced, especially there should not be too much nitrogen as immanu re, but the other plantfoods should not be lacking. In general, complete fertilizer, 5-8-6, 4-8-8 or 5-10-5, worked into the row at the rate of one pound of fertilizer to 30 feet will be right.

The crop is remarkably free from insect damage, though occassionally the lesser "general feeder" insects attack the following but they are easily controlled with arsenicals. The only other care needed is to keep down the weeds.

In the fall, when frost is expected the roots are lifted, topped to one inch, and put under forcing conditions. A good cellar will serve, for satisfactory temperature in between 50 and 60 degrees. If the floor is earth, all that is needed is an enclosure for the roots, stood on end and puacked lightly with soil to make complete contact with them all the way down. The bed is covered with saw dust six inches, spent tanbark or even light sand, loose material through which the groth may push twisting and distortion. The whole is then watered thoroughly and kept so, but always from the bottom. Soon rootlets put out and top growth starts. When the tips of he leaves emerge the head is ready foo harvest.

Lacking a cellar, an ouside forcing bed may be made by setting plank, on their edges and about 18 inches apart, banking them outside with earth. A peaked roof is made above, of plank and tin, and the roots are set as just now explained, and covered in the same way. Over the whole fresh manure is placed and atop it, about 6 inches of earth. Depending on outside teperature, the endive may be ready to harvest in about 8 to 16 weeks. The pit may be opened and part of the endive removed, and closed again, to add to the winter menu tasteful variety.

The amount to grow depends on the number of heads, or one-person servings, required. Roughly 80 per cent of the roots make satisfactory heads and a 100-foot row makes about 400 good roots.

LICE, MITES CUT EGG PRODUCTION

This is the season when lice and mites redwed egg production, unless control meaures are applied.

The first thing to do, says C. E. Harris of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, is thoroughly clean the laying house, removing from the floor and all nesting material from the nests. The nests should be scalded and new nesting material put into them after they have dried. The dropping board or pit is then cleaned and sprayed with used engine crankcase oil and kerosene mixed half and half. By mixing kerosense with the oil it will go through a sprayer and the mixture penetrates cracks and crevices where mites harbor. Mites are blood-sucking insects which get on the birds at night and hide in dark cracks and cervices in the house during the day. This makes it necessary that a complete job of cleaning and treating the house be done; otherwise the few mites that are left will soon erinfest the premises.

Lice, unlike mites, are biting insects and spend their entire time on the birds. They lay eggs or nits which hatch on the same features. During warm wea er these nits hatch in 7 to 10 days Unless controlled at this season the lice become so numerous as to cause a lowering egg production and a general unthrifty condition of the flock. Death often occurs as a result of heavy infestation of lice.

Several methods of control may be used, any one of which is satisfactory. The dust bath which is made of common road dust or sifted coal ashes will in most cases keep the flock free of lice. If, however, there is a heavy infestation it will be nesseary to treat the flock by dusting or dipping with sodium fluoride, applying an ointment to the birds or using nicotine sulfate on the roost poles. Dusting may be done by applying as dry powder sodium fluride, which can be secured at drug stores, to the regions at the base of the neck, under each wing, under the vent and among the flu feathers.

In Pike county, farmers estimate that every purebred bull brought in has been worth $500 per year to the community.

WCKY To Increase To 50,000 Watts

A cordial invitation to residents of this vicinity to see one of the nation's most powerful radio stations in operation was extended today by L. B. Wilson, president and general manager of WCKY, Covington, Ky.

Radio listeners in this area will hear WCKY with as much clarity of signal as any station on the dial following inauguration of fifty thousand watts power about June 30. The new transmitter, incorporating the latest engineering developments, will make WCKY as powerful as any station in the entire United States and will make the many outstanding NBC programs carried by the station available to 58% of the country's night-time listeners.

Because of its favorable location on the dial, 1490 kilocycles (149 on most radio dials) WCKY is comparatively free of man-made interference. Therefore, radio listeners in this area should be able to receive programs broadcast by the station satisfactorily at all times.

Mr. Wilson said the new transmitter will be open for inspection tours shortly after dedication ceremonies to be held about June 30.

Who pays the freight?

ORANGES cost less in California or Florida—and everybody knows why.

Shorten the miles between producer and consumer, and you lower the price; for the traveling expenses of merchandise have got to go on the price ticket—there is no other way.

So Sears, Roebuck and Co. have made a scientific study of getting goods to you over the shortest possible haul—therefore at the lowest possible cost.

So far as possible, we supply each locality with merchandise made in its own nearby factories. When this isn't feasible, we ship from Sears regional supply depots, into which goods flow in car-load—even train-load—lots at lower freight cost than if we shipped in dribs—meaning a tremendous saving to Sears customers.

Then, too, much is accomplished by Sears transportation experts, through constant and intensive study of the nation's shipping facilities. To them, the map of the country is as simple as a checker board. They are on whistling terms, so to speak, with every freight train in the country. They play box-cars, trucks and boats as skillfully as Paderewski plays the keys of a piano.

The savings thus effected on freight alone, means money to the people of this country—an amazing amount of money every year; for, when Sears save, you do, too.

Who pays the freight?

You!

But you don't pay so much when you shop at Sears and save.

FIFTY INJURED AT RALLY

Five persons were in the hospital Monday being treated for injuries suffered when the speakers' stand collapsed a minute after Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson concluded a political campaign address at Shelbyville.

Scores of others including Johnson who were on or beneath the stand also were hurt. Approximately 40 were treated at a Shelbyville hospital for lacerations, abrasions and shock and some of them were confined to their homes. Stil others escaped with only bruises and scratches.

The five more seriously injured and hospitalized were State Finance Commissioner, J. Dan Talbott, former State Senator, Joe E. Robinson, Lancaster; Acting Police Judge H. L. Hargadon Louisville; Mrs. Russell Lillis, Bridgeport, and Herman Proctor, Simpsonville.

Talbott was severly bruised and shocked. After being given first aid in Shelbyville he was removed to a Louisville Hospital, suffered an arm fracture and other lesser injuries. Robinson suffered a hip fracture and Proctor remained in the Shelbyville hospital, while Robinson was taken to a Danville Hospital.

Among those who suffered minor hurts were Congressman Virgil Chapman of Paris, former Governor J. C. W. Beckham of Louisville, State Senator Ralph Gilbert of Shelbyville and Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell of Frankfort.

The accident was witnessed by thousands of horrified spectators.

Police Chief Roy Jones of Shelbyville blamed te collapse on "overloading." Governor and Mrs. A. B. Chandler, who had been on the stand left it before Johnson began speaking and sought seats among the crowd.

Witnesses said the stand—a part of the circular grandstand at the Shelby County Fairgrounds—gave way without warning, "funneling" men and women and broken timbers on the ground, 12 feet below. Several persons under the platform were tramped. It was estimated about 200 people were on or under that section when the mishap occurred.

Livestock Project Has Four Awards

For the tenth season 4-H club boys enrolled in a meat animal project may capitalize on their records thru the nationwide contest which offers county state and national awards. In nine years 34 boys and one girl have won all-expense educational trips to the annual Chicago convention of 4-H delegates and leaders held in conjunction with the International Live Stock Exposition and $5,400 in cash college scholarships. Several hundred clubsters also have become proud owners of handsome gold engraved watches and several thousand of specially embossed gold fobs, all gifts of Thomas E. Wilson of Chicago.

The same awards are offered for 1939, fobs in the county, watches in the state, and for national winners four trips to Chicago and three cash scholarships of $200 each. Compliance is simple and assistance and full particulars may be had of county agents. Participants will out of the standard form from their records as in all contests and write an experience story. No fee or obligation is required.

Records of county winners in each state will be judged in the State Club Leader's office to select a state winner before November 1. State records are judged by a committee of state and national club leaders in Chigo.

Hamilton Holds Homecoming

Back on the hill two miles from Sparta on road 35 stands an old colonial brick mansion erected shortly after the war between the states and now owned and occupied by Mrs. Ola Craig.

Here June 23, as held a homecoming for the sons and daughters of one of Gallatin County's pioneer families, the Hamiltons, whose ancesters arrived and settled on the willow fringed banks of Eagle Creek in 1800.

The day was an ideal June day as only Kentucky can offer from east and west came members of this fine old southern family to meet and greet relatives and friends of childhood. Life may pass us in the mantling blushing springtime and summer, the golden harvest of its autumn, the rude blast of its winter, and many long years flee away from the sound of human footsteps where even the lingering echoes are drowned inthe impenetrable darkness of oblivion. Yet never will the memory of childhood home lose it sweetness, the mind loves to dwell upon it, and recall al the tender love and associations enveyed by it

At the noon hour the spacious dining room was opened and a table laden with everything pertaining to an old fashion Kentucky dinner awaited the guest.

Those present were: Lee Hamilton and wife, Alfred Hamilton, wife and son, Norman of Gallatin county; John O. Hamilton and wife of Rising Sun, Indiana; Mrs. Hattie Hamilton and daughter, Mrs. Bessie Ross of Covington; Mrs. Jessie Hamilton Peters of Lawton, Okla; Mrs. Alice Hamilton Tompkins of Lexington; Mrs. Sylvia Hamilton, Nelms and daughters, Sylvia and Mary Elizabeth of Roanoke, Va.; Mrs. Stanley Stegmiller and daughter, Jean and Miss Virginia Skidmore of Rising Sun Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. Alva Rea; Joe Dale Arrasmith, wife and mother, Maggie Bledsoe of Warsaw; Miss Kate McDaniel of Midway, Ky.; Mrs. C. M. Gullion; Mrs. F. P. Jacobs and Mrs. W. J. Clarke of Sparta Mrs. Daisy Hendren and daughter of Sugar; Mrs. Bailey Furnish; Miss Helen Gray, Mary Angela Jacobs of Sparta; Chas. Arrasmith, wife and daughters, Col. and Mrs. Ryle of Gallatin county.

Through the generosity of Mrs. Craig this gathering was made possible, who is a typical Kentuckian, noted for her hospitality.

We grow up in the world, leave our native heath. Ambition may invite us to enlist beneath its glory banner, wealth may point, but to us palaces

LIQUOR LOOT FOUND AFTER BIG HI-JACKING

Staged Between Walton and Florence

More than half of a two-truck whiskey cargo, hijacked Saturday afternoon near Walton, has been recoveredwith two abondoned vehicles, Capt. Leland H. Barnes, acting Kentucky State Highway Police disclosed Monday.

Report of the robbery was made by the drivers of the trucks, Curtis Poulter and Charles Aleyander, both of Frankfort, who told Lexington police Sunday afternoon they were held captives by the highwaymen nearly 24 hours before being released on he Paris pike near Lexington.

Capt. Barnes said one of the trucks, loaded with 207 cases of whiskey, was found a short distance from Cynthiana. The other truck, from which 171 cases of liquor had been removed was found near Paris, he said. The recovery was made by the sheriff of Harrison county, Capt. Barnes stated.

Poulter and Alexander told Lexington and state police five men in a black seden stopped the trucks between Walton and Florence.

Two armed men alighted from the car. One entered each truck forced the drivers to turn off U. S. Highway 2 near Florence, toward Cynthiana.

The trucks had been en route to Cincinnati, the victims told police.

Near Cynthiana one of the trucks broke down, they said. The truck drivers were ordered into the sedan and ridden for several hours before being released. Poulter and Alexander reported.

The cargo valued at $6,804, was being shipped from the Stagg Distillery Frankfort, by the Kentucky Midland Truck Line, to Ziffrin Truck Lines 3830 Colerain avenue Cincinnati. Poulter and Alexander are employes of the Midland lines.

Postmasters Hold State Meet

Miss Velma Wilson accompanied by Mrs. Emma Riley to Louisville the past week to attend the State Convention of the Branch of the National League of Postmasters that convened at the Brown Hotel. A. D. YELTON FOR CIRCUIT COURT CLERK

A. D. Yelton Burlington, formally announced his candidacy for the office of Circuit Court Clerk in this issue of the Advertiser.

Mr. Yelton is well-known in all sections of the county. He is a son of Dr. M. A. Yelton, and is graduate of the Burlington high school, graduating in the class of '26.

For the past six years Mr. Yelton has served the citizens of Boone County as Circuit Court Clerk, a task which has been efficiently handled by him, and if reelected will be in a position to serve the county even better than in the past.

He has served as Master Commissioner of Boone County during his term of office, and has carried on the duties of this position in a very efficient manner.

We believe that if Mr. Yelton is nominated and elected to the office he seeks, he will fulfil the duties of this office to the best of his ability.

CROOKED JUDGES

The conviction of judges of the most powerful courts in New York City has fur nished a shock to the public inasmuch as every effort has been made to put these judges in positions independent of, and out of the way of temptation.

But this seems to have been too much to expect, as is shown by some of the revelations. Under such circumtances, an honest conscientious purge such as has been started by tthe Department of Justice in Washington may produce a better condition. Surely, all honest people in the United States are a unit in their feeling the crooked judges should be given the boot, right where it will hurt most.

CONGRESS FIXES NO DATE

No one knows when Congress will adjourn, and President Roosevelt who asked the legislative leaders for imformation on that subject has announced that he ash put off his trip west, because there are important matters that he wants to clear up before he leaves the National Captiol.

Capitol Hill is in somewhat of a quarrelsome mood as attempts are continued to bring about harmony with reference to important legislation. Most observes believe that talk of adjournment, early in July, is apt to be extended a month or so beyond that period.

MORE WATCHFUL WAITING

South America and Central America are nearly three times as large in square miles as our own country, but the United States long ago volunteered to protect them, at all hazards. These neighboring Republics are all pledged to Pan-American solidarity, and our own Congress is so optimistic about the future that it has voted hundreds of millions of dollars to protect them from any, and all dangers from foreign powers.

We have 48 United States, all pretty good, but some better than others. Besides there are outling possessions comprising about a quarter as much more in area, and they are all pretty good, too, and well-behaved. On the whole ours is a good family with solidarity that may be depended on. The U. S. has rather small reason to fear any foreign neighbors. But there are disturbing conditions in nations of the Western Hemisphere that are furnishing headaches for Uncle Sam.

The Republic of Bolivia is especially troublesome. That Goverment originated the schemes under which American oil properties were confiscated. This week we have the amazing news that Germany is arming Bolivia. In exchange Germany is furnished a site and privileges to construct a new air base at Trinidad, on the head waters of the Amazon. Germans are at this moment building a huge plant, known apparently with the object of accommodating trans-Atlantic planes. As far as is known no protests have been lodged aganist this intrusion into good-neighbor territory guarded by the Goverment of the United States since the time of President Monroe.

John White, an able correspondent for the New York Times, in a recent article from South America said that "Germany has rapidly pushed her political influence in Bolivia under the Busch regime to the point where it appears probable that Bolivia will soon adhere to the Germany-Italian-Japanese Axis.

Apparently the Nazis are making steady inroads upon cherished Pan-American solidarity, while Uncle Sam sits by engaged in watchful-waiting. How different the situation would have been in Mexico and Bolivia today had the Washington Administration made formal, effective, public protest against their high-honded action as soon as these countries started down the primrose path.

Would "Plow Under Lawyers"

The Florida Legislature introduced a bill recently to "plow under" every third lawyer twice a year. The sponsors claimed that it was designed to reduced the surplus and the bill was referred to the committee on Livestock.

Aside from joking, law is not the only profession in which we find a surplus. It may be unfortunate that the men are neither mice or pigs, so that each third one could be plowed under.

It would be impossible to eliminate from a profession propertly and fairly the "surplus" members. A realy good lawyer has no trouble in keeping busy, as a realy good member of any other profession; pro vided, of course, that he has lived in a community long enough for his value to be learned by the public and that there is not some natural condition in that community that would make the practice of his profession unprofitable.

THE LAWS OF DEMOCRACY

Every citizen of this country ought to believe in and uphold just and fair methods that attempt to provide for "the more expenditious settlements of disputes," Senator Logan says that some of our regulations "consider themselves above the statutes" and that "they show contemptuous disregard for both the Congress and the courts." Under the bill which he favors not contemplateers the adminstrative agencies are "to remain free in the discharge both their qusi-legislative and quasi-judicial authority." But, he adds that this "does not contemplate that the administrative officials shall excerise otherthan legal discretion they do not have a roving commission to obey the law or not obey it as they see fit, to change and adopt policies contrary to the policies stated in the law, etc."

WHEN YOU TRAVEL IN THE EAST

Eastern railroads are advising travelers to include Washington, their National Captial; Independence Square in Philadelphia, and Atlantic City, the greatest seashore resort of the Atlantic coast in their itineraries, and there enjoyed the perfect climate, the Boardwalk, Haddon Hall and Chalfonte hotels, and all the clean wholsome amusements that are so well expressed at this famous place on the Jersey coast. From there the World's Fair in New York can eaisly be reached.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

Self-investigation is growing in popularity around Washington.

First to try it, of course, was the WPA. When serious charges were made against the relief spending agency several months ago, the WPA immediately set out to investigate itself. The result (of you haven't already anticipated the answer,) was a refutation of the charges. Said the WPA: These charges are not true. We have carefully investigated ourselves and our verdict is "not guilty."

Now the AAA, the plow-under practitioner, has set out to play the role of defendant, defender, prosecutor, judge and jury all at the same time. In other words, it is another self-investigation. The charges here, as in WPA, center about political activity by government agents and the use of Federal funds for policical attainment.

As some at the Capitol see this self investigation practice, it even overshadows the dual accomplishments of the National Labor Relations Board which has thus far managed to sit simultaneously only as prosecutor, judge and jury. The self-investigators have added defendant and defender to the list.

It is to be noted in connection with the WPA's self-acquittal, however, that Congress has 'appealed" the verdict and started an investigation of its own.

And the facts being unearthed oy the Congressional investigating committee are burning a lot of highly placed ears in the administration. The outcome of the probe at the Capitol may suprise a lot of spending advocates.

On the subject of investigations, there is another phase that rates more than just a side-light. It concerns a brand new plan being perfected by the liberal element of the administration, designed to fill inthe breach between where the Constitution leaves off and the desires of the liberals begin.

For some years now the liberal wing has been blocked in some of its ambitious efforts by the simple fact that there is a Constiuion and cours to interpret it. What bothered this group was tha the interpretation could not be ade flexible enough to, in effect, put a man in jail just because he was opposed to this plan or that.

To circumvent this bothersome situation, the liberal planners are going to bring the expedient of "investigations" into play. If "investigations" into play. If evidence cannot be found to prosecute a "troublesome" taxpayer on a legal charge, a special branch of one of the government departments will simply keep the taxpayer "under investigation."

Washington is worrying nowdays about 'bad' word—not the profanity sometimes occasioned by a rapidly climbing thermometer, but "bad" words from an economic point of view. It all started when one of the New Deal advisers with time on his hands prepared a confidential memorandum for the use of witnesses appearing before Congressional committees.

The list of 'good" and 'bad' words is to aid witnesses in presenting their testimony so that current governmenal activities now in the doghouse of public opinon will appear in a better light. Thus, witnesses are cautioned never, neved to speak of "government spending" Call it government running expenses" or "government plant," the world-wizard advises. And don't use the ugly word "debt"—call it investment."

This fascinating word game has spread as far as the State Department now, which wants to do away with all references to "unfavorable" trade balances in favor of the term "export balance."

Pulling ords instead of wool over the public's eyes offers many interesing possibilites. But the individual citizen, at any rate, would enjoy only a brief spell of trying to maintain an "export balance" for a bank account, or trying to sell the milkman on the idea that his bill was merely an "Investment," before he was dudely awakened to the fact that words are really supposed o mean what they say after all.

THEYSAY . . . .

"In the Old World whole nations must start back at the beginning of history and learn once more that the most cherished thing in life is freedom. Let us hope that America may be spared that agony. Let us not permit those who progress power to set themselves above law, but let us rather establish our belief that democracy is the way of life, and that all problems can be solved within its framework without destroying that for which democracy exists, individual freedom"—Clarence B. Randall.

A TEN SHOW AT FIDELITY

Circuses came to the county seat, ten miles away, but at least one tent show came all the way out into the wilds of Fidelity. There must have been dozens of such shows formerly, but they are now one of the passing institutions, even as the circus itself threatens to be.

In an old field near the village the tent was set up, with the requisite number of saucer-eyed boys in the immediate neighborhood of the operations. Just how large or small it was it would be difficult now to say, for time often enlarges things. Anyway, it had some guy ropes and a central pole and some smaller poles; it was a bona fide tent.

From the hills and valleys around Fidelity came all sorts of folks to see the marvels to be exhibited. There were things that impressed us so deeply that probably fifty people could describe them yet with greater skill than I can. There was a cinnamon bear that could dance, and there was a brown bear that could climb trees with a rope around his neck to keep him from straying away for good. My heart danced and skipped when the tight-rope walker did his act, rather clumsily; it seems that some of the neighbors were supposed to hold some guy ropes to keep his rope tight and relaxed in open-mouthed wonder when he danced jigs on the rope. As a result I recall it now his language was neither chaste nor mild when this happened.

But the best things went on inside the tent. Two clowns, dressed in bright-flowered Turkish trousers or something like that, said and did cute things until all of us roared with laughter and slapped each other on the back. The marvel of all came when the ventriloquist came out with his dummy, or "little man", and gave us a taste of an age-old form of entertainment. The dummy was as smart-alec as Charley McCarthy. For weeks after the show we laughed at his stale jokes and near-improp sayings. We tried by every known method to develop a voice to suit a dummy, but I fear our efforts were pretty poor. Then a juggler did his stunts: knife-swallowing, tossing objects, throwing knives, and keeping several balls in the air at once. There may have been some other things, but they have dissappeared under the dust of forty years.

Nothing, probaby, is more distinctively folk than this tent show. Everything that we saw harks back to remote times, some of them among the earliest ages of civilived man. The ancient Romans had their marionettes and their trained animals. The jokesters whom we saw were the lineal descendants of ancient and mediaeval entertainers by the dozens. If that same little show in the old field could have been whisked away to the time to Shakespeare, the great poet himaself could have enjoyed and recognised every feature of it. Chaucer must have known dozen of such troupes in his capacity of internal-revenue collector and traveller. While we were a far piece from civilization, there came to us in this ornery-looking wagon a slice of the whole world.

Dr. E. G. Freyermuth

De Emmett Bradshaw, president of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society, in Omaha, Nebr., today announced that the national convention of the Society held every two years, will convene in New York City the week of June 26. A special Woodmen of the World Day will be held at the World's Fair on July 1, it was said.

Kentucky and Indiana will be represented in the Sovereign Camp, which is the national representative legislative body of the Society, by five men. They are Max Hurt, of Murray, member of the national Committee on Legislation; Evan C. Evans, of Bowling Green, Junior Past Head Consul of the jurisdiction; C. R. Clark, of Hopkinsville, Head Consul; J. H. Vannoy, of Madisonville, and Dr. E. G. Freyermuth, of South Bend, Indiana, official representatives elected by the Head Camp convention recently held in Lexington.

Approximately 250 official delegates, representing nearly 400,000 members in 44 states, are expected to attend the Sovereign Camp convention, at which complete reports on the business and fraternal activities of the Society will be heard.

Hon. Morris Sheppard, U. S. Senator from Texas, Hon. Clyde M. Hoey, Governor of North Carolina, Hon. E. D. Rivers, Governor of Georgia, and Hon. John M. Daniel, Attorney General of South Carolina, will participate in the program. Other speakers will include Niles Trammell, executive vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, and L. F. Livingston, manager, Agricultural Extension Division of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Co.

The Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, meeting in its quadrennial convention will oonvene with the Sovereign Camp for the opening program June 26.

The Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society is the world's strongest fraternal benefit society, President Bradshaw said. It now has assets of more than 128 million dollars, and has paid out in benefits to members and their beneficiaries more than 275 million dollars since its organization 49 years ago. Members are protected by nearly 400 million dollars of insurance in the Society.

GOOD RESULTS FROM NORTHWESTERNE WES

A survey made by County Agnt Floyd McDaniel showed that Montgomery county farmers got exceptional results from using northwestern ewes this season. Almost without exception, he found that farmers who obtained good western stock produced good lambs and fleeces. Kellar Hall, for instance, had more than 11 pounds of wool per ewe, and sold 104 lambs from 76 ewes. McDaniel believes many farmers will be in the market for western ewes this year.

THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE

Toward a Greater America

As long ago as June, 1916, there was born in the editorial offices of Good Housekeeping Magazine an idea which, recurring at different times and in different places since then, has finally emerged into what may well be the beginning of an American renaissance of patriotism.

In an editorial appearing twenty-three years ago in that month's issue of Good Housekeeping, William Frederick Bigelow, editor of the magazine, wrote:

"The stability of a democracy rests upon the honest participation in its forms of government of a majority of the enfranchised citizens. So long, however, as a mere majority support certain ideals, those ideals will merely live, not flourish. Only through the driving power of a public opinion so general as to merit the usual term 'united' can worthwhile advances be made. Now any man buttonholed on the street will tell you that we need a great increase of both intelligence and honesty in our electorate. Charges—and proofs—of fraud are the commonplaces of every election season. . . .

"At the present time—and we have never heard that it was ever otherwise—it is the custom for a young man who has come of age during the year to join the ranks of the voters without any attention being paid to him. Yesterday he was a child legally; today he is a citizen with as much influence at the ballot-box as the most learned and experienced man. He makes his way to the polls, casts his ballot, and goes out to swell the ranks of those who look upon voting as a matter of slight importance and never once think of the significance attached to the casting of a ballot. It does not occur to him that voting constitutes the chief difference between being a citizen and being a subject. . . .

"Our proposal is that hereafter on the Fourth of July—which we at present don't know what to do with—there be suitable services in convenient places for the men and women who will vote for the first time at the following November election. Certificates of citizenship, bearing the state seal and appropriate wording, and signed by some designated official, should be given to each new voter, who should take an oath of citizenship, the duties and privileges of which should be explained in a public address by some well-known man of unquestioned probity. The occasion could be made very impressive, and in a few years would doubtless be looked upon as the public event of the year."

In Good Housekeeping for June, 1921, for July, 1933, and for July, 1935, Bigelow repeated his advocacy of a national Citizenship Day. The General Federation of Women's Clubs took up the banner and through its Department of American Citizenship launched a campaign for recognition of such a day.

Now, in elaborate ceremonies which recently took place at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, sponsored by the State Board of Vocational and Adult Education in cooperation with the University of Wisconsin Extension Service, when 350 native Americans were inducted impressively into the privileges of citizenship, and in scheduled observances in New York and elsewhere, there has come recognition of the wisdom of beginning the voting careers of the country's young people with fitting solemnity. This movement inaugurated by Good Housekeeping is expected to reach greater and greater proportions.

member of such a commission Johnsaid the last time Rhea served on a fact finding commission he came forth with the retail sales tax and perhaps he still regards it as what Kentucky taxpayers need."

Sam Caddy's proposal to inaugurate civil service for state employes brought the charge from Johnson that such a civil service board would do nothing except to examine thousands of persons to whom Tom Rhea has promised jobs."

Johnson called attention Brown's bitter attacks in 1935 against Rhea who is now his political strategist. "What a great day it will be for Kentucky when politics has been prged, dry-cleaned and fumigated under the guidance of a man in 1935 Brown called a bank wrecker and a corruptionist" Johnson said.

Sam Caddy, C. I. O. chieftaain in Kentucky and Frederick A. Wallis, commissioner of the state department of welfare until deposed by Governor Chandler also drew verbal shaft from the Richmand candidate. Caddy, he said would require any successful applicant for a state job to be a member of the C. I. O. "believe in sit-down strikes and pay dues regularly to John L. Lewis.

He also charged that Brown as a member of Congre s refused to assist in the enactment of a measure that would have established a higher parity price on Kentucky tobacco.

Johnson was particularly strong in his denunciation of the C. I. O. He cited its activities in Michigan, Missouri and other state and criticized the attempt of Brown and Caddy, C. I. O. leaders, to have the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission pay benefits to minors who were involved in a labor dispute, which is prohibited under the law. He also told of a conflict that arose between the C. I. O. and berry growers in McCracken county last year.

Hitting at Brown's explanation of his C. I. O. activities Johnson said he did not question Brown's right to act as an attorney for anyone but "I do say that the people of Kentucky do not want him representing the C. I. O. in the governor's chair.

Brown's recent statement in a speech that "To those who help me much in tis campaign I shall owe much" brought from Johnson the remark that no one was "helping than John L. Lewis and the undemocratic C. I. O."

As a parting fling at the C. I. O. Johnson called attention to the fact that 'we have lived in Kentucky all these years without serious industrial strife and nothing would more seriously hamper the progress of Kentucky than such discord as has been created in other states by the C. I. O. with its class hatred and bitterness."

"I know that I am not a superman whom destiny has called to solve all the problems of the Commonwealth. I do not know all the answers. I do know the state's problems cannot be solved with a big "I" and little "we".

I do know that only as long as I can obtain the loyal support of the patriotic citizens of the Commonwealth of Kentucky ill it be possible to solve its problems. I will "get along" with the people of this state will confer with them, ill invited cooperation and advice."

"I would like to have all the assistance that I can in the campaign now opening. I shall need all the help I can obtain to serve you well as governor for four years. I have said before I have no ambition for political career. I look toward becoming governor with humility, yet with a heart full of hope that there is no problem too big, no task too large, no opportunity to great for the intelligent, upright, courageous citizenship of the State of Kentucky to accomplish" Johnson said in conclusion.

So far he heart attacks upon Gen. Pershing have had no more effect than the Germans.

Let us hope the world axais never becomes as uncertail as the one in Rome and berlin.

Sheep growers are reported to want "teeth" inthe dog law, presumably to get even wit hthe teeth in the dogs.

Brown For Goveonor

JOHN YOUNG BROWN

Outlining a constructive eleven point farm program for Kentucky, John Young Brown, candidate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination told an Ohio County audiance at Hartford Wednesday, June 21, it would be the goal of his administration to "place a light bulb in every home in Kentucky."

Besides aid to rural electrification, Mr. Brown said he favored $30 a month old age penson; higher education standards; road building free of politics; freeing of Kentucky toll bridges; removel of tax from gasoline used on the farm; cooperation with the National Governments farm program; restore the State Department of Agriculture; creation of a Kentucky farm Tenancy and Land Ownership Committee, homestead exemption from tax and a State oil conservation law.

In speeches at Lawrenceburg, Nicholasville, Danville, Columbai, Burkesville and Brownville, the candidate told of his indorsement by the Railroad Brotherhoods of Kentucky. This was made public in a letter from N. J. Gallagher, Legislative Representative of the Brotherhoods. In the letter, Mr. Gallagher stated the Brotherhood was supporting Mr. Brown because of his excellent record as a member and Speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives and as a member of the U. S. Congress."

"My opponent is aligned with the anti-New Deal, anti-Roosevelt forces," Mr. Brown stated in a speech at New Castle. "in public speeches and in editorials and cartoons in his newspaper, has has demonstrated that he definitely is aligned with the anti-liberal bloc."

In another speech Mr. Brown declared that his opponent's statement that he was for Senator Barkley for President was nothing more than an "idle expression on his part in an effort to secure votes."

The candidate then referred to a speech his opponent made at Owingsville July 23rd last year, in which he quoted the Lieutenant Governor as saying, "Senator Barkley is misrepresenting the truth as grossly as he has misrepresented the people of Kentucky during the last 23 years."

"During my term as Governor the Federal Government will not have to withdraw CCC camps from Kentucky because of lack of cooperation on the part of State officials," Mr. Brown stated. Later it was announced by Senator Barkley in Washington that he thought the Government would not remove the camps.

In Louisville, Thomas A. Ballantine, Jefferson County Chairman for Mr. Brown, announced the opening of Brown Jefferson County Headquarts, Mr. Ballantine president of the Louisville Bar Association and Acting Circuit Judge, stated that Mrs. Lennie McLaughlin former Secretary of the Louisville organization when the organization was under the direction of the late M. J. Brennan, and a member of the Democratic Central Committee; Mrs. Irene Chapman, also a member of the Committee; and Edward Briscoe, who, also were associated with the Brennan organization ould be associated with him at Brown Headquarters.

In a statement Mr. Ballantin said that Mr. Brown's opponent, as the chief office holder of he Legislature, has participated in a legislative program directed against Louisville, and that the State Administration has not earned the respect or support of the majority of the citizens of Louisville.

In Northern Kentucky, the Covington Good Government League went on record as favoring Mr. Brown's candidacy. The resolution said, Mr. Brown stands four square for the people of our State on pensions, labor, agriculture, public utilities and honest state, county and city ogvernment."

At Lexington Newt Combs, Jr., one of the leaders of Governor Chandler's Lexington and Fayette County forces, announced he would support Mr. Brown. Mr. Combs announcement gives Mr. Brown the complete support of all Democratic facions in the Blue Grass Metropolis.

IRISH LAMB STEW CALLED MAN'S DISH

For a man-sized, tasty meal, few things surpass old-fashioned Irish lamb stew with dumplings. Home economics experts at the Kentucky College of Agriculture suggest the following recipie:

2 lbs. lamb; 1 cup diced raw carrots; 1-2 cup diced raw turnip; 1 sliced onion; 1 teaspoon pepper; 1-2 bay leaf; also 1-2 recipie baking powder biscuits.

Wipe lamb with a damp cloth, and cut into small pieces. Cover with boiling water and let simmer for two hours (covered). Add biscuit dough by spoonsful on top of mixture—cover, and cook 15 minutes. Serve at once. This will make plenty for six people.

6 lamb shoulder chops; 1 1-2 tablespoons butter; 4 cups scalded milk; 12 small white onions; 12 small potatoes; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-8 teaspoon black pepper; 2 tablespoons of butter; 2 tablespoons of flour; parsley.

If the chops have excess fat, trim it off. Brown the chops in butter; add milk, onions, potatoes, salt and pepper, cover the whole and simmer a half hour or until vegetables are soft. Arrange chops onions and potatoes on a warm platter and serve with gravy made by thickening liquid in pan with butter and flour; garnish with parsley. This serves six persons.

SLEEPING SICKNESS FOUND IN KENTUCKY

The first case this year of sleeping sickness of horses in Kentucky has been registered by the Agricultural Experimen Sation at Lexington. The brain of a horse that died in the central part of the state was examined in the Station's department of animal pathology and he cause of death pronounced sleeping sickness. This diagnosis later was confired in the Bureau of Animal Industry in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Brains of several horses have been received at the Experiment Station. but only in this one instance was evidence of the sleeping disease found. A large number of Kentucky horses have been vaccinated against sleeping sickness, the disease which killed large number of horses in other states last year.

GIVES CONTROL OF TOBACCO DISEASES

Kentucky tobacco growers have more to fear from wildfire and angular leaf spot in plant beds and fields than from blue mold, says a statement from the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. outbreak of blue mold was the most Relief is expressed that the 1938 severe that Kentucky growers are likely to experience for years.

Losses from blue mold are considered minor when compared to the destruction of wildfire and angular leafspot, especially in Western Kentucky. Tests made over a series of years in Todd and neighboring counties indicate that wildfire and leafspot can be controlled in the plant bed by two applications of bluestone-lime, if applied when the plants are small.

What promises to be the largest rally of Scouts ever held anywhere in the world will take place during Boy Scout Day at the New York World's Fair on June 29. The exercises will be combined with the 29th Annual Meeting of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, on June 28-29. First day sessions, June 28, of the national meeting will be at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel where Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State, and Dr. John R. Mott, President of the World's Alliance of the Y.M.C.A. are to speak at the luncheon and dinner sessions respectively. J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will address the mass gathering of 75,000 Scouts scheduled for the Court of Peace at the Fair on Thursday afternoon June 29, and at the same place Owen J. Roberts, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, is to officiate at a ceremony when 500 or more 21-year-old Scouts or former Scouts accept the specific obligations of voting citizenship.

Grover A. Whalen, President of the World's Fair Corporation and Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Mayor of New York City, will welcome the National Council at luncheon in the Fair's Centre of Nations just prior to the Scout Day ceremonies. Walter W. Head of St. Louis, Mo., President of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, will occupy the chair at all sessions. Both Theodore Roosevelt, Vice-President of the National Council, and Daniel Carter Beard, National Scout Commissioner, are to take part in the sessions. Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive and Editor of "Boys' Life," will make public the Movement's annual report for 1938, showing excellent progress in all fields and a 12.4% gain in membership. The Boy Scout Foundation of Greater New York, host Council, is completing extensive plans to receive and entertain the delegates.

With The Reds

The Reds will close their present home stay Wednesday with a night game against Pie Traynor's swashbuckling Pittsburgh Pirates. Before the game a pre-game show of a very unusual nature will take place. It will be the most novel surprise of the season. There will also be fireworks.

The Pirates were to open the series with a single game Tuesday. Pittsburgh has not appeare dat Crosley Field since April 23.

After the night game the Reds will leave for Chicago, stopping off Thursday at Indianapolis for a twilight exhibition tilt with the Indians, the Reds' American Association farm club. The Reds meet the Cubs in Chicago Friday, Saturday and in a double-header Sunday. The Reds have not as yet appeared in the Windy City, as their first series there was completely washed out.

The Reds will celebrate Independence Day with a double-header at Pittsburgh, and will return home again to meet their closet rivals, the St. Louis Cardinal Gas House Gang The Reds and Cards will claw at each other in a ladies' day attraction July 5, and, in a night game July 6. This nocturnal affair will be preceded by a track meet in which Bob Deckard, Glenn Cunningham, and Wayne Rideout, three of the greatest track stars in th ecountry, will appear.

The Cubs will come to Crosley Field for single games on July 8 and 9, and following that, Bill McKechnie's warriors will pack their bags and again set sail forthe East .

Tickets for Wednesday's night game with the Pirates are now on sale at the Reds' d owntown office, the Henry Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets.

THINGS FARMERS DO WHEN THEY SUCCEED

What makes for success on the farm? The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture interviewed farmers to find out.

Since control of expenses is easier than control of prices, successful farmers reduce costs. They produce the most at the smallest cost.

Some other things good farmers do: use limestone and phosphate; grow winter cover crops on plowed land; seed mixed clovers and grasses; grown enough vegetables, meat milk and eggs for home use; keep 40 per cent of tillable land, other than bottom land, in pasture, purchase only concentrated feed that can't be produced on the farm; keep enough cattle and sheep to use all hay and pasture, and enough pasture, and enough to eat all the corn not needed for other stock; do or supervise all labor themselves; do work on time! have fence and stock water adequate for all fields to be pastured at the right time.

Other factors observed: successful tobacco growers give attention to curing; dairy farmers who succeed, cull, select and feed for high production; those who raise sheep provide smal grain pasture, house and care for their flocks; hogs raisers follow sanitary methods in feeding and farrowing, save most pigs, and push them through to early market condition.

Hitler is the Mt. Vesuvious of the human race; there is the constant fear of eruption.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner,

THE TURN OF THE YEAR

As do business men, so gardeners begin a new year i n July; rather, in July a new phase of the garden begins. In the early spring, when the first seed was sown, the aim was to produce as quickly as possible fresh, green vegetables to replace those preserved or stored for the winter and the appetite for which has become just a bit blunted. That phase is past; production is under way to keep the daily table supplied, and the opportunity has come to look to providing for next winter.

The vegetables laid by for winter use and for which arrangements must be made now are beans, tomatoes, cabbage, beets and white potatoes.

Beginning with beans, it may be that the custom has been followed to can a few quarts now and then as surpluses offered, but if it appears that not enough surplus will occur, the bean plantings during July may be doubled to provide it. Stringless Greenpod is an excellent variety with which to continue, but the new Stringless Refuge outyields it.

Inpassing the remainder should be given that as the summer advances, the campaign against the Mexican bean beetle becomes more intense, and gardeners should stay alert to spray or dust when the first egg-clusters are seen on any planting of beans, and to follow the 10-day schedule developed by the Kentucky Experiment Station. It should be unnecessary to add that only the recommended control materials be used, and only, onthe under surfaces of the leaves.

Gardeners who have failed to provide for later tomatoes to come in when the fruits of the present planting become small and sour, still have a fair chance to make good the over sight, but they must act promptly. Early varieties as Break O'Day, Bonny Best, Chalk's Jewel, started "in place," July 1, in a fair season should make a few ripe fruits before frost, and green toatoes to ripen indoors or use din catsup, preserves or pickle.

Late cabbage, similarly, may be started, but rather than use the standard late sorts, All-Seasons, Succession or Copenhagen Market should be the varieties. The seed should be sown in groups, "in place," to evade the hazzard that sometimes attends transplanting in late July or early August.

Beetts may be started in early July to make excellent roots to store, or at least "baby" beets to can. Keeping in mind that the season may not be particularly favorable, and because of the late start, anyhow, Crosby's Egyptian should be the variety.

Some weeks ago late potatoes were here discussed, but this reminder is prompted by the presence in almost all parts of Kentucky, of seed of Green Mountain, the variety then recommended. Planted before July 15, and given a fair season, Green Mountain makes heavy yields, provided, of course that the gardener has done his part in providing all the advantages professional potato growers have learned are essentials.

The increased activity of the Mexican beetle during this phase of the garden has been touched upon, but the same is true of all insects, whose injury may be intensified by the slower growth ofthe vegetables resulting from the customary curtailment of rain in this season. But, alertness to use the correct measures against them should still defeat the insects.

Again, because of moisture, the endeavors of gardeners should be directed to conserve what moisture there is, by cultivating only shallowly, and by refraining from making labor-wasting hills and ridges.

Kentucky Politics

Keen Johnson took the gloves off today of denunciation against John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. and other party leaders whose careers in the past have been marked by bolting tactics and disloyalty to the party.

It was an agressive, combative Richmond editor who addressed a large audience at the Shelby county fairgrounds on the outskirts of Shelby county fairgrounds byville today as he formally opened his speakiny campaign which his supporters confidently believe will win for him the Democratic nomination for governor.

The tall stm lieutenant governor did not quibble with words or pull his oratorical punches. He gave a detailed outline of the program that would guide and be the goal of his administration and scathingly denounced his opponent, John Young Brown, for campaigning on false promises and being the willing tool of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. "Czar."

Johnson was introduced by Congressman Virgil Chapman, of Lexington and Paris, chairman of the executive committee of the National Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. Coleman Wright, Shelbyville, Johnson's campaign chairman for Shelby county presided. The speech was broadcast over a seven station hook-up with Station WHAS, Louisville, serving as the key station. J. Lyter Donaldson, Johnson's state campaign manager, also spoke briefly. He introduced Governor A. B. Chandler who presented Congressman Chapman.

Johnson in his speech laid down with startling directness the principal issues upon which he intends to wage his campaign. Brown's "campaign of promises," his political advisors, and the threat of John L. Lewis and C. I. O. dominance in the state government brought caustic comment from the newspaperman candidate.

"I stand before this throng of militant Democrats as a candidate who does not represent any special interest and the first promiseI make to you is that I will not be controlled by the C. I. O. or bossed by John L. Lewis", were Johnson's opening words and they were a recurring theme throughout the remainder of his one hour address.

In outlining his program for Kentucky Johnson declared he as "not going to get into any promising contest with so reckless a promiser as my opponent." He emphatically declared his opposition to any increase in taxes and expressed the view that the state's present income was sufficient to meet its needs if ecomny was practiced.

Johnson announced his endorsement of $30 a month maximum payment for old age assistance, a continuance of the $12 per capita for school purposes, extension of the use of free textbooks, and promised to develop a plan which would result in freeing the state's toll bridges.

The editor candidate pledged he would conduct the affairs of the state on a "sound businesslike basis; continue the program for improvement and modernization of the charitable and jenal institutions until they " were second to none"; aid in the extension of rural electrification; support an extensive development of the state park system, work for the submission of a constitutional amendment which would permit the creation of an equalization fudn for teachers and the establishment of a teachers' retirement fund.

Discussing the pardoning power vested in the chief executive Johnson he would not hesitate to grant pardons in such cases as the facts and circumstances justify."

He also declared for the program of the Farm Bureau and pointed out that a farm which he owns in Hardin county has been operated in complete cooperation with the National Farm Program. He also declared he favored the establishment of a laboratory at the University of Kentucky where a staff of scientists would devote helr time to development of "profitable new uses for tobacco and other farm products and to try and find wider uses for the mineral and agricultural resources of the state. "

Touching on labor, Johnson declared he had in he past "demonstrated" his sincere friendship for labor at every opportunity." " I shall, as governor, be sympathetic with all reasonable labor legislation which improves the condition of the working man without reducing employment opportunity" he said.

Johnson also expressed his intention to see that "adequate support" was given the higher educational institutions of the state.

Johnson paid high tribute to President Roosevelt describing him as a man with a "big heart" and a man for whom I have the highest respect and admiration. He also referred to him as a "man for whom I shall cooperate wholeheartedly when elected governor in all matters in which the state and nation have a joint interest."

Freedom from dominance from any individual or interested political group, was openly voiced by Johnson and he reviewed his record as an adherent to the Democratic party and cited his cooperation with previous Democratic administrations.

"I shall not be bound by any of any previous governor" he declared, "I gave to Governor Laffoon, when he was governor, my loyal cooperation; I gave to Governor Fields, when he was governor, my loyal cooperation; I gave to Governor Chandler my loyal cooperation."

"I am running now on my own platform and not on the record of any of them" he said.

Incidents of the 1935 gubernatorial campaign in which Governor A. B. Chandler defeated Thomas S. Rhea, Russellville, now one of John Young Brown's principal advisers and supporters, flared through portions of Johnson's speech as he assailed tactics employed by Brown and his principal supportors in the present campaign.

The direct charge that Brown was a lobbyist and as such was campaigning as a candidate for governor was made by Johnson.

"Kentucky has had for governor many eminent lawyers and they have filled the duties of the governer's chair with distinction. Kentucky has had as governor, soldiers whose courage and devotion to their state has been tested under fire. Kentucky has had as governor, farmers, called from the field as was Cincinnatus from the plow" he declared.

"But so far as I know, no lobbyist, actively engaged in lobbying ever before has made a race for governor while still representing any special interest or group. My opponent is a lobbyist in that he is concerned principally with these interests of his client, the C. I. O., that come before the state government in Frankfort" he continued.

Johnson pointed out that while he did not support Governor Chandler in the primary campaign in 1935 he contributed all he could to his final election against the Republicans despite the fact that the candidate I had supported broke the pledge to support the nominee of his party that he had made in his declaration of candidacy."

Johnson supported the candidacy of Thomas S. Rhea for the gubernatoral nomination in 1935, who in the fall election, bolted the Democratic ticket and openly endorsed the candidacy of King Swope, the Republican nominee.

"He (Tom Rhea) not only bolted but he was so afraid that some one might fail to know that he engaged the radio for the occasion and bolted the Democratic party in a public broadcast," Johnson said.

Johnson chided Brown for the rash promises he was making in his campaign talks and said that "if he does what he says he will do, it will require over $15,000,000 more than the state of Kentucky now has to spend annually."

To raise such a sum Johnson said taxes of more than $141 a hundred would be required on all real estate in Kentucky for state purposes or a five per cent retail sales tax would have to be levied to meet the "lavish promises of my opponent."

Brown's proposal to appoint a "fact finding" commission to locate tax sources drew fire of Candidate Johnson. Pointing out that "no fact finding" commission can find any painless taxes," Johnson sarcastically expressed the opinion that Brown would name Tom Rhea to a place on such a commission. Referring to Rhea as a member of such a commission. Referring to Rhea as a

CAN YOU REMEMBER:

. . . when the trick flyer at the county fair wouldn't go up till the wind died down?

. . . and when you had to wind your watch with a key—if you could find the key?

Oh for the good old days, when mother and the girls pushed dirt around with a broom, and rattled a furnace, and made toast in the oven, and scrubbed clothes on a wash board!

Suppose you had gone to sleep thirty years ago and had just "come to" yesterday. Imagine your bewilderment—floating palaces, drifting across the sky at 250 miles an hour—conversation from the other side of the world, coming out of a box—sparkling white cabinets making ice, right in the kitchen—self-flipping electric toasters — a little gadget, upstairs, running the weather for you—cool, comfortable rooms, with one hundred and five in the shade outside—vacuum cleaners, electric egg-beaters, food-mixers, washing machines and razors!

What a day in which to work and live!

Demostrations Show Large Results

The filed work in checking performance for benefits under the 1939 Agricultural Conservation Program in Boone county began on Monday of this week, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. This is an earlier start than in former years which is in accordance with the request of many farmers that checking to be done before the crops are harvested.

Each farm cooperating in the 1939 AC program will be visited and the field supervisor will assist the farmer in completing his report required for benefits. Approximately 1100 farms will be visited during the next 60 days.

Fifteen field supervisors began work Monday and three more will probably start the latter part of this week or the first of next week. Those beginning work Monday as are follows:

PHOSPHATE DEMONSTRATIONS SHOW RESULTS

Twenty of the twenty nine superphosphate demonstrations conducted by the Boone County extension servce in connection with the Tennessee Valey Authority have been checked according to H. R. Drake, assistant ounty agent. These demonstrations are to show the value of lime and superphosphate on pasture lands. The phosphate was applied at the rate of 200 pounds per acre while two tons of lime were used in most cases. Greatest results from lime are shown on red cloverand alfalfa while phosphae shows up well on all grasses. Many of the demonstrators state that phosphate not only increases the stand of the grasses but also increases the feeding value.

Tests were run on five new grasses in connection with these phosphate demonstrations. Meadow Fescue, Fall Oat grass, Brome Grass, Canada Bluegrass and Italian Rye Grass were sown. Rye grass shows promise as a winter cover crop. It furnishes some winter pasture and also prevents the soil from washing. The other nine demonstrations will probably yield some additional information on these grasses.

Christian Church Re-Decorated

The entire interior of the Christian Church, Walton, has taken on a new appearance as a result of a re-decorating program that has been under way during the past two weeks. The walls have been painted buff tinted with rose and the ceiling cream tinted with rose, giving a soft pleasing effect to the eye. All the woodwork has been gone over, as well as the floors. New draperies for the choir loft are being donated by the Willing Workers class and will be hung during the coming week.

The public is invited to worship in this newly decorated building each Sunday at each of the following services: Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; Morning Worship at 11:00 a. m.; Evening Worship at 7:30 p. m.

New Firehouse Site Chosen

Independence will construct its new firehouse on the site suggested by the Kenton County Commissioners just south of the Kenton County Court House. The trustees in a resolution signed by Robert F. Onley, clerk, announced their acceptance of the site and thanked the county officials.

Dogs Attack Sheep

On Sunday night, July 2nd, dogs entered the flock of sheep of M. C. Percival in Kenton county, near Walton, killed four and four others were not expected to live.

The same night dogs, probably the same ones, killed eight sheep out of a flock of fourteen for a neighbor of Mr. Percival.

The sheep were valued at $12 per head.

AT THE JAMES

Dodge City (in technicolor) with Errol Flynn - Olivia DeHavilland - Ann Sheridan, Friday and Saturday, July 7th and 8th. From the four corners of the earth men came to this wide-open Babylon of the west—to build, to ravage, to fight. See in glorious technicolor the true epic story of America's most glamorous and most dangerous city and the man who tamed it. He rides the roaring mile that God forgot.

Romance of the redwoods with Charles Bickford - Jean Parker - Gordon Oliver, Sunday, July 9th. Drama lashing with the fury of forests aflame. Out of the terrifying silence of the great North woods thunders a roaring romance of men who loved danger—and of women who loved dangerously—a love as untamed as the wilderness that gave it birth.

On Trial with Margaret Lindsay - John Litel - Edward Norris - Ianet Chapman, Monday, July 10th. Is murder ever justified? Put yourself on the jury—watch each thrilling scene — each tense moment as a man's life hangs in the balance. He murdered a man and he admits it. But that man had robbed him of love. How will you vote? Guilty or innocent?

The Law Comes to Texas with Bill Elliott - Veda Ann Borg - Bud Osbourne, Tuesday, July 11th. Bill's 6-guns speak the only language the bandits understand. Yankin' an outlaw off the bench in a killers' court of law—

Return of the Cisco Kid with Warner Baxter - Lynn Bari - Cesar Romero, Wednesday, July 12th. For the oldtimers this show is a chip off the old block. For the newcomers to whom the 'Cisco Kid' character is strange, it's something refreshingly different in the line of Western romances. Has plenty of depth, romantic swing, natural comedy, surprises and sensations.

My Son Is a Criminal with Alan Baxter - Jacqueline Wells - Gordon Oliver, Thursday, July 13th. No more terrible duty did a man ever face—than to shoot down his only son—to uphold the law. A Cop who preferred to say—my son is dead—than confess—My Son Is a Criminal.

Will Purchase New School Bus

At a meeting of the Walton-Verona school board to be held this (Wednesday) evening negotiations are expected to be completed for the purchase of a new school bus.

This bus is to be used exclusively in the Verona district, and voters there voted an additional tax to take care of this extra expense. It will transport the children to the Verona Grade school.

The other bus, which has been in use for several years, will continue to bring Junior and Senior High school students to the Walton school as well as the grade students along the way, in the Walton District.

All Day Meeting

There will be an all day meeting on Sunday, July 16, 1939 at the Old Historic Salem Baptist church, located one and one-half miles south of Walton, near Highway No. 16.

Mrs. Juliet F. McClure whose membership remains there, has had the grounds and church beautified.

We invite you to come and worship the Lord with us on this day. Preaching service at 10 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. (C. S. T.).

Bring your lunch and spend the day.—Elder Chas. Mangold.

Ohio county's strawberry crop rated high in quality according to standard grading procedure. By careful handling of berries, expert packing, etc., growers were able to command top prices. Approximately 13 carloads were shipped.

Walton Court News

James Cochran was fined $5 and costs for peddling without license. He was suspended the $5 and paid the costs.

Ollie Burden of Morning View was fined $15 on charges of being intoxicated.

Orr Flannery of Jonesville, Va., was fined $5 and costs for being intoxicated.

Carl Bonham of Jonesville, received a sentence of $15 for improper driving and being under the influence liquor.

Warning To All Kentucky Hunters

Frankfort, Ky., July 4—Warning that all hunters, regardless of age or sex, must have licenses and must carry them when in the field was issued today by James Brown, Director of the State Game and Fish Division. In connection with the squirrel hunting season, now on, Brown called attention to the bag limit of six squirrels a day and the law against any person having in possession more than two days' bag limit.

State School For The Blind

In Louisville, Ky., there is located the Kentucky School for Blind where full educational opportunities are offered to visually handicapped children.

Eligible for admission are boys and girls between the ages of six and eighteen who are residents of Kentucky, and who are blind or whose sight is so defective that they cannot attend public school. It is further required that they be of sound mind and good health. There is no charge for utition, books, board or laundry.

The regular school program includes kindergarten, grade school and a full four year accredited high school course. Special instruction is given in vocal and instrumental music, industrial work, vocational occupations and physical training.

There are separate schools for white and colored children with a staff of teachers for each.

The regular school term starts the second Wednesday in September and closes the second Wednesday in June, the children returning to their homes for the summer vacation.

It is the ardent wish of the Board and the Superintendent that every visually handicapped child in Kentucky take advantage of the highly specialized training. If you know of such a child kindly report the case to Miss Catherine T. Moriarty, Superintendent, Kentucky School for Blind, Louisville, Kentucky.

Mrs. Dora Haley

Mrs. Dora Haley, 73, passed away Thursday morning at her residence 111 Center street, Erlanger, after a short illness.

The remains were removed to the Taliaferro Funeral Home for preparation.

She is survived by two sons Harry and Robert; one daughter Mrs. Marguerite McNeill; several brothers and sisters. The pallbearers were M. J. Mitchell, C. B. Yelton, C. W. Goodridge, Leroy Whitson, Luke Beagle and Joseph Haley.

Services were conducted Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the Taliaferro Funeral Home by Rev. Young, assisted by Rev. Martin with interment following in Highland cemetery.

Charity Racing Day Monday, July 10

Some of America's finest horses will race for charity at the Latonia Race Track on Monday, July 10. The occasion has been designated Charity Racing Day and a tri-county civic committee that has been organized to manage it joins with racing officials in promising that it will be "the greatest racing event of the year." The best racing card and largest purse of the Latonia race meeting are assured.

The Latonia Jockey Club is turning over its entire racing plant for the day to the civic committee. The entire proceeds will be divided among the Community Chest of Cincinnati and the charities of Campbell and Kenton Counties. The entire staff of Latonia, including executives and track employes, have volunteered to donate their services, and the concessionaires have agreed to turn over 15 percent of their gross revenues. The charities will receive not only the gate receipts, but also the entire returns from the parimutuels.

Some of the distinguished people who are to be present are Governor and Mrs. John W. Bricker of Ohio and Governor and Mrs. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky.

An electric bull pen has been built by Baker & Adams, of the Bullitt-Jefferson Dairy Association. An ordinary woven wire fence was used, with one or two electric wires used as lining.

O. C. Rankin, Nicholas county plans to raise 4,000 turkeys this year.

Johnson--Wilt

The marriage of Miss Virginia Kathleen Johnson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edmond Johnson to Mr. Paxton Marshall Wilt, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wilt of Louisville, Ky., was solemnized Friday evening June 30th at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the brides parents Montgomery Road, Pleasant Ridge, Cincinnati, Ohio.

At the appointed time to the strains of the wedding march which was offered by the bride's aunt Mrs. J. B. Johnson of Walton, the bride entered the living room on the arm of her father and never looked more beautiful than when she slowly walked to the improvised altar to join the groom.

Miss Eugene Van Overbeke of Louisville, the bride's only attendant, was gowned in pink chiffon and carried an old fashioned bouquet.

The best man was Mr. Webb Duane of Louisville.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. W. Emigholz, which was followed by a reception to the immediate families and a few close friends.

After a wedding trip in the South the bride and groom will make their home in Louisville.

The bride is the granddaughter of W. B. and the late Mrs. Johnson of Walton.

Those attending the wedding from here were as follows: W. B. Johnson, Mrs. Maxie Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnson and son Tommy.

Among others present were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Mills and sons Billy and Bobbie of Covington and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Renaker of Bloomington, Ind.

4-H Club News

Ten 4-H Club Tours will be held during July, according to H. B. Drake, Assistant County Agent.

These tours are to help acquaint the club members with what the other members are doing as well as helping individuals with any problems they may have.

Nine of the ten clubs have all the members go on the tour and visit the separate projects. The Florence X-Cel Club is large enough that only the officers visit the projects, the other members holding a picnic later in the month.

By following this procedure, each club member's project will be visited within the next few weeks.

The schedule of tours is as follows:

Verona, July 7th
Florence, July 10th
Taylorsport, July 11th
Grant, July 12th
Burlington, July 14th
Hebron, July 18th
Hamilton, July 19th
Walton, July 20th
Petersburg, July 21st
New Haven, July 25th.

All members will meet at the schoolhouse at 9:00 a. m. the day of the tour.

Florence X-Cel Club will hold their picnic July 26th.

KENTUCKY LAMB WEEK JULY 2 TO 8

Kentuckians! Do you know that here in your own state the sheep and lamb industry is a $10,000,000 industry! Do you know also that ninety percent of the lambs grown here are shipped to eastern markets.

Are you aware of the fact that nutritive value of lamb and mutton is quite comparable to that of beef and other meats? The protein is the most valuable contribution of meat to the diet. This is particularly true of the muscle-cell proteins since they contain all the amino acids needed for tissues building in approximately correct proportions.

In addition to the valuable proteins present, lean meat is especially rich in phosphorus and iron, but low in calcium. It logades sahsal calcium. It is a good source of vitamin G and appreciable amounts of vitamin A are present in the fat.

AMERICA'S WAY OUT

Whenever the bars are let down to make it easier for Amerians to buy good or merchandise of any kind from a foreign nation there is always somebody ready to critize the government for letting such things happen. And when other nations stop buying our goods of any kind, somebody usually comes forward with a proposal to subsidize exports at the expense of the general taxpayer.

Such expressions of the nationalistic spirit which wuld, if sshared by everybody make the United States a closed nation so far as foreign trade is concerned, are echoes of a past day when this country was the world's chief supply of a great variety of raw materials.

That day has passed. The other great areas which were still unsettled and undeveloped when the United States was young have caught up with us and some of them have passed us Brazil has become a competitor or even terms in the world's markets for cotton. Australia for years has been producing wool more cheaply than we have been. Argentina produces more beef than we do.

Once the United States had a monoply, almost on oil. Today there is hardly a spot on the face of the globe which is not producing oil in paying quantities.

Africa has developed copper mines which have all but ruined many of this country's largest copper producers.

It is certain that we cannot sell goods to other nations unless we buy from them. We cannot sell them what they already have in plenty or can buy elswhere on better terms. Therefore it would seem to be good policy for this country to direct attention to the things we can produce better than the rest of the world and sell more cheaply. Those are chiefly manufactured goods, of a thousand different kinds.

Our road to prosperity lies in developng the industries in which our technicians are supreme, using as much of our raw materials as we can consume, and buying from others their products which they can produce more cheaply or better than we do

Cause And Effect

The charge that "capital is on strike" has been trotted out in Washington again to help raise a din of complaint that investors, and not administration policies, are responsible for the continuation of the depression.

Many New Deal spokesmen have joined in the dinmaking, saying that if the money now in banks could be forced into circulation, recovery would be certainty. True, this idle capital, and if it was in circulation many jobs could be created and many pay evelopes filled. But why is this money—accumulated by the savings of the average citizen, stagnament in banks? There is a reason, and it is as simple as adding two and two.

No investor, large or small, puts his money into anything unless there is a fair chance of some profit. If the investor can see no prospect for a profit then this investor is likely to put that money in his sock, or under his mattress, and wait until there is a better risk. In this case, the banks have been entrusted with the savings of the average citizen, and because the banks cannot find reasonable prospects for profit in investment, the banks are keeping the savings in "their socks," so to speak.

But why is there so little chance for profit from an investment? That reason is just as simple. It is because of business enterprises are so heavily burdened with taxes and expenses arising from complicated government requirements that nothing left for profits to the investors who risk their savings.

If some of the deterrents can be removed, and some assurance given that their is a reasonable chance for profit then investment will be stimulated and recovery will indeed seem more in prospect. That is a job for these din-makers.

The Invisible Collector

The old adage gloomily opines that nothing is certain except death and taxes. Many persons have question the second certainty pretending that they pay no taxes because they own no property and pay no income tax.

Actually, though, about the only individuals who have escaped that second "certainty" are those who have run afoul of the first—death.

And it seems strange indeed that, in the face of all facts to the contray everywhere the individual citizen goes, an invisable tax collector is as close on his heels his own shadow. In fact ,out of every dollar gathered in by government almost 60 cents is in the form of hidden taxes, are mainly paid by people with small incomes.

Mr. Average Citizen pay the money just a few cents at a time, as an added charge on virtually everying he buys, seldom realizing how rapidly the total mounts up into dollars and keeps him from buying more of the good things of life he would like to.

Since taxes are mostly invisible today, it is hard to make them a burning issue in public affairs. But with their burdens constantly mounting, the average American is beginning to reach the stage where he wishes devoutly that not only would the collector become a little more "invisible", but some of the taxes themselves would also "do the vanishing act."

By JAMES PRESTON

The acoustics in Washington are sometimes phenomenal. For instance, the drop of a political pin will sometimes make more noise than a boulder dropped from the Washington mounment.

So it is that a boulder has been dropped (without much noise) on the toes of the New Deal. In this case the weighty object dropped is a Congressional report attacking the administration's method of issuing rules and regulations. This report contains one of the most pointed barbs written in several sessions of Congress, but it has passed unnoticed in news dispatches from Washington.

The report was written by the Senate's Judiciary Committee which has been considering a bill to place some curb on the power now enjoyed by Federal agencies. The bill under consideration would permit court review of rules and regulations issued by the agencies. Under the present administration set up, the rule makers abide by no rules other than their noses at the courts and Constitutional law.

". . . the prime consideration and emphasis has been on strengthening the powers of the Federal Government so as to regulate and control the governed with practically no consideration being given to providing means and methods whereby the governors could be governed and the regulators could be regulated. The time has come when some of these regulators consider themselves above the statutes and when they show contemptuous disregard for both the Congress and the courts. Unless this country is to become first a parliamentary and then a totalitarian government, with the States reduced to mere police provinces and with both the legislative and judicial branches of our Government dominated by the administrative agencies of Government, these administrative agencies must be required to both observe the terms of the statutes and to exercise good faith in their administration of such statutes."

Best indication to date that Congress really wants to adjourn by July 15 is the recent mood exhibited by the House. That chamber has suddenly begun meeting at 11 a. m. every week day, which is an hour earlier than usual. Also, several of its sessions has lasted past the dinner hour as compared with the usual "about five o'clock" recess. More Saturday sessions also are in prospect which is a definite home stretch hint.

There is more significance than has been printed behind the announcement of the C. I. O. that it will begin a major unionization drive in the aircraft and shipbuilding industries soon. It is these industries that will carry the heaviest ment to the National Defense Bill. gram. And here is the background for the announced C. I. O. drive:

Several weeks ago the C. I. O. almost succeeded in slipping a "joker" through Congress which would have given labor agitators (or even foreign spies) enough power virtually to shut down the nation's defense industries. The "joker" was in the form of an amendme nt to the Nationa Defense Bill. It would have voided any government defense contract if the firm bolding the contract was engaged in any labor dispute. And a labor dispute can mean a dispute between an employer and a single employee. The amendment was tossed out of the defense bill when at almost the last minute the joker was discovered.

Thus, many at the Capitol interpret the C. I. O. membership drive in the defense industries as a show of determination to gain control of these vital units of industry—with or without legislative "cooperation."

Many of the Capitol, too, are a bit worried over the prospect for they remember—all too well—some of the vollence and long shutdowns that have accompanied other C. I .O. drives.

PERPETUAL MOTION DEPARTMENT: The Home Owners' Loan Corporation seeking to mollify some of its distressed borrowers who are in danger of losing their homes to the tax collector, has hit upon a new lending echeme. The HOLC has announced it will now lend money to delinquent taxpayers to help them avoid foreclosures. The loans of course will be made only to home owners already indebted to the HOLC.

Thus the government will take money out of one pocket, give it to the taxpayer and then take it back and put it into the other pocket. All the taxpayer gets out of it is a bigger debt to the HOLC—and he still has to pay other taxes to support the HOLC.

Shiverees and Serenades

CHARIVARI is the way to spell it, but we did not call it that. This strange French word of uncertain origin was known as a shiveree, a function that was a legitimate and expected part of every wedding of any pretension. Just how or when it started I have not been abel to learn; even the Romans had just such a capering as a procession to escort home the newly-wedded pair. In these more decorous days there may be some of you who do not know the rules governing such a merry-making; allow me again, in the capacity of old-timer, to instruct you. If the man who has just married is a hale-fellow-well-met, by all means he should be given this rowdy serenade. Get all the boys and men of the community together with guns, tin pans, handbells and anything else that wil make a noise like a visit by friends and goblins. Creep stealthily to the house where the newlyweds are staying and begin your noise by firing off all the artillery you have, crashing pans and ringing bels as an after-effect. Repeat until you are tired or until your ammunition is exhausted. By all means invite the bridegroom out; if he fails to come, go in after him. A sharp-edged rail is the official instrument of torture. Place him on this and jog him up and down until you feel that he has been properly inducted into the dignified group of married and respectable citizens. If th epeople at the house are not too terrified at the noise, you might expect a handout in the shape of some cake and pickle or other delicacy. If all of you escape unhurt, laugh at your tricks until the next time; if you get shot, try to think that you were wounded in service to society.

The serenade was and is a more genteel thing, though it has been known to get rowdy. Musicians, armed this time with fiddles, banjos, guitars, French horns; etc. steal upon the home which they delight to honor. They sing and play all sorts of airs ranging from the tearful ballad to the church hymns. It is a hard hearted family that does not feel th compliment of such attention and reward the musicians with food and drink. Some neighborhoods have kept up this old form of music until our own times, going from house to house at Chistmas or other times, bringing good cheer. Even as late as fifteen years ago the serenade broke out again in my own town, groups of colored boys making a large circuit of the town in an evening, sure of a warm welcome wherever they ent.

Like so many folk things, this custom, hether calm or rowdy dates back into the misty past. Christmas waits in the old countries still perform as a regular part of the holiday season. Some of the groups even give brief plays as a part of their journeys of good cheer. In just such celebrations as these we find ourselves next-door neighbors to remote ancestors who carried on a tradition that had come to them out of a still more distant past.

After eight years as a 4-H club member, Charles Cowherd of Taylor county last month sold 15 registered gilts and other livestock.

O. C. Rankin, Nicholas county plans to raise 4,000 turkeys this year.

An electric bull pen has been built by Baker & Adams, of the Bullitt-Jefferson Dairy Association. An ordinary woven wire fence was used, with one or two electric wires used as lining.

WHAT DOES IT GET ME ?

American Milk World Leader

Science double checks as tests are constantly being applied to milk to protect its purity and safeguard quality for the home.

DISTRIBUTION of milk in this country has grown to a point where it far outstrips any other country in the world in volume and sanitary protection of its product.

When 30 million bottles of fresh milk are placed on the doorsteps of American homes every day this stupendous but unobtrusive daily service to consumers is so efficiently carried out as to be almost unbelievable to foreign milk experts.

Daily distribution of milk by trained organizations is a distinctively American development, says the Milk Industry Foundation, as few consumers in foreign lands have a dependable protected supply of milk delivered daily at their doorsteps.

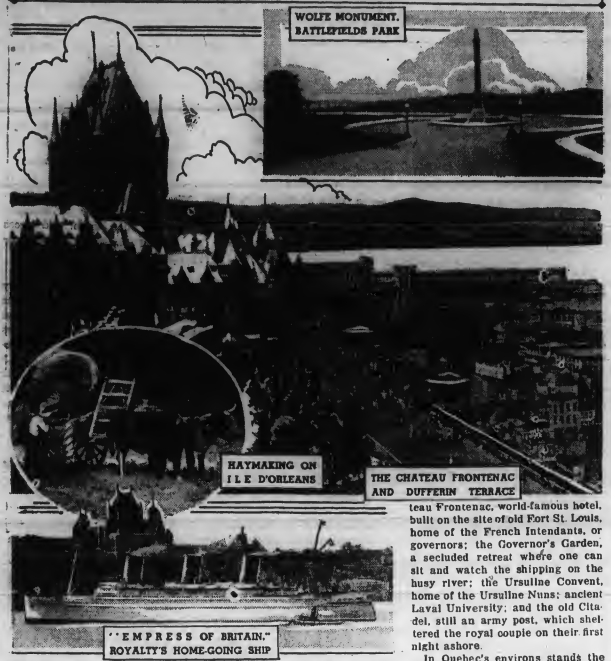
In most other countries milk distribution is generally an antiquated, although traditional, hit or miss affair. Dog carts, mules, hand tanks and other primitive means are used to make deliveries. As a rule milk is dipped from open containers in vessels supplied by the housewife.

The modern equipment of the American milk distributor is in direct contrast to most foreign methods. Here the distributor is trained in the handling and processing of a perishable food and also serves as a guardian of the community health.

Pasteurizing, bottle-washing, bottling, capping, refrigerating, testing, safeguarding butterfat content, inspecting farms and the myriad details of delivery equipment, all of which protect the milk, are almost unknown to foreign milkmen.

4-H CLUBBER'S PAY WITH STRAWBERRIES

Members of Kiwanis clubs at Middlesboro and Pineville this spring recived payment for strawberry plants which they distributed among Bell county 4-H club members a year ago. Their reward came in the form of gallons of big, red berries. Thru the aid of the Kiwanians, hundreds of farms in Bell county this year produced strawberries for home use and also to sell.



At Hazard, Perry county 4-H club members who received plants last year from the Hazard Plaindealer and business men, made a large strawberry exhibit, and then distributd 50 gallons of Berries among the sponsors of the strawberry project. More than 100 farm boys and girls in the county were helped to start growing.

Royal Visit Sharpens Interest in Old Quebec, America's Only Walled City, Famed in History

THE recent landing of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England at old Quebec, the first time a reigning monarch has visited North America, has sharpened the general interest in one of North America's most interesting cities.

Perched atop Cape Diamond four hundred feet above the broad St. Lawrence with the blue haze of the Laurentian Mountains in the background, Quebec, with her ramparts, Norman gables and 16th century French atmosphere, is unique among cities. The stranger within her venerable gates (incidentally Quebec is the only walled city in the New World) could literally spend weeks in exploring this city and its environs. History and custom confront him at every turn.

In the city itself are ancient churches, such as little Notre Dame des Victoires in the old French quarter, built to commemorate the defeat of one British fleet and the sinking of another, both sent to capture Quebec in 1690 and 1711, the Plains of Abraham where in 1759 Generals Wolfe and Montcalm fought the engagement which ended French dominance in North America; The Chateau Frontenac, world-famous hotel, built on the site of old Fort St. Louis, home of the French Intendants, or governors; the Governor's Garden, a secluded retreat where one can sit and watch the shipping on the busy river; the Ursuline Convent, home of the Ursuline Nuns; ancient Laval University; and the old Citadel, still an army post, which sheltered the royal couple on their first night ashore.

In Quebec's environs stands the Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, noted for its healing miracles. Golfers try their skill on the sporty 18 hole course at Montmorency Falls, which are higher than Niagara, while those interested in antiquity cross the river and visit the sleepy little Ile d'Orleans, untouched by modernism through centuries. The quiet countryside, which remains as French as Normandy itself, can best be studied on a leisurely motor trip or, better still, from a slow-moving horse-drawn caleche whose French-Canadian driver is a model guide and commentator.

ORDINANCE NO. 159

An ordinance fixing the several tax levies of the town of Walton, Kentucky, for the year 1939.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE TOWN OF WALTON DO ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. That an advalorem tax of 49 cents on each one hundred dollars' worth of property subject to taxation by the town of Walton (except unmanufactured agricultural products, and shares of stock of State Banks and Trust Companies incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth) is hereby levied for the use of the general expense fund of the town of Walton for the year 1939.

With The Reds

Cincinnati—Ray Blades will lead his dashing St. Louis Cardinals to bbattle against the Reds in a night game at Crosley Field, Thursday, closing a two-game series that was to start with a ladies' day game on Wednesday.

Before the game a spectacular track meet will be run off. Glenn Cunningham, greatest miler in the country, will race in his favorite even against Wayne Rideou, recen winner of the Princeton Invitation meet, and Tom Deckard, former Indiana University cinder star. In addition to the mile race, there will be a 100-yard dash, a walking race, and a discus throw. There will also be a display of fireworks.

Following an off day Friday the Chicago Cubs will come to Crosley Field for single games Saturday and Sunday. The Cubs have entered into the thick of the National League pennant chase and have an extremely aggressive gang of ball players.

After Sunday's t fit, the Reds will depart for their third inspection of the East. Seven members of the club will appear in the All-Star game at Yankee Stadium, New York, July 11. This group of satellites includes catcher Ernie Lombardi; pitchers Johnny Vander Meer, Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters; first baseman Frank McMcCormick; second baseman Linus Frey and outfielder Ival Goodman. No other team is the league was agle to place more than five men on the "dream club." Lombardi, McCormick and Derringer were unanimous selections.

Aren't you glad you're a Kentuckian?

Of course you've experienced the thrill, when you visit outside the State, of having people "look up to you" because you're from Kentucky!... And of course you're proud to be "from Kentucky"!... But do you know as much as you should about the things and places and people that have made Kentucky famous?... This summer, see Kentucky! If by any chance you come to Louisville, we'll be proud to welcome you at "The Brown". But Louisville or no Louisville—see Kentucky!

The Brown Hotel is deeply indebted to Mr. Karl Smith of Louisville for his kind permission to reproduce, here, his famous historical map of Kentucky. . . . If you have not seen at least most of your native State—isn't this summer a good time to start?

Nation's "Cosmopolitan Girl" Chosen By Famed Judges

MISSISSIPPI LASS PICKED BY FAITH BALDWIN, BRADSHAW CRANDELL AND OTHERS

A SEVEN-MONTHS' search for America's most Cosmopolitan girl has been completed by a distinguished group of judges.

Isabel Caldwell McDougal, eighteen years old, a slim figure of lovelinss out of the deep South, from Greenwood, Mississippi, has been chosen "Miss Cosmopolitan." She is a "dark" blonde, has fair skin and blue eyes, is five feet three inches tall and weighs one hundred and six pounds, and is as modern as tomorrow's dawn.

Isabel rides horseback, drives a car and swims. But more than anything else, she likes to dance. The rhythm of her movements, the grace of her body, the tremendous vitality and zest for life she possesses, all have their roots in her love of music. She plays the clarinet, the piano and the saxophone, and was a member of the school band. This year, Isabel is a freshman at the Mississippi State College for Women.

"She hasn't an atom of beauty but she's as pretty as spring in the South," writes Faith Baldwin, one of the judges, in the July Cosmopolitan magazine. "She has vitality and animation; the world is fresh and new to her and she likes it and likes being alive, and she is as friendly as a kitten without claws. She has a certain pixie charm hard to define. She reminds me a little of Helen Hayes."

ISABEL McDOUGAL

Like the composite Cosmopolitan girl, drawn from the 48 state winners, Isabel is a member of a small family, her parents are living, and her father is a businessman. But the composite girl is older by two years, stands five feet six, weighs one hundred and twenty, and has golden-brown hair.

For a girl of eighteen, Isabel has an unusually practical turn of mind. Although she has her heart set on becoming an actress, she is taking a secretarial course at college—not only to have something "to fall back on," but also to be the means of supporting herself while preparing for the stage.

Asked to name the qualities she looks for in her friends, Isabel answered quickly, "Loyalty and fairness." Petty jealousy is foreign to her nature, which explains why she is equally popular with girls as with boys. Speaking of boys, Isabel has a raft of them, but she's particularly fond of one young chap, an athlete she met a couple of years ago down South during spring training. He's a Northerner, hailing from Brooklyn, New York. Isabel laughs lightly when the question of marriage is raised. "There's lots of time," she evades.

So this is Isabel Caldwell McDougal, who has it all or most all ahead of her, who is the Cosmopolitan Girl, representing American girlhood at its best and its most hopeful. At eighteen, she stands as a symbol. She has the courage, the equipment, the high ambitions never to let herself and her kind down.

San Francisco Is Proud Of Its Name; So Don't Dare Call It Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, to Max Miller, noted "waterfront" writer, is something more than just a city of thousands of people engaged in the standard pursuits of trade and happiness. It is a drama, a philosophy which has stood a definite test of time and holds a magical interest for him.

San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge—"Man's Greatest Arch Over Space"—and Treasure Island, Site of the Fair, in the Background

"I shall be sorry the day I learn the answer why I like San Francisco," Mr. Miller confides in his article, "Don't Call It Frisco" in the April Good Housekeeping. "The moment I should learn the answer—from that moment on San Francisco no longer will be the place it is for me."

But one suspects that of all the landmarks in the city, it is the bridges that come closest to supplying the answer. The bridges fascinate him. Take them away and San Francisco ceases to be for him.

"Some day, of course," he sentimentalizes, "the Golden Gate bridge will be obsolete and ancient, and your grandsons will laugh at the bygone times when it meant so much and when so much ado was made about it. But when you are on that bridge today, in our generation, you do not laugh. You cannot laugh. The simplicity of man's greatest arch over space is too much for even fools to be foolish about while going across."

San Francisco has a permanency about it, a true history, a lasting heritage that have never been endangered by periodic rises and falls in real estate. A building or a home or a store in San Francisco has a defined and permanent value and is used for what it was made. Natives take the permanency of their city seriously, and do not point out how "years ago I could have bought such and such a lot for so much and look at it now."

Getting down to the title of the article, Mr. Miller says it is a breach of rightness to call the city "Frisco." Natives resent it and with stern face will correct the speaker. The visitor invariably fumbles around for a moment, then remarks brightly, "But in Los Angeles the Los Angeles people themselves think nothing of calling it 'L.A.'"

And invariably the answer comes back: "But there are no Los Angeles people."

Visitors to the World's Fair—don't call it Frisco.

'You're Fired!' 'No, I Quit!' Household Help Terrific Problem to Housewives

ASIDE from the problems of stretching the exchequer to meet the monthly bills and of raising Junior to stalwart young manhood, there is nothing more baffling to the American housewife today than the question of household employment. From three to six times a year—that's how often she changes help, on the average—she throws up her hands in despair and wails: "Aren't there any more good maids? Why is it so difficult to find a decent houseworker? And why can't I hold onto her once I've found her?"

The problem is of such magnitude that it has been known to cause minor revolutions in the family. The story of how hubby finally summoned up enough courage to ask the boss to dinner and then discovered to his horror the maid and cook had both quit thirty minutes earlier, is a familiar one. Of course, the little wife, standing around helplessly, never suspected for a moment the fault might have been entirely hers. But usually the fault lies somewhere between these two diverging forces: the employer and employee are both to blame.

How gargantuan the headache is, becomes more apparent when we realize that, of the 10,000,000 working women in the country, over 2,000,000 are engaged in domestic employment — certainly the largest body of working women in the country. The whole difficulty boils down to this: skilled houseworkers are hard to find because so few of them have had any specific training for the job.

In the March issue of Good Housekeeping, Selma Robinson, noted writer, analyzes the problem from both viewpoints. She pleads for better cooperation between employer and employee and urges the need of specific job training. First of all, we must erase the stigma from domestic work and make of it something honorable and dignified. In many foreign countries, Denmark in particular, well-educated girls adopt domestic work as a vocation; but in America only destitute widows and victims of the depression take up the work out of necessity.

What can be done to benefit both parties? The only benefit the employer can receive, of course, is more competent help, the reason Miss Robinson deplores the fact that our public-school system lags so far behind in teaching household employment as a bona-fide vocation. The government, through the W. P. A., it is true, has established a Household Workers' Training Program with classes in nearly 100 cities. But what happens when the government leaves off? That's a question only schools and women's clubs can answer. It should be their job to take over, and, further, work for the expansion of the system. The Milwaukee Vocational School is an outstanding example of free vocational training in housekeeping. Junior girls, even though they enroll for industrial training, must take two years of homemaking.

As for benefitting the employee, Miss Robinson calls upon our lawmakers for a little assistance. She recommends that the wage-and-hour law be applied to domestic labor as well as to the other industries; and that they be covered by unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation. Some of the States, Washington, Wisconsin, Connecticut, New Jersey and New York, have legalized at least one of these measures, but the rest have remained dolefully impotent.

And, Miss Robinson concludes, how about scuttling the words "servant" or "maid" and substituting something more expressive of the skill and responsibility of the position?

R. M. BAGBY OPENS CAMPAIGN

R. M. Bagby of Grayson, Carter County, candidate for the Democratic Nomination for Lieutenant Governor is the son of the late Captain James T. Bagby, owner of the steamboat, "Fannie Dugan" which used to ply the waters of the Ohio river.

He was born on a farm in Greenup County and from these his father moved his family to Grayson, where R. M., at the age of 6 received his first experience in the business field by selling newspapers.

Mr. Bagby later entered into commercial circles in Grayson by establishing a drug store and mercantile business. In 1920 he became interested in lumber and organized the Bagby Lumber Co. His commercial methods have always borne the closest investigation and scrutiny and his well formulated plans, his determination and courage have carried him steadily forward.

In addition, he is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Commercial Bank of Grayson, Publisher of the Sandy Valley Enquirer and operates farms in Carter and Woodford counties.

He is active in the Methodist Church, and has long been a member of the Board of Stewards of that church.

Fatemnaly he is a Mason and was recently made Charter President of the Grayson Rotary Club. His interest in political affairs has led him to give active support to the Democratic party, having on numerous occasions been campaign manager for Carter county. He usually attends all State Conventions as a delegate and was a delegate to the National Convention in Chicago and Philadelphia.

He is an ardent advocate and supporter of the Public School System having served as a member of the Grayson Board of Education for over 20 years and it was largely through his efforts as Chairman of that board for 15 years that one of the best high school systems in the State was developed.

He is a man of exceptionally pleasing personality and of unusual business ability and he knows that every citizen is interested in clean politics and good government. And he favors legislation which is beneficial to those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow.

Mr. Bagby, when elected will use every effort to continue his outstanding career by giving to the people of Kentucky a successful administration.

Mr. Bagby will address the voters of Kentucky, Friday, July 7th at 6:45 Central Standard Time over WHAS.

In Carroll conty, where corn of the hybrid variety increased yields 10 to 30 percent, 200 bshels were planted this year. County Agent Clyde Watts says this is at least four times the amount used any previous year.

It's a good bargain to trade 14 acres for 3 1-2 acres under certain carcumstances, thinks B. C. Rose, Madison county farmer. He heavily phosphated a field seeded to alfalfa —a 3 1-2 acre field that gave him more hay than a 14-acre tract untreated.

SUMMER BRINGS MILDEW PROBLEMS

Watch for mildew during warm, muggy spells in summertime, when the relative humidity is above 60. Mildew may appear in a few hours on clothing in closets, on shower curtains and other household textiles or an flours, furniture, leather bags or shoes, which are poorly ventilated. It may appear also in badly lighted locations, or if a damp house closed up for a while.

If fabrics must be stored, put them in a dry place. Articles in trunks in the cellar often mildew because the cellar is commonly damp or poorly ventilated.

Mildew is a fungus growth, explain home demonstration experts at the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Characteristic mildew spots are gray, green, yellow or black. They may vary in size from a pin point to a cent. Once in the fibers of a fabric, mildewed stains are next to impossible to get oct. Cotton is more susceptible than woolen goods.

On leather bags or shoes, a growth of mildew can be brushed off if found promptly, and the article can be washed. Cloth bindings of books contain 50 percent or more of starch and gum and are a favorable place for milde fungi to flourish. A coat of clear lacquer on the covers and back will protect book covers from mildew and also from roaches and waterbugs.

When several articles start mildewing, the whole house probably needs to be thoroughly dried out and aired. Even in summertime a good remedy is to run the heating plant for a few hours, leaving the windows open for air circulation. Floors and Woodwork may need wiping with a damp cloth containing a little kerosene.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

After 250 farmers attended a fat lamb show in Madison county, 500 sheep were requested for immediate buying.

To study child welfare, an unusually large number of homemakers recently enrolled in projects in Hart county.

"Are There Any Questions"

This information service on education is brought to you by special arrangement with Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City. Questions on education may be submitted through this newspaper.

Question:

"What are the fugures on the groth of adult aducation since 1929? Do many ofthe unemployed take advantage of the facilities for adult education?"

REPLY:

Enrollment in adult education activities has greatly increased since the depression began in 1929. Many things contributed to this, such as enforced idleness, the difficulty of obtaining jobs without training, the realization of many people of their needs for additional education.

Morever, with the great number of unemployed teachers there was the problem of giving them sultable occupation. Adult education became a major concern ofthe Federal Government, and unemployed teahers, at times as many as 50,000 have been engaged in serving the educational and cultural needs of the adult population.

According to a necessarily rough tion for Adult Educationthere were estimate by the American Associain the years before 1929 about 15,-0000,000 people formally enrolled with varios public and private organizations for adult education. In 1934 there were 22,511,000 in 1938 some 27,083,0000. Of these 2,500000 are unemployed.

A systematic account of adult education, including its history, its present status and some predictions as to its future development is given by Mr. Lyman Bryson in his book ADULT EDUCATION (American Book Co., 1939).

Question:

"What was the school population in 1938?"

REPLY:

According to Government estimates the enrollment in September 1938 was approximately 22,400,000 for kindergarten and elementary schools; 6,750,000 for high schools; 1,360000 for colleges. These figures include private as well as public schools.

Question:

"What are I. Q.- Tests? Whta are they supposed to indicate about the intelligence of the person tested?"

Bakelite Plastics Exhibited at World's Fair

THE dramatic story of Bakelite plastics and how they are making life more enjoyable in a thousand and one ways will be dramatically portrayed in the Hall of Industrial Science at the New York World's Fair by Bakelite Corporation. The public will see at first hand how plastics are made, as automatic presses turn out molded souvenirs by the hundreds.

Visitors moving from one to another of the dramatized booths and demonstrations will become aware, probably to the surprise of many, that more often than not they eat, drink, groom and dress themselves, decorate their homes, cook their meals, drive their automobiles, fly, listen to their radios, and do countless other things—all in some measure by the grace of these magic, man-made plastics. Illustrations show: 1. A few of the twenty-two animated booths. 2. The household appliances booth takes the housewife around the clock to show how important Bakelite materials are in the manufacture of all sorts of home appliances. 3. Plastics play a vital role in radiotransmission, transmitting and receiving equipment. 4. A visitor presses the button to find out where the distributor head, one of 200 plastic parts in the modern automobile, is located.

Fish and Game

Dick Davis who operates Gwinn Island float and camp on Herrington Lake told about two blackbirds—which had become pets around his camp — robbing fishermen of their quite tame and would take dead bait.

He said that the birds had become minnows and craws out of the bait boxes at the camp and had even gotten to the point where they would take live bait.

On June 1, the re-opening of the fishing season in Kentucky, Dick, along with several freinds was standing on the float watching the anglers in action out on the lake. About fifty feet from the float a fisherman was busily engaged in enticing fish to his hook. He was alone in the boat and had moved to the front while his minnows and craws were located in the back end in an open can. The two blackbirds proceeded to eat all of the bait while the anglers' interest was centered on his fishing activities and when he came to the back of the boat to re-bait the blackbirds had left (with all his bait safely stored away in their stomachs.)

The camps on the lake sell all types of bait and of course the man who had had his bait stolen by the birds had to pull in at the Davis float and buy more bait. Some of the fellows said that they thought Dick Davis had trained the blackbirds to rob fishermen of their bait so that he would get to sell them more bait. At any rate his two feathered friends seem to have gone in business with him.

The re-opening of fishing in Kentucky on June 1 was a complete success throughout the state, according to reports receicetved by Major Parnes Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish.

Fishing in Herrington Lake was the best since the formation of the huge body of water in 1925. There were not as many people on the lake the opening day as had been noted in past years, due to anexcess of rain but more fish were caught than on any previous day during the 14 year history of the lake.

Last year's opening day, after the closed season which lasted throughout the month of May, was a flat failure. Only a few fish were caught then, and many anglers had their fingers crossed then first they wet their lines this opening day. Eithr the finny tribes of Herrington Lake have increased to an astonishing degree in the past year, or wheather conditions were ideal this June 1, becaise everybody seemed to be catching fish.

One party of twelve fishermen, angling near Gwinn's Island, caught 96 bass having a total of 175 pounds. A trio of fishermen from Stanford caught 29 bass with a total weight of 80 pounds. The two above mentioned figures were not picked because they were unusual as everyone on the lake was catching fish and many nice strings were taken away almost before the usual breakfast hour on June 1.

Showers were general over the state but reports coming in to Division headquarters here show that good fishing was being had by all.

By cooperating with the Division of Game and Fish in its conserva ting as has just been witnessed could become a permanent fixture in Kentucky instead of just once in a while.

The Jefferson County Sportsmen's Club, with Al Blum as president, is making rapid progress in the field of propagation of wildlife.

The club has a quail farm, located at the Standard Oil refinery grounds and this rearing farm has a capacity of raising 300 birds, in twelve pens. Quite a few quail already have been hatched there, and here are between 300 and 400 additional quail eggs being incubated under hens on property of various club members. All quail hatched are to be carried over until the spring of 1940 and then released in nearby counties where good cover and feed are to be found.

The quail farm also is a game farm as a coon and five cubs, son to be released, are being kept there. The club also has a setting of twenty-four chukkar partridge eggs being hatched.

Th club recently held a stag outing on the Ohio river which produced fifty-two new members and netted the club approximately $500 profit. The money is to be used for financing various club conservation projects. Membership of this organization now numbers over the 1,000 mark.

The organization is 100 percent behind the program of the Kentucky Division of Game and Fish and thru their interest and hard work they are not only helping the Division in its work bbut are also making for better fishing and hunting in and around Jefferson County as well as promoting better fellowship and sportsmanship among the people of that section.

To The Voters Of Grant and Boone Counties

Because of the many inquiries that have come to me from all over this District concerning the probable market value of the fine tobacco crop now growing in our counties, and because I realize from personal experiences, the heavy investment that every tobacco raiser puts into his crop in time, money, labor and worry I feel that I should state to the citizens of this District my attitude regarding the solution of our common problem.

As tobacco growers we have all experienced the inequality of delivering the same quality of tobacco to different markets and see one crop sell four or five cents higher per pound than the other crop. This practice has descredited the tobacco production industry so that instead of being a legitimate business, it has become to a certain extent a speculation and a gamble.

As tobacco growers, we all know that the manufacturers of our product have throughout the period of depressed prices, realized more profits than at any time in the history of the industry, and during this same period, we have taken what we were offered and received in explanation—first, that there was too much of the common grade and next, that there was too much of the better grade, so that the tobacco of which we had the fewer pounds brought relatively the best prices.

We all realize that the grower has not received just pay for his investment and the risk he assumed Some of the outstanding citizens of Grant and Boone counties, have been advocating for years a program that should be incorporated into the laws of the State of Kentucky, to require the Loose Leaf Markets to have qualified graders, approved by a State and Federal Board, and under no obligation to the manufacurer or warehouse men who would receive our tobacco in the market, grade it and receipt us for the niumber of pounds of each grade delivered. Then to require the tobacco to be sold in quantity lots of each grade, and pay each farmer the average price per pound for each particular grade sold.

We believe, as do our friends and neighbors, that this is a just, fair and reasonable plan for guaranteeing to each grower an honest and fair price for his tobacco crop, according to its quality and we favor it with our whole heart, and shall make every effort to have it enacted into the laws of the State of Kentucky.

As we all know, the Federal Government is now furnishing qualified graders who determine the quality of tobacco delivered, but in the absence of a State law requireing the tobacco to be sold in bulk grades the growers must stand by and see crops of the same quality bid in with a price differential that is almost sickening in themselves.

With industry highly mechanized and with the mutual dependence necessary in all branches of business, I firmly believe that cooperation among the farmers is vital and necessary in order to bring them a fair share of the good things of life, and so long as I am permitted to act, either in private or public affairs, it is my desire to work to that end. When I ask you for your vote you have a right to require of me to know where I stand and in what I believe, and I am trying to express to you, in my own poor way, my attitude on the problems, that are so vital to us all.

I am, your friend,

JOHN S. JUETT.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Do you remember when the annual Sunday School picnic was the big event in your life as a boy or when you became a gallant young man and the ladies, both old and young, attended in plain, nicely starched calico, looking their best. Some wore gingham or white dresses that reached their shoe tops and their beautiful long hair was plaited down their backs, held together with a nice blue or red ribbon.

Mothers, fathers, big sisters and brothers and Sunday School teachers would go along as chaperons with well filled dinner baskets all for a good day's fun to a picnic-ground by boats on the river or canal.

One of the greatest thrills of my life was going to a Sunday School picnic on a canal boat. Other ways were hay-rides or horse dran busses or special trains. My story is about a railroad Sunday School picnic on the old C. H. & D. R. R. starting at the Sixth and Baymiller depot with Sunday School passengers, stopping at Fairmount, Northside and Winton Place taking on passengers all bound for Woods-Dale Island beyond Hamilton, which was a great distance in those days. Not being able to go on the early train, I went on the noon train. On my arrivel at the picnic ground I was told my wife had been hit in the head by a baseball, knocked by a batter, I rushed to her as quickly as possible. She lay on a stretc her with a great crowd around her. Some of he good ladies were loosening her clothes. One pulled off her shoes. In fact she said to me upon my arrival, "It looks as if they ere trying to strip me. If they will let me alone and give me some air I think I will be alright."

I asked them to give her a chance to get air. Some of them wanted to give her whiskey. She flatly refused to take it and I said let her alone and let her have her own way. Then they said "If you will not let us do anything for her and insist on letting her hav eher own way, we cannot help her." I said to them; "I find this the best way to get along with a wife."

True Independence

WHEN Paul said (Acts 22: 28), "I was free born," he spoke of his freedom as a Roman citizen—freedom that was his because of his father's citizenship. But, although the great Christian warrior valued highly the heritage of liberty that was his right as a Roman citizen, he knew well that genuine freedom is not a matter of race, color, or creed, but of individual spiritual living and demonstration of the power of God in human affairs. He said in Romans (8:21), "The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

Materiality is bondage. Spiritual freedom is won in individual experience by putting off the old or carnal concept of man, and putting on the new or spiritual idea of man and the universe. Jesus reasoned with Nicodemus on the problem of spiritual independence when the ruler of the Jews came to him by night in a questioning attitude. The Master said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus revealed his materialmindedness in the query, "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?" Then Jesus replied, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:3, 4, 5).

Jesus was speaking of the new birth, the salvation of mankind through spiritual living. The aim of the Nazarene's glorious ministry was to prove for all time that spiritual regeneration is a present possibility; All can, and indeed eventually must, overcome any belief in man as material. A material concept of existence, manifested in sin, sickness, poverty, death, gives place to the truth of being, accepted and utilized.

The world is greatly in need of enlightenment as to what constitutes genuine freedom. Independence is not so much a condition of environment as of thought. When Paul and Silas were in prison, bound with chains, they sang songs of praise to God. Their thoughts were not bound, although bands held them and prison walls were around them. Nothing could deprive them of their true freedom—their rejoicing in God's goodness. The natural result of their conscious spiritual freedom was release from prison. . . .

The belief that man is material, that he lives in matter and finally dies out of matter, is a blinding, limiting belief. It is not the truth of being. The real man is the reflection of God, Spirit; he lives and moves in Infinite Mind. Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 475), "Man is Idea, the image, of Love; he is not physique." Continuing, she says: "Man is incapable of sin, sickness, and death. The real man cannot depart from holiness, nor can God, by whom man is evolved, engender the capacity or freedom to sin."

Until the individual begins to see man's spiritual freedom, he is in a state of mental bondage; but the dark experiences of sin, sickness, poverty, and despair yield to the understanding that the real man is spiritual and perfect—the image and likeness of God. Besides stating a great spiritual fact, the Master gave an arresting command in these words (Matthew 5:48), "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." . . .

Obedience to human law brings freedom in experience, as is readily seen. Traffic signals, for example, give freedom by their very restraints. So do other necessary laws of restraint provide freedom to those who observe them. Restrictions of law seem binding to the undisciplined; but a mistaken sense of freedom sought through self-will may bring about destruction. There is no freedom in the exercise of passion, in self-indulgence, in fear. The moral code, understood and obeyed, is the best guarantee of individual and universal liberty, the basis of true democracy.

The need for universal liberty is growing in the hearts of men. Divine Love has planted the seed therein, and each obedient, grateful thought aids the growth. As this growth is nurtured, human laws will become better and be more generally obeyed, and mankind will finally accept the Master's summary of the moral code as their chart of life. They will love God and keep His commandments, and they will love their neighbor as themselves. Speaking of freedom, under the marginal topic "Proper self-government," Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 106): "Like our nation, Christian Science has its Declaration of Independence. God has endowed man with inalienable rights, among which are self-government, reason, and conscience. Man is properly self-governed only when he is guided rightly and governed by his Maker, divine Truth and Love." — The Christian Science Monitor.

PATTERN PICTURES

Long shadows, with the sun as a ready-made spotlight—and the potted flower is twice as interesting. Don't overlook the pattern in the floor grooves.

PATTERNS make fascinating pictures, and they are all around you—shadow patterns, ornamental ironwork, window grilles, railings, wheels, stacks of lumber, piles of drain tile—even groups of people in a formal arrangement.

Include a definite pattern in your pictures, and they will have an unusual, "different" quality.

When you go to the beach look for patterns in sand ripples and the shadows cast by beach grass. Climb a high bank or diving tower, and shoot down on your crowd when they are sunning themselves in a circle or formal arrangement like the spokes of a wheel which gives pattern interest to the picture.

Take pictures of scenes through things, such as ornamental ironwork. The outlines form patterns which make the scenes more interesting. Picture a tennis player through the net or racket—or let him hold the racket so that the sun casts an interesting criss-cross shadow pattern on his face.

Out in the country, try picturing scenes through wheels of farm equipment—for instance, "frame" a landscape through the tall wheel of a hay rake. The spokes and rim of the wheel give pattern interest. In town, picture shadow patterns on a brick sidewalk or street. The shadows give one kind of pattern interest, and the pattern of the paving adds another.

When a new house is going up—before the roof and weatherboarding are put on—there are pattern chances in the framing and roof timbers. Get inside, poin the camera upward, and picture workmen on the roof. Look for pictures, too, in the steelwork of bridges and trestles, and in the criss-cross patterns of wires and cross-beams at the top of telephone poles.

It's fun to hunt patterns, and they add new interest to your pictures. Keep your eye open for them, and snap any that look good.

BOB & GENE'S DOWN PEPSI-COLA'S

Bob and Gene's scored another victory Sunday over Pepsi-Cola. It was a very exciting game throughout. The score was tied one-all until the 8th inning when Bob Williams came through with a timely double scoring Rags Ryle with the winning run. Mutt Rogers made a sensational play at third base thereby saving the day for Bob and Gene, keeping the score at 2 to 1.

Williams, R. Bradburn and R. Ryle each came through with two hits each. The battery was Elmo Steffeno and Rags Ryle for Bob & Gene, and Roy James and Bitzer for the Colas. Steffens hurled a very nice game for the winners, retiring nine men on strikes and allowing but seven scattered hits. Eleven bingles were collected off James.

Next Sunday the elimination series starts. Manager Bob Eads tells us that he doesn't know who he will play until after the drawing on Wednesday night, but whoever it is it is sure to be a hard fought game. The game will be played at Crescent Springs ball park.

PICTURE PROJECTOR FOR H'WAY PATROL

Safety educational work of the Ky. Highway Patrol in charge of Major W. H. Hansen was augumented recently by the use of a motion picture projector which was donated to Major Hansen and his staff by the Kentucky Association of Insurance Agents.

The educational activities of the patrol in the past have been restricted to vrbal messages before school and civic groups throughout the state.

It is thought that the projector and sound equipment will be the means of presenting to the citizens of Kentucky a visual education in safety which will go far in creating a greater safety consciousness that will assist in the reduction of motor vehicle accidents.

Among the officers of the Insurance Agents Association who attended the presentation, was Orville Noel of Covington.

Any school or civic group desiring to hold safety meetings and see the safety pictures are urged to contact Major Hansen at his department in Frankfort, or Orville Noel, Covington.

Carrier Routes Readjusted

The Post Office Department is requireing the Village Carrier routes to be readjusted to what is known as a two trip carrier route. In order to do this it is necessary for the carrier to report to work one hour later. This is going to prevent the mail from being sorted as soon as it has been here-to-fore. We will be gad to look through all of the mail for anything with time importance, but if the patrons, who receive mail by village carrier, will not call at window for their mail, unless it is necessary, it will be appreciated by us and will enable us to sort the rest of the mail. There is a regulation preventing patrons from receiving their mail through the window when it is supposed to be delivered by the carrier, but when you have some mail that is important for you to receive at once, we will be only too glad to accommodate you.—Walton Post Office

TRUCK TURNS OVER

Sunday evening a truck belonging to the Owens Trucking Company, which hauls produce and milk for the Kroger Groceries, turned over near Maple Tree Tavern, south of Walton. The driver, whose name we were unable to learn, was uninjured, but the impact broke off a light pole belonging to the Community Public Service Co.

The load was transferred to another truck and continued on its way.

DO NOT KEEP GAME ANIMALS AND BIRDS FOR PETS

Frankfort, Ky., July 11—A warning was issued today by Major Jas. Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish against the keeping of game animals and birds in captivity as pets.

Each year the Conservation Officers of the Division find it necessary to pick up and release game animals and birds which have been captured as young and kept for pets.

"The holding of such animals and birds taken from the wild is contrary to Kentucky game regulations, as well as being against the best interests of the wildlife. Mortality in game animals and birds kept in confinement is usually high and the animals and birds will do much better if allowed to remain in their normal wild habitat," Major Brown stated.

NEW MANAGER AT WALTONIAN HOTEL

Mrs. Lillian V. Sadler, who has had nine years experience, is the new manager of the Waltonian Hotel. In 1930 she was in charge of the "Old Glory Tavern" in Williamstown, and has had charge of the "Silver Dinner Bell" in Sherman for the past five years. She comes highly recommended. Mrs. Sadler expects to open the hotel dining room on a commercial plan.

We welcome she and her family to Walton.

REA ALLOTMENT EXPECTED IN TWO WEEKS

The Boone, Kenton and Campbell County REA Allotment for the construction of approximately 220 miles of line will be made in the next two weeks according to Washington representative in a confreence of the County Agents and the manager of the Owen County Association at Independence on last Thursday, July 6th.

The REA representative advised the project was ready for approval and plans for construction of lines could be made a short time after receiving the allotment. He further advised that the funds of the new fiscal year would allow for considerable extensions of the proposed lines and recommended that thes additional lines be worked up as soon as posible after construction of the proposed lines is under way.

There are 376 Boone County farmers signed up for electricity, on the proposed 119 miles of line. Membership applications have been signed on approximately 50 more miles of line but sufficient number of applications to average 3 per mile were not available when the present project was submitted.

Clean Up Your Own Front Yard First, Advises Van Loon

"The only way in which we can ever hope to bring about a happier state of human affairs is by doing so first of all within our own bailiwick," Hendrik Willem van Loon, genial philosopher-historian, cautions would-be reformers in the current Rotarian Magazine.

"Our present world is nothing to be proud of," he admits, "and is sadly in need of a complete overhauling." But how best to change this gloomy picture?

In answering this question Van Loon asks that he not be suspected of any undue optimism. "Both by nature and by training," he explains, "I am rather a follower of the doctrine which holds out mighty small hope for the future of the human race. But if I am entirely honest with myself, then I must confess that, given just one percent of one percent of a chance, the average man is not quite so bad as we sometimes depict him in all his sorrowful cussedness and greed. And I have discovered that on the whole he will function best of all if we appeal to his sense of duty as a good neighbor, rather than if we go after him with Acts of Congress or orders issued by the board of selectmen.

"These are necessary, too for the more serious aspect of life, and Heaven forbid that we should try (for the next few million years at least) to do without the policemen on the beat. But for all ordinary everyday efforts to make our world a little pleasanter and a little more livable, I would prefer to rely upon individual action rather than upon any sort of mass action.

"If," he continues, "you want to reduce the particular point of view in which I see some hope to a short and eloquent sentence which might well become a world-wide slogan, suppose I give it to you:

"If each one of us will take care of his own particular front yard then we shall have a pleasant village in which to live, and a world full of pleasant villages would I think, be a pretty decent one for most everybody."

Don't Blame the Banks

The charge that there is inadequate bank credit at a time when the banks are overflowing with capital, has puzzled many a thoughtful citizen. And the easiest thing to do is to call the bankers a crew of hard-hearted shylocks and accuse them of turning deaf ears to worthy applications for loans.

The truth of the matter, as Senator Barbour of New Jersey, recently pointed out, is that federal financing and spending are the main factors at fault. The banks have been virtually forced to invest their surplus accounts in government securities. They are, in the Senator's word "helpless."

There are, Senator Barbour continued, two possible solutions. One is for the government to go whole-hog into the banking business, and thus subject the people's money to the changing whim of politics. The other is for the government to "quit borrowing and live within its means. The machinery of credit is well organized, well protected, except for federal interference with its proper functions, and able to serve the country adequately if released from the grip of its addiction to public lending for which the government itself is responsible."

No bank wants to refuse a loan—after all, loans keep banking alive, and build the community presperity that is an essential corollay of bank property. But a government policy which virtually forces billions of capital into government securities is hardly a stimulant to lending for private, productive purposes. Furthermore, the banker's first responsibility is to his depositors—his own tried judgment, to say nothing of the law, compels him to insist on the highest conceivable standards of safety when he makes a loan. As the Chairman of the Board of the National City Bank has said, "The idea that the way to prosperity is to make it easy for people to get into debt does not stand the test of experience."

You can blame the bankers all you like—but the fact remains that a large volume of private loans can be made only under a government policy that is encouraging to individual activity, instead of a policy that puts the government more and more into competition with its private citizens.—Industrial News Review.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

An exchange has a Fifteen Years Ago column, and it recalls that on June 29, 1924, New York-to-San Francisco air mail service was to "begin immediately." The total time between the two cities was to be 34 hours, 45 minutes, which sounds today like a "slow train through Arkansas." But there have been many other changes since this date in June, fifteen years ago. Then it was that Calvin Coolidge was President of the United States, about to be nominated for a full term by acclamation and triumphantly re-elected. The country was emerging rapidly from the post-war deflation, and the foundations were being laid for the Coolidge-Mellon boom, in which the nation thought that the canny Yankee in the White House exercised some sort of wizardry over affairs, and that all it had to do was to "keep cool with Coolidge." The Madison Square Garden Convention was being held, producing the famous deadlock between Gov. Smith and William G. McAdoo, resulting in the choice of neither, but John W. Davis. All three are still alive, though largely past the stage of active participation in politics. William J. Fields was Governor of Kentucky, the State's two U. S. Senatorss were Ernst and Stanley and the Dixie Highway was just being built through Hardin county. What a whale of a difference just a few years make!

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

If John Public has a comfortable feeling because the Congress rejected a suggestion that the tax base be broadened, it is a comfort that is likely to be short-lived.

On the surface, the Congressional vote on the tax bill might be interpreted to indicate that Congress has put the Indian sign on any scheme to collect more taxes. That, of course, does lend comfort to the tax-paying Mr. Public, but is one goes below the surface and catches a glimpse of the dilemma behind the stage-door, there is plenty there to disturb that feeling of comfort.

Here is he dilemma:

Almost everyone on Capitol Hill will admit—at least privately—that the day of reckoning is at hand, or not far off. They know the bill for the spending orgy of the last few years is coming due. They know the only way that bill can be paid is through more taxes. They know the only source from which more taxes can be colected is the middle and lower income brackets, because the higher-brackets are already staggered by an unprecedented burden. And they know that next year is election year!

The dilemma is practically perplexing for those members who came to Congress only last year. They had none of the fun of spending, but must now share equally the problem of paying the check.

What to do about it was the question they faced in the new tax bill. Specifically, the proposal they finally voted down would have increased the tax rate on the middle income group, and lowered the income tax exemption so that low income groups now escaping a direct taxation would have to pay a tax.

Significant is the fact that the proposal was defeated in the Senate by a one vote margin, meaning that there was almost a majority in favor of facing the music now, instead of later.

A recent survey has caused considerable comment at the Capitol. It was submintted as part of the testimony of a witness appearing before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor which is studying amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

What that survey showed was simply that John Public does not believe the National Labor Relations Act or the board which administers it has contributed much to the country's industrial relations.

In the survey, the public was asked what it thought responsible for the reduction in the number of strikes from 1937 to 1938. Only 10.5 percent thought the reduction in the number of strikes was due to legislation and the government's attitude. The largest percentage thought there were fewer strikes in 1938 because there was a public resentment against sit-down strikes.

The fight over the labor act amendment, incidentally, produced what rates the "crack of the week." It was during questioning of Labor Board Chairman Madden by Representative Barden, quick-thinking North Carolina Democrat. Chairman Madden had pointed out that the Labor Board had won more cases in court than it had lost. To this, the North Carolinian shot back:

"Let me remind the chairman that justice in the United States is not dispensed on a percentage basis."

A few weeks ago official Washington was receiving instructions from a certain well-educated economist with a flair for language. This word-wizzard was convincing everyone concerned that the economic failure of the past few years were largely mental: that if you used the right words to describe them, they weren't so bad after all.

Thus, he explained, if witnesses appearing before committees called the debt an "investment," it left a good taste in everyone's mouth, and there was no damage done.

Business-men caught on quickly to the new game, and it was one of this group who had the "last word" on the subject. "Profits?" he asked innocently. "Oh, just call them 'preparation for future taxes!'"

Since the publication of that remark in the papers, nothing more has been heard from the Washington word-wizzard.

CIDER-MAKING

Cider-making is not a passing institution, though it may have changed much in recent years. I have had at least an apprenticeship in the art as it was practiced in the earlier years of the century; hence my nerve in attacking the subject today.

There were two kinds of mills: a small hand mill that was fairly easy to operate and a large mill that was turned by horse power, much as the crusher of a sorghum mill is worked. In the same way there were two kinds of presses: small ones for the hand mill and large ones for the power mill. My experience was almost entirely with the small mill, where I was the power and the brains combined.

Apples are necessary, as you might imagine. Since good apples can be dried or canned or "pied," it will be necessary for us to choose inferior ones. If you are fastidious, you had better not follow me to the orchard, for I may pick up apples that you would reject. Apples with a rotten place may yet have some juice that the mill will find out. After we have gathered the windfalls and probably given the trees a few shakes gratis, we are ready to start the work. A tub is filled with water to wash the apples. Incidentally, of you swish the apples around a few times, playing-like you are washing them, and then dump them into the hopper at once before they can drain, you will have more cider. Older people did not approve of this, but few of them remained throughout the whole season of cider-making to give us the benefit of their long and sage experience.

When the presses begin to run and the odor of "pummies" gets out into the orchard and the garden, whole troops of flies, gnats, yellow jackets, wasps, bees and such like arrive for the duration of the season. Do not be too unkind with the stinging ones, for they will stoutly maintain their rights to the cider you are making. From experience I know how sharply a yellow jacket can sting, even on the nose or lips. Since there is enough for the insects and for you, let them have their share.

In the intervals of turning the mill and running the screw down on the presses, strain up what you have made. A good-sized jar will do for this, but the ultimate container, if you are making cider for the farm, will be the large barrel where the cider will go all the way from innocent and insipid sweetness to vinegar with a wallop.

In the interval between sweet cider and vinegar comes the foreordained and predestinated use of cider with its pal and boon companion, gingerbread. Again I wish I were a poet to tell the virtues of this partnership. Good things go in pairs, as I have often said: turkey and cranberries, pancakes and syrup, cake and pickle, fish and tartar sauce, gingerbread and cider. Not the least of these partnerships is that of the last two that I have named.

LOUISVILLE TO SUPPORT HAGEMAN FOR LT. GOVERNOR

Covington, Ky. — As Theodore "Tate" Hageman of Crescent Springs in Kenton County, swung into the final month of his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, he was assured this week of strong support from high Democratic party leaders in Louisville and Jefferson county.

Assurance of that support came from Virgil P. Lynch, Louisville's City Alcoholic Beverage Administrator, who told Mr. Hageman in a letter to his Covington headquarters, "after careful consideration of all the Democratic candidates for Lieutenant Governor, we have decided to support you unanimously in the August primary."

URGES MOWING PASTURE WEEDS

An appeal for the mowing of weeds in pastures is made by Dr. E. N. Fergus of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. If not mowed, weeds may damage grass, and even crowd it out. he says, leaving bare spots to wash. If there are many weeds and a big growth, it may be necessary to rake them after they are mowed, in order that the young grass may grow properly. Also in some parts of the state bushes must be cut every year or they will materially injure the grass. Dr. Fergus also cautions against over-grazing of pastures, especially when there is insufficient rainfall.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A Louisville mother who had what Theodore Roosevelt called a real American family of 15 children, all ages and sizes, was taking them for a street car ride. The conductor gave them special attention in helping to get them on the street car and said to the lady: "Are all these your children or is it a picnic?"

She said, in a very postive way; they are all my children, and it is no picnic to take care of them."

The reminds us of a president of one of the leading colleges of Ohio telling in a lecture that his mother, a widow, and nine boys — a baseball team—and that they were raised poor in the hills of Oleremount County, Ohio to which he looked back with much pride, for the hills taught him how to climb.

The fits the experience of the Briar Hopper, as he was raised in the hills of Kentucky which taught him how to climb & not get discouraged.

The buyword of a Nation

Today it's the buy word of the nation.

Such is the power of an idea.

Richard W. Sears had a sixth sense. Instinctively he sensed the possibilities of mass manufacture and mass distribution—much as Franklin must have sensed the possibilities of electricity when he drew the lightning down from the sky with a kite string—or Watt must have foreseen the future of steam when his tea-kettle lid whistled.

He knew that mass operation meant tearing down the fence between the "haves" and the "have-nots", and throwing the good things of life open to all.

Mixed with his vision was faith. He knew that, if he gave the people better goods for less money, they wouldn't let him down.

Nor was the unspoken covenant of faith one-sided—to make the thing work, the public had to believe in Sears, just as devoutly as Sears believed in the public.

☆ ☆

Fifty-three years have rolled by since Dick Sears sold that first watch.

It was a good watch. It kept good time. And it cost far less than any equally good watch had ever cost.

Since then America has been setting its watch by Sears promise to give more and charge less.

And because that promise has never been violated, "Sears" has come to be

—the buy word of a nation

BRITISH KING SIGNS "ROYAL BOOK" AT N. Y. FAIR

The Saga of a Home-Made Trailer; Texas to the New York World's Fair

A Texas journalist built himself a trailer, loaded in his wife and 11-year-old son and started on a 2,000 mile trek for the New York World's Fair with $50.00 in his pockets. His experiences are recounted in the following story:

By TOM CAUFIELD

(who covers police, fire alarms, boll weevils and all news in and about the Brazos Bottoms of Central Texas for the Waco Times-Herald).

Here is Tom Caufield's homemade trailer in which he, his wife and son traveled all the way from Waco, Tex., to see New York World's Fair.

WORLD'S FAIR, New York — Frances and the eleven-year-old and I have been the Fair and all the folks back in Waco told us it couldn't be done on the Caufield bankroll. The speedometer on Ancient History II reads 2,000 miles from Fifth and Austin; the wallet is out $50, and we've got $10 left. I've just wired the boss for the $25 he promised me to get home on, and if the chewing gum and balling wire on the trailer and jaloppy don't relax their holds during the homeward 2,000 miles, we shall have made the whole junket on $85.

We spent a little over $1.50 each per day on the Fair itself, counting admission at the gates. Thomas, the eleven-year-old and Frances, the woman who tells me how to drive, and I walked and walked and looked and stared, finally becoming convinced that the best parts of the Fair are free. We could while away two weeks here looking at the free shows, and never repeat and never suffer from what the slick paper writers call ennui. We are leaving only because a wolf is howling at a door bearing the coat of arms of a certain small town newspaperman in Texas.

Nothing Like the Brazos

We stood and gulped when we saw the illumination at the lagoon of nations last night. Nothing like that along the Brazos, nor anywhere else.

Lightning bolt hit a telephone pole as our car-trailer combination pulled it on the road to Knoxville, [illegible] up. It smashed the post, splintered our car with splinters, made an outrageous noise, scared us stiff. We saw it all over again, free, at the General Electric show here. They made 16 million volts for us—BANG! and we thought we were back on the Tennessee highway in the storm.

We fought good roads and bad coming up. General Motors showed us all good in a panorama that 27,000 people a day look at. GM parked us in upholstered chairs, started a public address explanation from the chair arms, and showed us the highway system of 1960.

If it hadn't been for that roads system display, we might have thought, in the aviation building, that man was fixing to leave the ground for good; but GM gave us hope for the highways. We could hardly get the boy away from the aviation display. Instead of wanting to ride on the carnival gadgets, he wanted to go back and look at the model wind tunnels, the cross section of the Yankee clipper, and things like that.

Need for Adjectives

We heard the Voder. That's a contraption we had read about, a sort of talking typewriter. Pretty girl punches keys and make a combination of hisses and grunts that sounds like Charlie McCarthy at his worst, but is understandable.

I never was much on adjectives. The one adjective needed around here is "marvelous." Give me enough synonyms for that, insert them as needed, and that's the Fair.

There's a moving mural in the Ford building. Pistons, cogs, things like that fixed in the wall, all moving. Time for one of the synonyms. In the same building, walls hung all round with a one-piece yellow curtain made of spun and woven glass.

More free stuff; the City of Light, with 100,000 individual bulbs; the Forward March of America, showing how lighting has changed. They've got a fountain running over the exit of that building, and when I lost Frances and Thomas, by getting mixed up on a rendezvous, they waited an hour for me there, perfectly satisfied, while the fountain splashed outside.

They've got a real ship parked in a pond by the New England building. They've got life-sized toy monkeys climbing trees in a toy exhibit and real monkeys climbing on a rock inside the Frank Buck enclosure. The rock is higher than the bamboo walls, so you can see the monkeys without going in.

● Escalators and Ramps

About transportation; this fair is great on saving shoe leather. It has to be, it is so big that unless there were a lot of escalators and moving belts the cobblers would have a field day at every exit. You go up into the Perisphere on an escalator, and ride around it on a moving belt; and there's the moving belt at the GM building. Everywhere you find ramps instead of steps, and the ramps are exactly calculated to ease your legs as you go up or down. Streets and walks are asphalt, and the buildings generally have rubber composition flooring. And if you want to ride, it costs a dime for a bus from any point on the grounds to any other point.

If your feet do get tired (and they oughtn't to often if you've got the right kind of shoes, which is important, especially to the women) you can stop in at any of the first aid stations and get a free foot treatment to ease them.

Now for the Tariff

Let's count the cost, after you get to New York. Figure you're in a trailer—that's $1 to get over the George Washington Bridge, which is the best way for a trailer; 75 cents a night at the trailer camp; a few cents for milk and whatever other groceries you need for eating at the camp; 25 cents toll over Whitestone Bridge for your car (leave the trailer at camp) and 25 cents toll back again (or ride a bus, fare ten cents each); 50 cents to park in the parking grounds at the Fair; 75 cents admission for adults, 25 cents for children; 25 cents each for the Perisphere, which is a must because it is the Fair's symbol; 10 cents for the Town of Tomorrow, which also ought to be a must for any householder, and gas and oil.

We ate dinner at one of many restaurants in the Fair grounds. My wife had chicken and mushrooms with coffee for 60 cents. I ate a salisbury steak with coffee for 60 cents, and lamb chops for the boy cost 75 cents. For lunch we had hamburgers and pie, which ran us 30 cents each. It costs a nickel for pop or root beer at any of a dozen stands. We got to the Fair for lunch one day and had dinner there that night. We had breakfast in camp next day, lunch at the Fair and pulled out late that afternoon for home.

Seeing New York

You can see something of New York while you're at the Fair, for the mere cost of gasoline. The night we arrived, we took a 50-mile drive across town, along the Hendrik Hudson Parkway and back from the Battery up Broadway to Times Square, then back to camp. We had a volunteer guide —one of the officials at the camp.

The policemen go out of their way to help a visitor. One of them talked to us for a half hour about things in general while we waited for an open-top bus next morning for a sightseeing trip in Manhattan. In fact, any New Yorker goes out of his way to help a Fair visitor.

We felt so much at home that when we parked our car to catch a bus to the Fair on our first day's visit, we forgot to make a note of where we left it; just walked away from it like we would have done in our own home town. And believe it or not, we found it when we came back in the rain—with the help of some of the passengers on the bus.

Bear in mind that the cost of coming to New York depends on how you are willing to come. We had a camp trailer, slept in it, using a trailer camp once, a cabin one night during a pouring rain, using school grounds twice with the permission of rural neighbors, and parking three times at filling stations. It took us six days to get here.

That $85 is an education worth thousands, for a boy of 11, and worth plenty more for his father and mother.—Reprinted from the New York Herald-Tribune.

INDEPENDENCE

Mrs. Viola Bird, wife of Chester Bird of Latonia, who was so badly burned when the fluid exploded while she was cleaning garments, died Friday. Her funeral was held Monday morning from St. Cecilia church, here. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Hergott of Nicholson. Their friends sympathize with them in their sorrow.

TIELY TOPICS

Those two aristicratic dogs, "Mr. and Mr. Fritz Arko von Schneider," dachshunds owned by T. M. Bailey of Soulx Falls, S. D., who were listed in the social register somehow a few months ago, are in the news again. They are the parents of seven puppies—two male, five female.

Bill Mner, a filling station attendant of Vincennes Ind., reports the poorest customer of the season. She asked him to wipe off her windshield, inflate her tires, change the oil and put in five gallons of gas. But she carried her own gas and oil and only wanted service.

A German factory worker must work five times as long as an American to buy an automobile, and an Italian ten times as long.

Eight to 10 varieties of corn are being tried in tests by Utopia club members in Marion county.

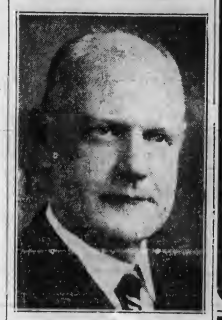
Approximately 100 mares in Whitley county foaled this year and 90 percent of the foals were mules.



406 FARMS CHECKED ACT BENEFITS

Two hundred and forty farms were checked by Agricultural Conservation Program field supervisors for 1939 benefits the past week according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. One hundred and sixty-six were checked he previous week, bringing the total to 406 farms to date.

The field checking is progressing rapidly with splendid cooperation being shown by farmers. The entire job of field checking is expected to be completed in about three weeks.

The largest benefits farmers will derive from the 1939 program are for the seedings of grass and legume crops, turning under of green manure crops and the use of limestone and phosphate. Orders are now being taken by the County office and field supervisors for the delivery of 47% TVA phosphate supplied by the Agricultural Conservation Program in lieu of cash payments for use on soil-conserving crops. Orders received during the next three weeks according to present information can be filled in the near future. Farmers anticipating use of phosphate this fall should order now.

BALANCED DIET OF PLANT FOOD NEEDED BY GROWING CROPS

CHICAGO.—Growing crops need a balanced diet of plant food from the soil, the same as human beings or livestock need a balanced ration in their foods, a bulletin issued by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee points out.

"If certain plant food elements are missing from the soil, growing crops will develop weaknesses and a susceptibility to diseases," the bulletin declares.

"For the best crop yields and the rehabilitation of the soil, a careful balance of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash is necessary. Some soils require more of one elementthan another. Crops likewise vary in their fertilizer needs."

What analysis of commercial fertilizer is best for a farmer to use and how much he should apply will depend on a number of factors. The best way of finding out is to consult the soils and agronomy department of the state college and agricultural stations. They have information readily available and are eager to cooperate.

New York Skyscrapers Form Back Drop For Air View of Fair

The picture shows the Fair's close proximity to Broadway and the skyscrapers of upper Manhattan. Actually the Fair is only 10 minutes from Broadway by Long Island Railroad, and about 25 minutes by subway. By motor the trip requires about 30 minutes, with 5 parking fields furnishing ample space.

RED SQUILL BAIT BEST RAT CONTROL

The open winter is one reason for the large number of rats now appearing in Kentucky, according to a statement from the entomology department of the State College of Agriculture at Lexington.

A poison bait employing red squill is the method of control recommended by this department, which gives the following directions for its use:

Pre-bait for three nights in succession, using fresh hamburger or salmon. Small bits of either of these are placed where rats are commonly found. This should be done in the evening. If there are any remaining pieces the next morning, they should be taken away and destroyed. On the fourth night, red squill at the rate of one part to 16 parts of the meat should be placed in th elocation where pre-baiting was practiced.

The red squill can be obtained at most drugstores. In mixing it with meat, avoid handling with the fingers, as the rats are very wary of anything handled in this manner.

Rat extermination, say men at the College of Agriculture, is a community problem because these varmints migrate over rather long distances. It is a good plan to organize by neighborhoods, with each one pledged to use poison bait at a given time.

As long as rats have other feed, such as may be found in garbage cans, the poison bait method of control is not so successful as it would be if the competing feeds were removed.

REAL AID FOR AGRICULTURE PROBLEMS

A logical aid to the solution of the problem of agricultural surplus, is increased consumer consumption. That such aid is practical and possible has been dramatially illustrated during the past two or three years, in the many consumer-producer campaigns conducted on behalf of "distressed" crops by tens of thousands of American retail stores.

The campaigns were inaugurated by the food chains. Afterwards organized independents joined in. So did variety, hardware, mail order stores and others.

Beef, lamb, fresh fruits, canned fruits, nuts, poultry, citrus fruits, beans, dairy products—these are but a few of the products on whose behalf, at the request of the farmers concerned, American retailing has gone to the bat. And in most cases it has knocked out home runs. In no case has it struck out. During the campaign periods, ranging in length from a few days to weeks, consumption has been greatly increased at prices fair to all involved.

Furthermore, it has been proven that these drives werer effective not only during the campaign time. Consumers discovered new appetites and learned the pleasure of more varied, better balanced meals. And they kept on buying.

When the farmer and the retailer get together, everyone, including the consumer, is benefitted.

UNEMPLOYED RECHIVE MONTHLY PAY CHECKS

Frankfort, Ky., July 12—Officials of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission today announced that checks, totalling more than $3,000,000, and representing payments to jobless workers under the Kentucky Unemployment Insurance Law, had been mailed from its office as of July 6.

The Commission first began the payment of jobless benefits February 1st.

Average payments to each worker have been $8.54 per week.

The balance in the Kentucky Unemployment Trust Fund as of July 6, stood at $21,573,596.19, it was announced.

"Had it not been for the enactment of the Kentucky Job Insurance law by the special session of the Legislature, Dec. 29, 1936, called by Gov. Chandler for that purpose, this entire amount, including payments already made to jobless workers, would have been lost to the unemployed workers of this state," V. E. Barnes, executive director of the Commission explained.

"Because of a provision in the Federal Social Security Act, the amount collected from employers would have gone into the general tax fund of the United States Treasury with no resulting benefits to Kentucky workers," Barnes added. "However, through enactment of the Kentucky act this amount was saved to Kentucky and its unemployed."

The Commission explained that payment of benefits were on a current basis and that each order card received was processed and check written within 24 hours after arrival of the pay order in the central office.

Cost of administration of the Kentucky Job Insurance Law by the Commission has been lower or as low as that of any similar state agency in the United States, Commission officials declared.

NATIONS TAKE INDUSTRIAL INVENTORY AS WAR CLOUDS LOOM OVER WORLD'S HORIZONS

OMINOUS war clouds make citizens shudder, military experts take inventory. Modern warfare is highly mechanized operation, fought by nations rather than armies. No longer is manpower adequate; nation-power is necessary.

Development of that power requires the organization of a nation's industries on a war-time basis. The machinery of agriculture, transportation and a hundred other industries producing war materials are as essential as weapons and ammunitions. War has been brought close to home and shop and for every soldier at the front from 10 to 100 workers must be employed to grow, manufacture and distribute war material.

Modern armies need guns, ammunition, food, plus an infinite list of manufactured equipment likely to tax the productive power of industry. So military experts take inventory, not only of manpower, but of the ability of industry to function in the service of supply, usually beginning even before the "M" day of mobilization.

Oil Defense Necessity

Mechanized armies, oil-burning navies, oil-fueled transportation, oil-fueled and lubricated manufacturing operations have tended to make oil essential, oil production almost the first line of defense.

Fortunately for the American people the American petroleum industry has given the United States virtually the only adequate domestic oil supply in the world. Also it has given this nation the means and the methods of increasing and prolonging this service of oil.

So far as oil is concerned the United States is far better prepared than in 1917. Today this country has nearly twice the number of producing oil wells, four times the annual production of crude oil and twice the number of refineries that were available for war service in 1917. Annual production of finished gasoline by American refineries is eight times as great as in 1917; lubricating oil production is double and fuel oil production is treble that of 1917.

Improvements Since 1917

Since 1917 the United States, virtually alone among the nations, has developed its petroleum industry through private enterprise. In that period the nation's oil reserves have been multiplied by three. Refining capacity has been multiplied by four and the gasoline recovered from each barrel of crude oil has been doubled in quantity, vastly improved in quality. Recent refining developments promise an even greater recovery of gasoline from crude oil and a higher octane, more powerful fuel.

Merchandising history has been made in the industry's development of a distribution system for petroleum products far surpassing that of 1917. The capacity of oil tankers flying the American flag has increased nineteenfold since World war days; the number of American tankers has been multiplied by nine. Three times the 1917 mileage of oil and gas pipelines, four times the tank trucks and three times the number of railroad tank cars owned or leased by the industry, serve America in peace and would be available for service in war.

Efficient Distribution

With such a vast maze of transportation and distribution arteries, with crude oil produced in 22 states, refineries in 35 states, local storage and marketing in all states it would be a potent enemy which could halt this industry's service of supply, even in war time.

Although they anticipated chiefly the progressive demands of peace, American refiners are now producing the world's only adequate supply of high-octane, fighting grade aviation fuel—a supply sufficient to keep in the air mammoth fleets of bombers and combat planes. This industry also produces the world's sole supply of helium, the non-inflammable gas used by the dirigible. Moreover, American oil men are now prepared to produce not only petroleum fuels and lubricants, but, when circumstances dictate, synthetic products ranging from food and clothing to the most powerful explosives known to man.

ENJOYING PICNIC LUNCH AT N. Y. WORLD'S FAIR

TH THE REDS

With the scorching National League pennant race approaching the halfway point, the Cincinnati Reds are about to embark on their third invasion of the Eastern half of the circuit. It promises to be an important journey, as thirteen games are scheduled for the jaunt.

The Reds will open at New York Thursday, meeting the Giants in three games in as many days at the Polo Grounds. On Sunday the club will shift to Boston for a double-header against the Bees. The Reds and Bees will also tangle in single games on July 17 and 18.

A night game with the Brooklyn Dodgers, with all the hysteria that accompanies such an event in Flatbush, is carded for July 19, and on July 21 the Reds will meet Leo Durocher's clan in a twin bill.

Last port of call will be Philadelphia, where the Reds are to appear in a single game on July 22, and a double-header the day following.

Upon returning to Crosley Field, the Reds will meet the Boston Bees in a night game on July 25. This game has been designated as "Shrine Night" and over 200 uniformed people will take part in the pre-game festivities.

We are so sorry to hear of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grass' youngest daughter being in a critical condition in Booth Hospital in Covington. May it be God's will that this little life be spared.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Owen county farmers are making plentiful use of phosphate this year, increasing by one-third last year's amount.

Conway Bros. of Carroll county sold 15 lambs for $12.25 per cwt., and with an average weight of 78 pounds at an early age.

Three demonstrations of contour rows of cotton and corn were staked in Hickman county last month, for J. L. Craig, E. C. Wayne, Sr. and William Shaw.

Eight to 10 varieties of corn are being tried in tests by Utopia club members in Marion county.

George B. Day of Spencer county sold 25 110-pound spring lambs for top market prices.

W. V. Tarter and C. J. Tarter of Russell county picked 200 crates per acre of strawberries by applying phosphate heavily to the land.

Ed Bartlow of Campbell county raised 308 chicks to eight weeks of age and lost three of the lot.

Approximately 100 mares in Whitley county foaled this year and 90 percent of the foals were mules.

Present Pullman Service Won Over Rail Heads

A STRANGE twist of fate saved the fortunes of George Mortimer Pullman, founder of the sleeping car, from collapse in 1864, when he brought out his famous "Pioneer," first modern sleeper, at a cost of $20,000. Railroad men admired the car, but shook their heads at the size and construction. "Too wide for station platforms, too high for bridges," they said.

Pullman fought to alter the platforms and bridges, but his was a losing fight. When all seemed lost, tragic fate intervened. President Lincoln was assassinated April 14, 1865. The President's remains were moved in state from Washington to Springfield and, as special homage to the Emancipator, Pullman's new car was used as part of the funeral train. Bridges and platforms, accordingly, were quickly altered; and the "Pioneer" received its dedication at the solemn pageant.

Overnight the "Pioneer" became celebrated, this car of 75 years ago that was to prove the inspiration for the sleepers of today—sleepers that are carrying travelers to both the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs, as well as to every other point on the nation's map.

As an incentive to visit the Fairs, the Pullman Company is conducting a contest for the naming of new Pullman cars. Fifty free round-trip tickets to either World's Fair will be awarded for the best names submitted. Names will be judged on the basis of originality, uniqueness and suitability. Entry blanks may be secured at any of the 21,000 ticket agencies throughout the country and Canada, or by writing to the Pullman Company, Chicago.

The "Pioneer," shortly after its participation in the funeral of President Lincoln, was put into service on the Chicago & Alton railroad. When General Grant decided to use it on his visit to his old home in Galena, other roads made the necessary alterations on bridges and platforms. This was the spur that Pullman needed; he proceeded to build more cars, to be owned jointly by himself and the railroads.

After thirty years as an industrial leader and philanthropist, Pullman died at Chicago, October 19, 1897. His largest bequest at the time of his death, was of $1,200,000, which established the Pullman Free School of Manual Training, with these purposes:

"That the children of those associated with him in the town of Pullman and its enterprises might be trained in the ideals of clean living, good citizenship and industrial efficiency, which were his own inspiration, and through which alone the workman might hope to attain his true development."

HOLD THAT TIGER!

NEW YORK (Special)—Here's one way to make a living in a profession that's never overcrowded. Captain Proske is literally putting his head in the tiger's mouth at Frank Buck's Jungleland at the New York World's Fair. The beast with the meal on the tip of her tongue is Lily, aged seven.

A MEMORIAL

Mrs. Jane Dickerson Chambers of Walton, Ky., completed a long, useful, beautiful life on earth, and entered into the More Abundant Life on June 14, 1939.

Mrs. Chambers was born August 23, 1846, at Union, Ky., and was for the most of her life a resident of Boone county.

Her husband, Robert Chambers, died ten years ago. Two sons and three daughters survive.

"None knew her but to love her, none named her but to praise."

Beautiful in person and lovely in character, her life was truly a benediction, and her sweet, gentle influence will ever be felt in the lives of those who knew her.

To her family, she was a most devoted and unselfish wife and mother, never tiring, to the last, in every possible ministration of love.

For her friends she had ever a deep interest and affection. Her charming, gracious hospitality will not be forgotten by those who visited her home. For those in distress or need she had a heart overflowing with sympathy, and to them she gave "what she could," — material aid if possible, but always a kind greeting, an attentive ear, an encouraging word.

Mrs. Chambers was blessed with good health, keen mental ability, and a zest for living throughout her long, active life, even receiving and enjoying visitors on the day of her death.

She was laid to rest in the cemetery of Richwood Presbyterian church, where for many years she had been a devoted member.

"O hands beloved, fragrant with kindly deeds
Through all life's ways!
Shall I not meet your pitying touch again
Some day of days?
It is a faith which life were poor without (Grace for dark hours)
That I shall find them beckoning me amid Eternal flowers."

BEAVER LICK

Rev. R. M. Baldwin announces a series of meetings at Hughes Chapel, beginning Monday night, July 10. Rev. W. B. Garriott of Erlanger will be the evangelist and Rev. Baldwin will have charge of the singing. Everyone is invited to attend these services.

Mrs. J. E. McCabe had for her house guests last week, Mrs. Mollie Cleek of Walton, Mrs. Clint Blankenbeker and Mrs. Emma Cleek of Florence. On Friday they were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jack and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Howe Cleek and family. On Saturday they visited Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sleet.

Robert Green had the misfortune to lose a valuable work horse last week due to the heat.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brown entertained on the evening of July 4, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Kite, Mr. and Mrs. Osmon Jack, Mrs. Harry Moore and son Bobby Moore, Bobby Hood and Jesse Brown. Nice refreshments of home-made ice cream and cake were served. The children had fireworks which they enjoyed greatly.

On Sunday, July 9, the descendants of the late Henry Underhill and wife gathered at the home of Mrs. Fannie Underhill Howard for a family reunion. All brought baskets well filled with all the good things of the season and to which all did ample justice at the noon hour. Attending this affair were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Henry and son Dudley of Louiville; Mrs. Lula Henry and Mrs. Nell Corley of Danville; Mrs. Florence Crouch of Somerset; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen and children Chester, Irene, Roscoe, Mary Alice and Wayne and Miss Mildred Lanning of Connersville, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Alva Wood and daughter Sara Belle of Big Bone; Emerson Afterkirk of Ft. AT THE JAMES

"Jaurez" with Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne and John Garfield, Friday and Saturday, July 14 and 15. Rising again from history's scarlet pages comes Jaurez whose flaming spirit freed a nation. In him men found liberty. In his story you will find the mightiest screen adventure of our time.

"Some Like It Hot" with Shirley Ross, Bob Hope, Gene Krupa and Orchestra and Una Merkle, Sunday, July 16. This picture comes to us, a light vehicle for the quick-lipped Bob Hope, the soft-spoken Shirley Ross and the drum-thumping Gene Krupa. It's comedy, and gets into the jitterbug subject, but not extensively.

"Boy Friend" with Jane Withers, Arleen Whelan and Richard Bond, Monday, July 17. Jane's gone romantic but in that madcap Withers way. It's just her luck to find her first 'crush' when she's helping smash New York's most dangerous crooks—but what good's a beau if he can't help you fight.

"Blackwell's Island" with John Garfield, Rosemary Lane and Stanley Fields, Tuesday, July 18. John Garfield blows the lid off Blackwell's Island, where convicts paid for the right to live—in jail. Tough guards enforced the racket—not the law.

"The Lady's From Kentucky," with George Raft, Ellen Drew, Zasu Pitts and Hugh Herbert, Wednesday, July 19. You will want to see this picture with the thrilling reproduction of the Kentucky Derby with the right horse winning.

"The Lady and The Mob," with Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman and Hery Armetta, Thursday, July 20. She hobnobs with mobsters—goes places with gorillas—takes tea with trigger men. You'll agree it's quite a crew to play with, slay with or go gay with—in the different laugh-packed action hit of the year.

DEARBORN COUNTY FAIR, LAWRENCEBURG, INDIANA

Never in the history of Dearborn County Fair has their been such prospects in all departments for one of the biggest and best fairs ever conducted by the Legion boys. "Louisville Will Go For Brown"

Gathering momentum as his campaign enters the final month, John Young Brown, candidate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, Wednesday was assured equal representation in Louisville on the election officers and challengers at the polls on election day.

At the same time Mrs. Lennie McLaughlin, number one political aid of the late M. J. Brennam, announced that "Louisville will go for Brown."

Mrs. McLaughlin, who last year was organization leader in Louisville for Senator Alben W. Barkley's successful primary fight, stated that a substantial majority of the city's 623 precincts this year would be under the direction of the same workers and precinct captains as last year. Brown's Louisville organization this year will be "about the same as Senator Barkley had last year," Mrs. McLaughlin stated.

Following Mrs. McLaughlin's statement, Jefferson County Judge Mark Beauchamp, who for many years headed the county workers for the Brennam organization, stated that Brown would have exactly the same organization in the County that gave Senator Barkley such a majority last year.

FIDELIS CLASS MEETS

The Fidelis Sunday School class of the Walton Baptist church was delightfully entertained with an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Soden on Walton-Nicholson road, Friday. Guests for the day were Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Brown, Mrs. S. W. Durr and Mrs. Clayton Percival. Others present were Mrs. Percival, Mrs. Ralph Stevens, Mrs. Earl Frakes, Miss Anne Frakes, Mrs. Bruce Allen, Mrs. John Lewis Fagan, Mrs. Joe Neumeister, Mrs. William Duchemin, Mrs. Dan Roberts, Mrs. William Breeden, Mrs. Elmer Breeden, Mrs. D. L. Maddox, Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Helen Graff, Mrs. Bryan Rector, Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, Patty Johnson, Margaret and Annabel Percival, Charles and Gayle Roberts, David Neumeister, Bobby Stevens, Jack, Jill and Judy Fagan, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Soden, Bill, Harold, Mildred and Paul Soden.

R. L. VINCENT TO SPEAK IN WALTON

R. L. Vincent, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth Attorney, will address the voters of Walton on Thursday, July 27 at 7:30 p. m.

Mr. Vincent will have with him a sound truck and special music. He desires to meet the citizens of Walton and let them hear what he has to say.

The time and place of other speaking dates of Mr. Vincent, in Boone county, will be found on page 5, this issue.

JENKINS-RACE

Harold Raymond Race and Miss Mildred Louise Jenkins of Falmouth, were united in marriage at 4 o'clock at the residence of Rev. A. K. Johnson of South Main street.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jenkins.

Rev. Johnson was the pastor of their church before moving to Walton.

HOMEMAKERS PLAN FOR ANNUAL MEETING

The program for the Boone county Homemaker's Annual Meeting will be planned by the Advisory Council at a meeting next Monday, July 24th.

The president of each local club with the county project chairmen will attend the meeting held at the courthouse, Burlington, according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent. Mrs. Sam Sleet, county president, will preside.

Plans for the Homemaker's educational exhibit at the 4-H and the Utopia Fair will be discussed. Miss Lulie Logan, Assistant State Leader of Home Demonstration Agents, will announce the date for Boone county's annual meeting.

Progressive Dinner Friday, July 28th

The Happy Helpers class of the Walton Methodist church is sponsoring a Progressive dinner on Friday evening, July 28th. Reservations should be made by July 21st, and the price of the dinner is to be 35 cents.

Hickory Grove Church to Reopen

The Hickory Grove Baptist church of Nicholson, which has been closed for the past six weeks due to construction of a new highway, which passes in front of the church, will reopen on Sunday, July 23. The highway is not completed but can be traveled.

Time of services Sunday are as follows: Sunday School 10 a. m.; Morning Worship 11 a. m.; and Evening Services at 7:45 p. m. All times given are Eastern Standard.

Rev. T. C. Crume is pastor of the Hickory Grove church, and all are cordially invited to worship at this church.

FIRE DEPARTMENT TO SPONSOR PICNIC

The second annual picnic sponsored by the Independence and Community Volunteer Fire Department will be held on the Independence Courthouse lawn on Friday and Saturday, July 21 and 22, according to Russell Sweeney, general chairman.

A feature of the picnic will be a German Village in addition to many other special attractions added to this year's program. Dancing and refreshments are scheduled for both evenings.

Funds derived from the picnic will be used to defray the expense of purchase of equipment for the fire department.

JUETT HEARD HERE SATURDAY AFTERNOON

John Juett of Williamstown, Democratic candidate for State Representative from Boone and Grant counties, addressed the voters here Saturday afternoon.

It was not generally known that Mr. Juett would speak here at that time, but a fair sized audience gathered to hear him.

AT THE JAMES

"You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" with W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, Friday and Saturday, July 21 and 22. The three greatest clowns of the screen—in a moving story with a bit of heartbreak behind every laugh. You're heard them on the air—now see them on the screen.

"The Gracie Allen Murder Case" with Gracie Allen, Warren William, Ellen Drew and Kent Taylor, Sunday, July 23. Take it from Gracie its a crime the way people go around killing other people—the cops grab Gracie and Gracie cops the laughs — as she and Philo Vance match wits and half-wits with a clueless killer.

"The Jones Family in Hollywood" with Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Ken Howell and George Ernest, Monday, July 24. The movies' first family makes merry in Hollywood—and what a time they have. Jack gets tangled up with romance, Rogers tries to lick the whole movie colony, Lucy takes a screen test and Dad takes an asprin.

"Silver on the Sage" with William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden and Ruth Rogers, Tuesday, July 25. Another rip-roaring round-up of Cassidy thrills. The outlaws want him on their side—the law wants his buddies for murder. Which will he choose?

"Prison Without Bars" with Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best, Barry Barnes and Mary Morris, Wednesday, July 26. A romantic melodrama of a trio housed in a seminary for wayward young women.

"The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt" with Warren William, Ida Lupino, Rita Hayworth, Virginia Weidler and Ralph Morgan, Thursday, July 27. A foreign cigarette his calling card—a beautiful blonde his accomplice—a rifled safe his love letter—the gayest of all Banditti is battling a spy ring now.

"Only Angels Have Wings" with Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, and Thos. Mitchell, Friday and Saturday, July 28 and 29. The year's most magnificent drama of love in far places thunders to its heart-stabbing climax.

SALEM MEETING WELL ATTENDED

The all day meeting at the Salem church was well attended. Rev. Charles Mangold preached in the morning from the 53rd chapter of Isiah. Three interesting and inspiring messages were delivered in the afternoon by Rev. Martin Aylor, Rev. R. F. DeMoisey and Rev. T. C. Crume, Jr.

Many beautiful hymns were rendered by a male quartet from the Elsmere Baptist church.

The next meeting will be August 20th, at 11 a. m. (Central Time). It is hoped that more will take notice and be present.—Chas. Mangold.

CHRISTIAN LADIES AID

Mrs. M. E. Peace entertained at her home on North Main street for the Ladies Aid society of the Walton Christian church. Those enjoying the day were Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Ervin, Mrs. George Fisher, Mrs. Ora Fry, Miss Alicia Neumeister, Mrs. Irene Bush, Miss Ora Violett Bush, Mrs. Lula Huey, Mrs. Olivia Wills, Mrs. Mattie Moore, Mrs. Robert G. Moore and Mrs. Harris Moore.

Farmers Giving Pastures A Rest

Many farmers of Boone, Kenton and Gallatin counties who are following soil conserving recommendations of the Soil Conservation Service staff will be able to give their permanent bluegrass pastures a rest during the dry summer months and thus improve their erosion control program.

Pastures, Mr. Darnell points out, need a rest, just like human beings, especially during mid-summer dry weather. From mid-July to early September summer pasture production usually falls off due to lack of moisture. If overgrazed at such times pastures may become eroded. Many farmers during this period use a timothy, alfalfa and clover meadow for supplementary pasture. They report that it will provide excellent grazing after a first cutting of hay has been made.

By early September these farmers can return their stock to the bluegrass pastures because they usually will again be in production due to fall rains.

Use of meadow for supplementary pasture cuts down on expensive summer grain feeding and keeps up milk and beef production as well, Mr. Darnell says.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS VISITED ON TOURS

Two hundred and sixteen 4-H club members were visited in five community club tours held the past two weeks according to H. B. Drake, Assistant County Agent. Project work and record books were inspected by members and leaders on each of these tours. One hundred nineteen farm project members and 97 home project members were visited on the above tours. One hundred and five of the farm project members were found to have their work up-to-date. Fourteen members were dropped from the club rolls for failing to meet project requirements.

Grant True Blue 4-H club held one of the most successful tours during the past week. Sixteen members were present for the starting of the tour. All 27 members were visited during the day. Each project was up-to-date and all members are planning to make project exhibits at the county fair on August 26.

Clubs holding tours the past two weeks were Verona, Florence, Taylorsport, Grant and Burlington. Clubs to hold project tours this week and next are Hebron, July 18; Hamilton, July 19; Walton, July 20; Petersburg, July 21; and New Haven, July 25. Club members and leaders will meet at the school at 9 a. m. Each project will be visited during the day. A picnic lunch and meeting will be held at the noon hour.

Walton CCC Youths Injured In Crash

Three youths, members of the Walton CCC camp, were injured early Saturday evening, when the car in which they were riding plunged into a ditch on Fowler Creek road near Independence.

The injured were Telford Mershon, 19, of Piner, Urban Gunning, 19, and John Bender, 19, both of near Independence. At St Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, they were treated for their injuries. Mershon for fracture of ribs and pelvis, and Gunning and Bender for face and head cuts and bruises.

Independence police were unable to learn the cause of the accident.

Verona Meets Pepsi-Colas, Sunday

The Verona base ball team will be hosts to the Pepsi-Cola nine at the Verona lot Sunday afternoon, July 23. This will be the second game in the elimination series and will get under way at 2 o'clock, Central Time. McClure will do the chucking for the home team with Parnell doing the back-stopping.

This will, no doubt, be a close and hard fought game, so plan to be around about 2 p. m., Sunday.

The Verona lads won their first game in the series Sunday afternoon by defeating the Question Marks 4 to 3 in a nip-and-tuck fray that was high-lighted by a first inning home run by Manager Vest, who incidentally had 3 for 4 for the day.

LIMESTONE, PHOSPHATE MAKE GRASS MORE PALATABLE

Livestock show a decided preference for grass grown on land that has been phosphated and limed on the Frank Rouse farm north of Burlington, according to H. B. Drake, Assistant County Agent. Mr. Rouse has a pasture that was treated with lime and phosphate in 1938. Small plots were left without treatment. The entire field has a good stand of lespedeza that has been pastured all year. Grass on the treated plots has a darker green color and is grazed much shorter than the untreated plots. This field was phosphated and limed in cooperation with the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Boone County Extension Service.

Mr. Rouse's experience confirms the observation made by several authorities over the State that livestock prefer grass from land that has been phosphated and limed. There are evidently certain minerals in grass grown on land thus treated that makes the grass more palatable as well as more beneficial to all classes of livestock.

HAIL HITS ERLANGER

A hailstorm of short duration siagled out Erlanger, Tuesday afternoon, striking that community but passing other neighboring cities. No damage was caused by the hail, it was reported.

REVIVAL AT INDEPENDENCE

A series of revival meetings will be held by Rev. Shirley Spahr, pastor, at the Independence Baptist church, from July 30 to August 13, every evening, with the exception of Saturday, at 8 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hughes will have charge of the singing and music. Mr. Hughes leading the singing and Mrs. Hughes playing the vibraharp.

The Bible study hour for the Junior Department will be conducted at 7:30 each evening by Mrs. Hughes.

The public is cordially invited to attend these meetings.

Baptist Missionary Society

The Missionary society of the Walton Baptist church will hold their all day meeting with Mrs. John Noell on Thursday. All members are urged to be present.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS

Willie Champlin

Willie Champlin, 47, passed away Friday, July 14 at his home on the Burlington and Idlewild road, after a two weeks illness from intestinal influenza.

Mr. Champlin was a farmer and a member of the Baptist church. He is survived by his widow Mrs. Ila Hodges Champlin, six daughters, three sons, two grandchildren, one brother and a number of other relatives and friends who mourn his passing.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m. from the Bullittsburg Baptist church, by the Rev. Drake. Interment followed in the Bullittsburg cemetery.

Chambers & Grubbs of Walton, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Plan To Organize Northern Kentucky D. H. I. Ass'n

Plans are under way for the organization of a Northern Kentucky Dairy Herd Improvement Association beginning either November 1 or February 1, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The association will be composed of 25 or 26 members who employ a full time tester under the supervision of the College to weigh and test each cow's milk and feed one day each month and to record herd breeding records. The dairymen in turn will use these records as a basis for feeding, breeding and the building up of a more efficient herd.

Boone county at the present time has three outstanding dairymen, who are D. H. I. A. members and who have bred and developed outstanding purebred herds. They are Robert Youell of Ludlow, Route 2, R. B. Huey and Son of Burlington, Route 1, and Jess Wilson of Verona. They hold membership in the Boone-Shelby-Carroll County Association. Several more Boone county dairmen have requested membership, but this association has maintained full membership and there has been very little possibility for new members in recent years.

The proposed new association will give Boone county possibilities of approximately 12 herds with a trained tester giving his full time to dairy herd improvement in three counties. Dairymen desiring membership in the new association should contact the County Agent's office immediately.

HAPPY HELPERS ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wallace of South Main street entertained last Tuesday evening for the July meeting of the Happy Helpers class of the Walton Methodist church. Those present were Rev. R. R. FUSSING ABOUT UNDESIRABLES

Yes the United States has lots of undesirable people. There are Communists, Fascists, Nazis, spies, opinionated youths, and watchman and policemen in industrial plants. There are also strikers, picketers, drunken drivers and many other extraordinary varieties of men and women. Harry Bridges is a thorn in the side of the American Merchant Marine but why it is necessary to attempt to prove he's a Communist when he says he is not is just a funny notion. The Communists have a national political party, and we put them on the ticket and their weakness is exposed on election day.

In the olden days the 'reds" had different names from the way we designate them today. Some of their "dangerous doctrines" are popular political theories of the present age.

In a country as big as ours there are people who believe in every sort of thing which is the reason there are over 300 kinds of Orthodox churches several hundred varieties of radio program, several thousand different ways of helping the poor, and innumerable games, and ways to gamble, including new chain-letter schemes.

So—keep your shirt on! Our population is all right it just gets noisey and obstreperous at times, but the "desirables" keep an overwhelming majority. Besides most people are trying to find out what is wrong in our country, for the very good reason that they want to help straighten things out. American voters turn wrongs into rights, and all we have ever had to do was to give them time.

That is the story of human progress from the beginning and the American system is now on the march.—National Industries News Service

The Candidacy of Hecht Lackey

Hecht Lackey's announcement as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky is very interesting to this newspaper for two reasons: He is a Paducahan, and he is of the type of young man we like to see aspire for political office.

Although a young man, he has been active in civic, social and political affairs of Paducah for many years, and has made substantial contributions to each. He has dignified the several enterprises in which he has engaged, and by his unassuming manner has won for himself many friends.

We say that we are interested in his candidacy because he is a Paducahan for the reason that all other things being equal we would like to see a citizen of this community in an important office of the state goverment. By thatwe do not infer that we are selfishly interested in securing for Paducah anything to which it is not entitled, and we do not believe that any Paducahan of the character of Hecht Lackey would permit himself to be used in that way.

As the largesst city in all Western Kentucky, Pahucah's interests are bound up with the interests of all Western Kentucky. Our welfare is dependent upon the well-being of all the district. What is good for West Kentucky is good for us, and by the same line of reasoning we believe that what what is good for Paducah, good for West Kentucky.

However we do not taKe the position that just any Paducahan, or just any citizen of West Kentucky, should be recommended for a position of honor and importance in the state goverment. This newspaper believes that no government is better than the men who, as public officials, are placed at the helm of government and control its destinies.

Having known Hecht Lackey for a good number of years, we are confident that his makeup includes those fundamental characterises essential in a man before the people can be assured that he will be a good public official.

We are not entirely familiar with all the candidates for Lieutenant-Governor who will offer themselves before the people in the August primary election. Furthermore, we do not know the details of the platform upon which Mr. Lackey bases his candidacy. But we do know that Paducah and West Kentucky need not make any apologies for the first candidate for Lieutenant-Governor who has presented himself from this section.—Paducah Sun-Democrat.

CIDER-MAKING

CHURCH-DOOR JOHNNY

Earlier in this series I spoke of the formality of sending notes or of making dates through a friend. I remember that there was another type, a sort of makeshift for bashful boys who hardly knew how or what to write or who sadly lacked the nickle to give the boy who delivered the note and waited for its answer. This method was to stand just outside the church, preferably in the evening, and take a girl's arm as she came out with her parents or with other girls. This deaf-and-dumb method was quite effective in its way, though frowned on by the more staid and dignified ones of our neighborhood. The most embarrassing thing was to seize a girl's arm and start walking away into the darkness, only to realize that some other fellow had her other arm. Always one or the other grew faint-hearted and gave up the struggle, the blushing young woman remaining neutral.

This practice was particularly suited to the small village or compact neighborhood, where many people came to gatherings on foot. It would have been unthinkable to follow a girl out to her father's wagon and ride home with her. To the wagon was as far as any regular fellow could go. But how attractive it was to walk home, even long with the family, under the stars and the moon, the moon so famous in popular songs then and now!

I cannot recall whether the girl thus sought out ever rebelled; hence the practice must have been a kind of freemasonry that the elders did not understand. Maybe the young swain looked across the church and said more in his bashful look than he could have said in formal notes. Anyway, the girl aquiesced in a system that seems a little too crude today, and she seemed to enjoy being thus sought after.

Not all boys were bold enough to seize or capture a young lady as she emerged from church. Older boys would shove them just as some girl came by, causing both boy and girl to blush to the roots of their hair. I have known boys who seemed to have accidentally walked into the church with the girl as she was trailing her family; very rarely he had the nerve to sit with her after he had followed her in. From painful experience I know that when he had done this, the best defense when the boys teased him was to remain silent; for his words were passed on from mouth to mouth when he aid anything.

Growing up is hard work, and I am afraid that the youngsters do not get enough sympathy while they are engaged in such toil. In our time the older people seem hardly the ogres they once were, and, besides, the opportunity for the boys & girls to be together is much easier than formerly. Since life is pitched on a more nearly normal scale today, it seems odd that one still finds the shy boy who can hardly get into society.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

If the Administration's new $3,800,000,000 lending-spending program fails to get Congressional approval before adjournment, it will be because the star in the cast didn't let the supporting cast in on the rehearsals. The supporting cast here is the Congress.

What happened is that the Administration had the program quietly drafted by Brain Trusters Carcran and Cohen, and neither of them consulted Congressional leaders. In fact, the Congressional group was not even informed the bill was being written. So it was that the newspapermen covering the White House knew all the details of the new program before Vice-President Garner, Speaker Bankhead or House Majority Leader Rayburn knew such a program existed.

So well did the drafters corcran and Cohen think of their program for spending nearly four billion more dollars that they wrote it into a formal bill of more than 100 pages. When this was dumped in the laps of the Congressional leaders the yelping could be heard on all sides of the Capitol.

The upshot was that the Capitol leaders refused to introduce the bill. They pointedly told the Brain Trusters that they had made too many unpardonable mistakes in the past—and that apparently some of the past mistakes were being revived and put into the new bill.

First, they pointed out, the emphasis should have been placed on "lending" instead of "spending" in the bill; second, the farmers would not be enthusiastic about toll roads and bridges (nothing would bring the tax question closer to the farmer than to have to reach for his pocketbook while on the way to town with chickens, eggs, butter, etc.); third the superhighways would simply provide better roads for trucks and thereby put the already staggering railroads out of business; and fourth, the Capitol crowd said they just couldn't see any "sexappeal" in the new scheme.

There was even a suggestion from the White House that the new spending scheme be attached as a "rider" to the relief bill. This, the Brain Trust advisory corps reasoned, would assure its passage because the relief bill was certain to pass. To this, the Congressional leaders let out another yelp. They warned that the relief bill itself was loaded with political dynamite, and the spending bill should be left to stand on its own feet. That was done and now it appears that there will be more furor than legislation on the spend-lend subject—all because the supporting cast was not let in on the signals.

Incidentally, Congress is considering creating a "brain trust" of its own to "protect Congress from the other brain trust." A bill now on its way to enactment, would give each leader a research assistant. The assistant would be given the job of analyzing and condensing bills and committee testimony. Reason is that legislative proposals coming from "the other brain trust" are often full of "bugs." As a result, Congressional leaders complain, legislation is sometimes passed with "bugs" that return to plague them. The National Labor Relations Act is one example of a particularly annoying plague right now.

Kind words about a businessman are so seldom heard around Washington that a word of praise in that direction is newsworthy. It is significant, too, because it indicates a new trend of thought—that the businessman isn't such a bad guy as he's portrayed and that it is about time to get him out of the dog house. That trend is detected now in Congress, where, several times recently, there have been kind words for business and stares at the administration accusers. Here is the latest to emanate from the Capitol. It is part of a report drafted by a special Senate Committee which has been studying profit-sharing methods in industry:

"In the midst of a tendency generally to condemn private business as selfish and reactionary and unsympathetic, the committee takes pleasure in pointing to the accompanying record as proving that there has been a vast voluntary experimentation with various types of profit-sharing which demonstrates the existence of widespread socialmindedness in American business, and this fact deserves the emphasis we give to it."

A LIVE WIRE BRIAR HOPPER

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

When I see so many people on the street begging it reminds me of my good friend Cleil Coleman, who has a crippled hand but is fortunate enough not to se sensative about it.

When he was a salesman at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards he was walking down Vine street leisurely one day when a fellow approached him saying: "Mister, would you help a fellow by giving him a quarter?" In those days a beggar would not think, you were helping him if you gave him less than a quarter. Cleil, always ready to meet any emergency, took in the situation in a second, rolled up his sleeve showing the beggar his crippled hand and said to him: "Brother I am working this side of the street. I wish you would kindly get on the other side and not interfere with me."

Begging, like everything else has felt the depression. Beggars do not make such large demands as they did when there were not so many of them. The best begging system I have seen was that of a young man asking for a penny. I said to him: "Why ask for a penny?" He said; "Most everyone will give me a penny. Five pennies make a nickle." That fellow had a good business system and was acting on his business principle that pennies make nickles and nickles made dollars. If I were in the begging business, I believe I would adopt the penny plan. However, I am opposed to begging and would much rather give a man a dime for a pencil or a pair of shoe strings or a small trinket that he may get a profit on them than to give a beggar a penny.

From my viewpoint beggars ought not to be encouraged, but persons who are selling something for a livlihood should be. I realize there are strenuous times, but I have always believed I could get something to do rather than beg or be idle. If I couldn't get my price I could take the other fellow's price. It is a mighty good time for the thiusands of people to go back to the country and farms and raise the things that they have to buy in the cities.

Gibbous Moon

By Eleanor Mercein

GUERNSEY is off the beaten track. Things happen there which wouldn't be likely to happen anywhere else and that was why Cary Blaine selected it for his summer holiday. He was a professor of biology, and anthropology was his avocation. He was interested in megaliths and monoliths and relics of the supernatural Druids. The Channel Islands fascinated him with their weird, folkloric superstitions and stories of witchcraft and unearthly dangers. He soon found that there was something more exciting in Guernsey than megaliths or witchcraft—Gwynneth d'Aubigny—so young and gay and beautiful, and always followed about by her adoring, stuttering cousin, Helier St. Leger.

It was Gwynneth who introduced him to Sark Island, the most primitive of them all, and it was on Sark that he met the Baroness Hôel, an aging novelist, whose fascination was indubitable and whose reputation was always a little in doubt. There were odd stories about the Baroness and her pronounced interest in young men. There were also stories to the effect that she was a witch. Some people said she had been punished for her witchcraft by having her ears cut off, but that you couldn't tell because of the wealth of her silvery hair.

There were two reasons why Cary Blaine left Guernsey and went to stay at Sark for awhile. One of them was that he was interested in the stories about the Baroness and in the withered old lady herself, and the other was that he found himself falling in love with Gwynneth d'Aubigny. Helier St. Leger was unable to conceal his jealousy. Guernsey families are very close and Gwynneth would certainly marry her cousin someday. Cary felt that Sark was safer all the way around.

Safety was hardly the word he should have chosen, however. He met Gille Latouche on a Friday night, the night for magic, under the dim lucence of a gibbous moon. He was wandering around the island near midnight when he came upon her in her long dark cloak. She had the face of an angel or an elf and her likeness to the Baroness Hôel was unmistakable. She seemed to be the Baroness in a young and beautiful version. Gille said that she was Baroness Hôel's niece and amanuensis. Whatever he was, she was the most stimulating companion Cary had ever known. He was obsessed with her beauty. He thought of nothing else.

That was the strangest of all romances. Cary never saw Gille except at night. They swam together in a dark pool in the moonlight. They talked incessantly. She had a surprising breadth of experience for one so young — had remarkable opinions about books, music and the theatre. She had traveled widely. For a long time she maintained an odd physical aloofness toward him and then one night she came into his arms and he held her bewitching loveliness close to him. He stroked her pale, blond hair and then he made a startling discovery. One of her ears was missing. No sooner had he touched the smooth side of her head where an ear should have been than a cock crowed faintly and Gille started furiously up out of his arms and fled. He found himself unable to follow her. He never saw her again.

In a fever Blaine began to make inquiries about Gille on the island. No one on Sark had ever heard that the Baroness Hôel had a niece. Gille Latouche had been the baroness' own name before any of her numerous marriages. He could not even prove that Gille Latouche, whom he had held in his arms, even existed.

Cary Blaine decided not to finish out his holiday on the Channel Islands. He went back to Guernsey to say goodby to Gwynneth and to promise to come back for her wedding to Helier. Gwynneth was so warm and wholesome, so sweet, that it cost him a pang. The day he sailed a surprising thing happened. Helier St. Leger came down to the boat and told Cary that he could not marry Gwynneth. They were first cousins and their parents had been first cousins and that made it unsafe.

"Look here, sir," Helier said to Blaine. "What are you going to do about this? The thing we both want is to make Gwynneth happy, isn't it?"

Cary Blaine knew what to do. He leaped off the boat that was taking him away from Guernsey. He did what you would have done under similar circumstances. He married Gwynneth d'Aubigny.

A NEW USE FOR CELLOPHANE

Cellophane, one of the "glamour" products of the 20th century, has been used to envelope almost everything under the sun and, now, according to the July issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine, it is being used to surround paper currency. It is all part of an unique advertising scheme recently fathered by the L. & N Railroad to advertise its important contributions to the economic set-up. Cellophane envelopes just large enough to admit a dollar bill have been distributed to all employes with the thought that they will make use of them in paying their bills, in making purchases, etc. Printed on the envelopes are facts about taxes paid by the L. & N. per year ($7,145,000); its purchases ($15,850,000); its wages ($40,000,000) and other pertinent information.

U. S. BEST CUSTOMER FOR CUBAN TOBACCO

Cuba's tobacco export trade with the United States declined about 2 per cent in value during the first five months of this year as compared with the same period a year ago, but shipments to the American market accounted for 58 percent of the total Cuban tobacco exports this year, the Tobacco Division of the Department of Commerce reported recently, according to advices of its Louisville District Office. Volume of leaf shipments from Cuba to the United States from January through May this year increased about 2 percent. Exports amounted to 5,834,152 pounds of leaf tobacco as compared with 5,780,984 pounds in the same period last year. Next to the United States, Cuba's best customer for tobacco during the first five months of this year were the United Kingdom, Spain, Germany and France. Cuban tobacco planters are reported considering plans to reduce tobacco plantings for the coming season by 50 percent to relieve the difficult situation prevailing in the insland's tobacco industry.

Room Bureaus Set Up For New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special)—Two agencies have been set up in New York City to insure World's Fair visitors' getting living accommodations at a most reasonable price.

One is the Mayor's Official World's Fair Housing Bureau, Inc., with headquarters in the Chanin Building, 122 East 42d Street, set up by Mayor LaGuardia to locate rooms for visitors in private homes and dwellings.

The other is the Hotel Room Information Bureau of the Hotel Association of New York City, representing 180 hotels with a total capacity of 80,000 rooms. The bureau is at association headquarters, 221 West 57th Street.

Both agencies function without any charge to the visitor in finding him clean and comfortable accommodations at a price within his means. Rooms in private dwellings range in price from $1 per night per person upward, with the average per person $1.50.

Every Western Union and Postal Telegraph office is equipped to handle requests for rooms in conjunction with the Housing Bureau's operation. Every policeman in New York City is familiar with the plan and is equipped to give visitors first hand information on methods of obtaining registered and sponsored rooms.

On making the application for a room the visitor pays a deposit of 50 cents per night per person for which he receives a receipt. The receipt may be presented to the landlord in lieu of cash as part payment for the room.

Who pays the freight?

ORANGES cost less in California or Florida—and everybody knows why.

Shorten the miles between producer and consumer, and you lower the price; for the traveling expenses of merchandise have got to go on the price ticket—there is no other way.

★ ★

So Sears, Roebuck and Co. have made a scientific study of getting goods to you over the shortest possible haul—therefore at the lowest possible cost.

So far as possible, we supply each locality with merchandise made in its own nearby factories. When this isn't feasible, we ship from Sears regional supply depots, into which goods flow in car-load—even train-load—lots at lower freight cost than if we shipped in dribs—meaning a tremendous saving to Sears customers.

Then, too, much is accomplished by Sears transportation experts, through constant and intensive study of the nation's shipping facilities. To them, the map of the country is as simple as a checker board. They are on whistling terms, so to speak, with every freight train in the country. They play box-cars, trucks and boats as skillfully as Paderewski plays the keys of a piano.

The savings thus effected on freight alone, means money to the people of this country—an amazing amount of money every year; for, when Sears save, you do, too.

★ ★

Who pays the freight?

You!

But you don't pay so much when you shop at Sears and save.

REPORTS REVEAL JUNE GAINS RETAINED IN GENERAL BUSINESS ACTIVITY

Business reports to the Department of Commerce last week reflected the extended July 4 holiday, according to dvaices received in the Louisville District Office. Many activities were suspended on both Monday and Tuesday in the 36 key cities surveyed and as a result volumes in most lines were below the June average. Aside from the automotive industry, however, the latest data for general business activity reveal that the June gains have been retained. In the automotive industry several plants have completed assembly of 1939 models and preparations for the new models are actively under way despite some strike interruptions. Steel in got production was sharply curtailed last week by unusually wide observance of the holiday at the steel mills. Prior to July 4 industrial activity had moved upward to about the March level, according to the seasonally adjusted figure. Retail trade last week was reduced by the extended holiday and in some cities was below the year ago volumes, but significant changes in consumer purchasing were not indicated.

COL. H. NORMAN SCHWARZKOPF has started a hobby among the cast of Gang Busters — they're all collecting photographs of wanted criminals. Prints are brought to the stndio where they are examined and sometimes swapped. Frank Gallop, the announcer, recently brought in an unusual snapshot. "He looks like a real killer," someone remarked. "What!" exclaimed Frank, "that's no criminal, that's a good friend of mine!"

AFTER a Good News rehearsal recently, Fanny (Baby Snooks) Brice and Bob Young were leaving the NBC Studios to get their cars, when they heard a loud buzzing sound and excited voices in a nearby parking lot. They investigated and took a look at what is probably the beginning of Hollywood's newest fad — miniature auto racing. A real little toy car — not even 2 feet long, run by a tiny gasoline engine — was racing in a big circle around the lot. "Goes like a scared rabbit," exclaimed Fanny. Bob decided this new toy was much too dangerous for Baby Snooks, but try as he would, he couldn't persuade her to leave the fun.

TRAVELING on one of the most completely equipped trains in respect to radio-receiving apparatus, are Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, in their tour of Canada and the United States. The chefs on the Royal Train are James P. Morgan and Thomas G. Gear of the staff of the Canadian National Railways dining car department which has charge of the catering for the train throughout the tour. Both Morgan and Gear have been on the air on several occasions. Last year Gear prepared the supply of Christmas puddings for use by the railway in the kitchen of an ordinary dining car. Over an international hook-up, organized by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, he told housewives throughout the continent how to make a ton of Christmas pudding in kitchen space sixteen by five feet.

Flight From Vienna

By PAUL GALLICO

(From August Cosmopolitan)

IT was Baron Willi von Salvator who took Hiram Holliday, foreign correspondent, out to Franzl's Inn to hear Mitzi, the new toast of a chastened Vienna, sing old Viennese folk songs. Willi wanted to cheer Hiram up, for Hiram was in the doldrums. Hiram had promised himself that he would recover little Duke Peter of Styria who had been kidnapped by Virslany, the Nazi, in Prague because he was a Hapsburg prince, and restore him to his sister Heidi, sweet princess Adelheit von Furstenhoff, with whom Hiram Holliday happened to be quite hopelessly in love. More than that, he had promised Heidi that he would find Duke Peter.

"I will get Peter back for you, Heidi, somehow," Hiram Holliday had said to that girl with hair like honey and tearful violet eyes. "I promise you. I will do it."

But Hiram hadn't been able to do it. He had failed. He had stayed on in Vienna, a tortured city and a dull post, hoping against hope that he would find Heidi or Peter and bring them together. Now orders had come from his newspaper to push on to Rome, and he hadn't seen either of them. So Hiram was in the doldrums.

When Mitzi came out on the stage at Franzl's to sing, Hiram's heart crashed against his ribs. The thing he had waited for for months had happened. The girl on the stage had chestnut-colored braids and she wore a peasant dress, but those drenched violet eyes were unmistakable. The famous Mitzi was also Heidi. As if that weren't enough, at almost the same moment that he recognized her, he saw Virslany, the fat Nazi, and his thin angular wife at a table in the next room. A boy was with them, calmly eating his supper. The boy was Duke Peter of Styria.

Hiram's mind worked like a steel trap. He sent Willi to get the car. He went to the stage entrance and intercepted Mitzi, ordered her to get in Willi's car without speaking. Then he waited in the courtyard for the Virslanys to appear. When they came out with the child between them, he snatched Peter, shoved him into the car, swung in himself and shouted to Willi, "Drive like all hell for Vienna." The big car moved out, leaving pandemonium behind. Hiram's heart sang. He had kept his promise. Heidi and Peter were together again.

That was only the beginning of flight. First they lost themselves in the carnival crowd at the Würstel-Prater, because Hiram knew that no one would look for them there. They found sanctuary for the night in a monastery which held the crypts of many a Hapsburg ruler. Then Willi von Salvator, who was a royalist, unfolded his plan. Heidi and Peter and Hiram and Willi were smuggled out of the monastery in a bread wagon and they made rapidly for the Tirol.

They traveled far and wide, always just a jump ahead of Virslany who sought them tirelessly. Virslany was faced with concentration camp unless he recovered Peter. He never gave up. Finally they found themselves in the far reaches of the Alps near the Italian border. They went up to the great Schwarzenstein Hotel on the icy slopes, and they knew they were in a trap. Only a funicular railroad ran to Schwarzenstein. One day they realized that they were at the top of it and that Virslany was at the bottom and only a few hours lay between them and capture.

It was then that Hiram hatched his most desperate plan. On the other side of the six-thousand-foot mountain lay Italy, if there were only someway to get to it. Hiram found out from Seppl, the ski guide at the hotel, that he had once made this dangerous trip on skis and Hiram made up his mind, It was the only way. Heidi and Peter were accomplished skiers. Hiram didn't think or care about himself. In the dead of night they started out on the all but impossible descent. Down the treacherous slopes they went. Hiram fell and slipped and bruised and hurt himself. It was a miracle that he lived through it. He had never been on skis before except once—in a Fifth Avenue department store.

When they got to the bottom he collapsed but not before he found out that they were across the border into Italy. He could afford to lose consciousness then because they were safe. Perhaps it would be well to mention that Hiram Holliday, American foreign correspondent, was decorated for valor for this feat. Princess Adelheit von Fürstenhoff, Hapsburg princess, decorated him—with her tears and her kisses.

WITH THE REDS

The Reds are now in the midst of a vital journey through the East that will have seen them play thirteen games, weather permitting, before they again set foot on Crosley Field.

Bill McKechnie and his warriors will return on July 25 to meet the Boston Bees here in the fourth night game of the season. It will be "Shirine Night," and over two hundred uniformed people will take part in a mammoth pre-game show. On July 27 the Reds and Bees will clash in a double-header, and it will also be a ladies' day.

The Reds were to play a night game Wednesday at Ebbets Field with the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Reds and Dodgers will also meet in a twin bill Friday. Following that the Reds will shift their scene of action to Shibe Park, Philadelphia, for a three game set-to with the Phillies. A single game is carded for Saturday and a double header Sunday.

This road trip is the semi-final journey the Reds will make through the East and it will do much to determine whether the first place margin the club has will dwindle or be stretched to even larger proportions.

Rain prevented the Reds from meeting the Pittsburgh Pirates in a night game here on June 28, and will be played on the night of August 14.

Tickets for the July 25 night game are now on sale at the club's downtown ticket office, the Henry Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Sts.

POPULAR GROVE

Manless Johnson Stamper

Manless Johnson Stamper was born April 23, 1876 and departed his life July 12, 1939, being 63 years, 2 months and 19 days of age. He leaves to mourn his passing his wife, Mrs. Ida Stamper, six children Byron Stamper, Ralph Stamper, Mrs. Carrie Stewart, Raymond Stamper, Porter Stamper and Mrs. Lucy Davis; one brother Porter Stamper of Dry Ridge, and one sister Mrs. Mary Parry of Akron, O., also a host of relatives and friends. He united with the Beech Grove Baptist church at an early age. He often said I am a member of the one Great church for there will be only one in the end. He bore his suffering patiently unto the end, never complaining. He told his wife a few short days before leaving that he was going soon and was ready.—Family.

John Y. Brown At Burlington

Hon. John Y. Brown, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, will speak at the courthouse in Burlington, Wednesday, August 2, at 6:45 p. m., slow time, according to Leonard Cook, chairman, Walton.

John Young Brown, 100% for the new deal, and supported President Roosevelt when he was in the U. S. Congress, that pledged $30.00 per month to our old and needy people.

He supported our new banking laws that made our deposits safe. He supported the Home Loan and the Farm Loan that saved homes for many.

Come out next Wednesday, Aug. 2nd, 6:45 p. m. and hear your next governor, John Y. Brown.

VERONA WINS OVER PEPSI-COLAS

Three Pepsi-Cola errors ruined a tight pitchers battle and gave Verona a 3 to 0 win over the Pepsi-Cola nine at the Verona lot, Sunday afternoon.

McClure pitched for the winners and gave up but 2 hits, walked 1, and struck out 10. James twirled for the losers and gave up 9 scattered hits, 3 runs, walked 2, and struck out 3. Ryan, Parnell and Clore collected 7 of Verona's hits, with Lentz and Stull getting one hit each for the Pepsi-Colas. Verona had seven men left on base and Pepsi-Colas 3.

The final score was:
Verona—3 runs, 9 hits, 2 errors.
Pepsi-Cola—0 runs, 2 hits, 3 errors.

Former CCC Youth Arrested on Forgery Charge

Grizzelle was taken into custody when it had become known that he had forged and cashed checks amounting to $180 on unknown firms and banks in Cincinnati.

When placed under arrest he confessed that he was responsible for signatures on all the checks. He is being held in the Walton jail until charges can be filed by proper authorities.

John L. Vest Named To Board

John L. Vest of North Main street, Walter R. Wilson and Charles Cook, both of London, were elected to the board of directors of the U. S. 25 Dixie Highway Association in Kentucky at a director's meeting at the Lafayette Hotel, Lexington, last week. Mr. Vest also is president of the Dixie Highway Association of Northern Kentucky.

Improvement of the highway throughout Kentucky is the immediate objective of the association, John Juett, said. In his report to the directors, he asked that all keep in mind that the association was organized to obtain such improvement along the present route in the state as to make it attractive to travelers and of greatest service to the state as a whole.

"It never has been the purpose of the association at any time to relocate any section of U. S. 25," stated Mr. Juett, "but instead it is our purpose to serve the people along the existing route by obtaining safety improvement of the surface."

This would include reduction of such hazards as sharp and dangerour curves and hills that reduce the length of the driver's vision as well as a smooth surface that does not require constant repairs.

CHRISTIAN LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid society of the Walton Christian church will meet with Mrs. Joe Reffett, at her country home near Napoleon, on Thursday, August 3rd, for an all day meeting. Everyone invited.

Rebecca Ratcliff Dies In Missouri

Mrs. Rebecca Ratcliff, 81, passed away at Pine Crest Home, Ballwin Mo., Friday, July 21, from chronic myocardis. The remains arrived here Monday night, and were taken to the Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home.

Services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Walton Baptist church, with the Rev. R. F. DeMoisey in charge. Burial was in the Walton cemetery.

Mrs. Ratcliff was the widow of the late Bob Ratcliff, and for many years was a resident of Walton. Mr. and Mrs. Ratcliff moved here from Crittenden, when Mr. Ratcliff became connected with the Walton Lumber Company, with which concern he was connected until death. Mrs. Ratcliff was a member of the Walton Baptist church, and until failing health, was an active church worker.

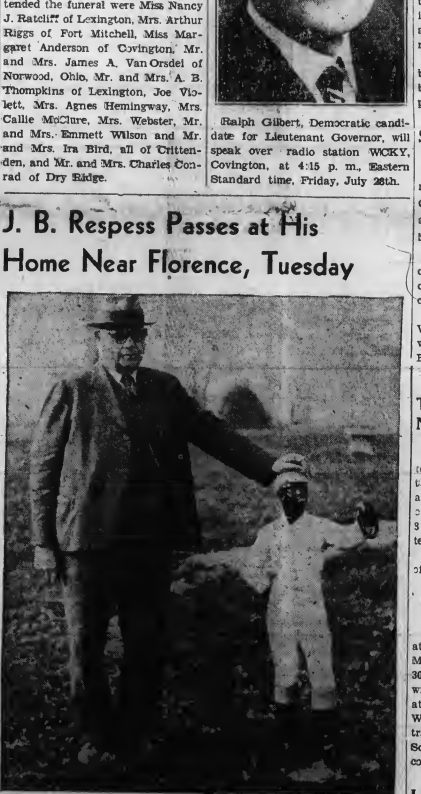
She is survived by a foster son, Wilmot Kinslear of Dallas, Texas, two nieces, Miss Nancy Ratcliff of Lexington, and Mrs. Arthur Riggs of Fort Mitchell, and other relatives and friends.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were Miss Nancy J. Ratcliff of Lexington, Mrs. Arthur Riggs of Fort Mitchell, Miss Margaret Anderson of Covington, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Van Orsdel of Norwood, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Thompkins of Lexington, Joe Violett, Mrs. Agnes Hemingway, Mrs. Callie McClure, Mrs. Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bird, all of Crittenden, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conrad of Dry Ridge.

Supper At New Haven School, Aug. 1st

The ladies of the Richwood Presbyterian church are giving a supper at the New Haven school building, on Tuesday evening, Aug. 1st, beginning at 5 p. m., Central Standard time. A complete meal is to be served, and all are urged to attend and enjoy the evening. Proceeds are for the church.

Masonic Meeting



The regular meeting of the Walton Masonic lodge will be held on Thursday evening, July 27th at 7:30 o'clock. All members please be present.

GILBERT TO SPEAK OVER RADIO

Ralph Gilbert, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, will speak over radio station WCKY, Covington, at 4:15 p. m. Eastern Standard time, Friday, July 28th.

J. B. Respess Passes at His Home Near Florence, Tuesday

Jerome B. Respess, age 75, widely known breeder and trainer of race horses, passed away Tuesday, July 25, at his home on Highland Stock Farm, Dixie Highway, south of Florence, after a short illness from pneumonia.

Mr. Respess was injured in an automobile accident near Cleveland, Ohio, May 30th, but had apparently recovered. Some time ago he contracted a heavy cold. This developed into pneumonia last week, which later caused his death.

Mr. Respess, the son of a farmer, was interested in horses from youth. At first he drove and trained horses. Then came the racers, and for over 40 years thoroughbreds have carried the Respess colors.

In 1909, with Wintergreen, he won the Kentucky Derby, but his best horse was probably Dick Wells, who ran the mile in 1:37 1-5 at Chicago. One of his more recent good horses Main Man, was sold last summer for $17,000.

At one time, Mr. Respess with J. L. Rhinock of Covington, controlled the Latonia track. In 1912 he purchased the farm where he lived at death, and afterwards devoted most of his time to the farm.

Mr. Respess is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rena Becker Respess; a brother, Charles Respess; a sister, Miss Pearl Respess, society editor of the Kentucky edition of The Enquirer, and a foster daughter, Miss Mae Respess. His only son, Jerome B. Respess, Jr. was killed in an auto accident near Louisville, Derby Day seven years ago.

He was an active member of Union Lodge, F. and A. M., Union. He was a director of the Peoples-Liberty Bank and Trust Company of Covington, and a member of the Trinity Episcopal church, Covington.

Services, for which the arrangements are being made by the Philip Tallaferro funeral home, Erlanger, will be held at the residence at 2 o'clock Friday, conducted by Rev. William G. Pendleton, rector of Trinity church. Burial will be in Highland Cemetery.

Sheep Killing In Kenton County Becoming Serious

The dog and sheep situation in Kenton county has become serious. There have been twenty-six sheep killed by dogs recently on the Hume, Adams and Percival farms, and many more maimed and crippled so they will be useless.

Police dogs are suspected, as no other dogs would have done such wholesale slaughter.

The way they were grabbed by the back of the neck and the size of the tracks seen, show that it was large, viscious dogs that did the killing.

There has been much loss from sheep killing dogs in the past year or two—some on these same farms mentioned above, but never so many in the same period.

There should be some cooperation by the general public in trying to remedy this situation, as many of the farmers have given up trying to raise sheep, on account of the dogs. People should be required to keep their dogs tied at night, and there should be a penalty attached to city people bringing their unwanted dogs to the country and dropping them. There are many such dogs in this section of Kenton county, and they become scavengers and a nuisance to the countryside.

It is a cruel thing to do—it would be much more humane to let them be put out of the way in the dog pound.

SARAH WILLEFORD

Mrs. Sarah M. Willeford, 70, the mother of Mrs. Mary J. Chapman, Cowie avenue, Erlanger, passed away Sunday at her daughter's home.

Mrs. Willeford was a former resident of Gallatin county. Besides her daughter, she leaves three grandchildren.

The remains were taken to the Verona Baptist church, Tuesday, where services were held at 3 p. m. Burial was in the Odd Fellows cemtery at Napoleon.

To Be Married In Norwood, O., Aug. 5th

An approaching marriage of interest to many in this section, is that of Miss Frances Ford of Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, to Dr. Harry Fry of Cincinnati, on August 5th at 3:30 p. m., in the Norwood Presbyterian church.

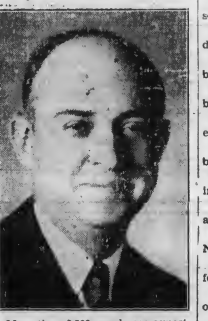
Miss Ford is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claud E. Ford.

METHODIST CHURCH

Fifth Sunday services will be held at both the Walton and Florence Methodist churches, Sunday, July 30th. The pastor, Rev. R. R. Rose, will preach at the Florence church at 11 a. m., Fast Time, and at the Walton church at 7:30 p. m., Central Standard Time. The Church Schools and Prayer services will be conducted as usual.

LYKINS-McCUBBIN

Mr. Wendell McCubbin and Miss Dora Lykins, both of Walton, were united in marriage Saturday night, July 22nd, at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. R. F. DeMoisey, on North Main street. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Howard McCubbin.



After a short honeymoon they will be home at their brother-in-law's, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Vest.

BARKLEY WILL SPEAK FOR BROWN

The false report that Senator Barkley is not interested in John Young Brown's candidacy has been widely circulated by the Johnson followers, according to Brown cohorts.

Senator Barkley will go on the air for John Y. Brown over a state wide net work at 9 o'clock p. m., Central Standard time, Saturday, July 29th, originating from radio station WHAS, Louisville.

Johnson To Speak At Burlington

More than 2,500 people are expected in Burlington today (Thursday) when Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson addresses the voters of northern Kentucky in one of two scheduled speeches. His address at Burlington will be at 2 o'clock (C. S. T.) at the courthouse. At 8 p. m. the Richmond publisher will speak in Covington.

J. Lyter Donaldson, Johnson's state campaign manager, will accompany him to Burlington for the afternoon address. Many other outstanding Johnson leaders from various sections of the state have also indicated that they will be present.

Delegations from every precinct in the county have made plans to attend the rally it was announced by Ralph G. Maurer, Johnson's Boone county publicity chairman. Many from Grant, Kenton and Campbell counties have also notified Johnson headquarters that they will attend.

An amplifying system will be used to relay the address to the streets in order that the overflow crowd may hear the address. Band music will precede the speaking.

More Farmers Adopt Conservation Farming

The farming picture changes in the work area of the Walton CCC Camp, according to Ward T. Darnell, superintendent.

More and more landowners are adopting conservation farming practices to save the soil, he reports.

In the fiscal year just closed, Mr. Darnell points out, 65 new cooperative farm agreements covering 6,878 acres were signed. This brings the total to 137 farmer cooperators in the Camp area.

Plans for the 65 new farms in the work area involve longer rotations, decreases in cropland, increases in pasture and permanent meadow acreages, protection of woodlands, winter cover crops, and methods of cultivation that will reduce soil losses of row crops.

Analysis of the 65 new farm plans show that the total cropland acreage will be reduced from 4,421 acres to 2,795 acres, and of the remaining cropland only 699 acres will be in row crops in an average year, as compared to a former average of 1,479 acres in row crops. Average rotation is increased from 3 years to 4 years.

Practices that will be followed on cropland include 1,470 acres of contour strip ropping; 2,345 acres of contour tillage, with vegetated waterways, diversion terraces, and buffer strips.

Forty-eight acres of woodland protected from grazing is increased to 341 acres under the new plans, and of this amount 154 acres is newly planted. Grazing will be controlled on 4,804 acres of pasture, and 2,336 acres will be treated with lime and phosphate.

"These cooperators have discovered," Mr. Darnell says, "that by replanning their farm programs in the interests of soil conservation they can put their land to better use, greatly decrease erosion losses, build up soil fertility, and maintain or even increase yields."

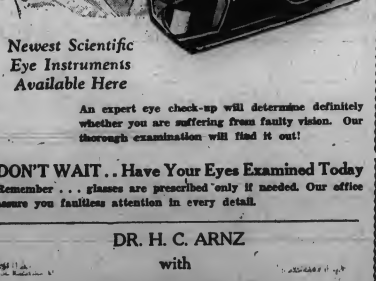
Trail Ends In Walton



A story of a family rift and the disappearance of the husband was unfolded today when James Bolington found a car bearing Michigan license and belonging to the Lone Star Construction Co., Pontiac, Mich., parked in front of Dixon's Restaurant where it had been abandoned some time Monday.

Upon communicating with Michigan police, it was learned that the husband had taken the car and left home, following a quarrel with his wife, and had driven to this point where his trail ended. Police were unable to obtain the names of persons involved in the case, but turned the car over to Michigan police.

Debt Threatens Democracy

In a thought-provoking article in Harper's, Roy Helton argues tellingly that debt threatens democracy. And he has many a precedent with which to prove his case.

"What is it that gave Italy back to an absolute ruler?" asks Mr. Helton. "Twenty seven billion dollars of war borrowings on top of an already heavy debt structure were more than her government could handle as a democracy. What made Hitler the absolute ruler of Germany? What but national despair under the immense load of debt that had been saddled upon Germany by the Allies and by our own super-salesmanship, creating a burden which the Republic could not carry? A master had to appear in Russia, too because of debt.

"More than anything that can ever face us as a nation, this problem deserves the united intelligence of all parties and all men."

What happened abroad can happen here. And no one can miss the ominous parallel that exists between the course toward dictatorship taken by the European totalitarian states and the course we are so rapidly pursuing ourselves. A staggering debt made essential the artificial blocked-mark system of Germany—a staggering debt could make necessary a "blocked-dollar" system here. A sharp rise in a nation's debt makes inevitable more and more political control over its citizens' affairs—and that means eventual dictatorship.

Mr. Helton observes that it is not yet too late—that we can still save ourselves as a democracy, by drawing in our belts, facing our issue squarely, and going to to work to cut down the debt. But we cannot long delay the time for doing that—if we are to retain the rights and liberties of democracy for which our forefathers fought.

Conditions To Come

It was President Wilson who once said, "If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not a vision of conditions to come, then he has not opened his eyes to an adequate conception of human life."

There are few man who lack this urge, made up partly of reason, partly of an instinct that is found dominant in all animals to provide against the future. And this country is singularly blessed, in that our people have had the wherewithal to purchase protection beyond that achieved in any other land. The life insurance figures, the deposits in savings banks and trust funds tell the story. And, in bad times as well as good, the totals of stored savings tend to rise. These are the fine fruits of our "vision of conditions to come."

NEUTRALITY

The word "Neutrality" has different meanings for different people and defining it is a puzzle like the old quip: "Constantinople is a very hard word and you can't spell it."

Neutrality, according to the dictionary is a quality of "being neutral."

The main trouble with American neutrality is that there is nothing very neutral about it. The existing neutrality law is based on an embargo and it prohibits the President from issuing any proclamation that shall permit "the shipment of arms, ammunition, and implements of war directly or indirectly to belligerenet countries."

The President asked to have this authority removed but the House of Representatives declined by a narrow vote to do away with the embargo. The Senate refused to change the embargo restrictions, despite the insistence of the President and the Secretary of State.

Besides, the President wants Congress to grant him extraordinary broad powers that would make it possible for him to exercise his own judgment in naming aggressor nations in case of a European war, and to furnish cooperation, munitions, credit and other aid and assistance to the "democracies." Inasmuch as the United States is partial to England and France it might be expected that the President would side with them and close the gates against Germany and Italy. That kind of neutrality is objectionable to many sound thinking Senators and citizens but it is defended very vigorously by the ardent New Dealers, who seem to believe that the President should be trusted not to make any mistakes. The opposite view was expressed by Senator Johnson, California, who said that he was unwilling to be a party to grant any such authority to any President, no matter who he might be.

When the Senate Foreign Committee voted 12 to 11 to postpone consideration of neutrality legislation until the next session of Congress the issue flamed into wide-open conflict between the White House and Capitol Hill. Undoubtedly they all think they are right in this common desire to "keep us out of war."—J. E. Jones, National Industries News Ser.

Drink More Milk

The solution to the dairy problem seems, simple enough, increased milk consumption. According to the Dairymen's League News of New York, if evereyone over five years old drank an extra glass of milk each day the farmers' annual cash milk income would increase by more than $500,000,000, or 36 per cent.

According to health and diet authorities, milk consumption in this country, by both adults and children, is far under the desired level, so far as health is concerned. So increased milk consumption would be a boon to the general public as well as to the dairy farmer.

CIDER-MAKING

STYLE IN TOWLES

Those society people who think that style is applicable only to what they do or say or wear should have had a few years' valuable training in Fidelity. There was plenty of style in this quaint old place, even though there was no finery in the ordinary sense of the term. This style extended to such common things as towels.

Let us begin at the bottom of the social scale. Very plain people, with little or no impression to make, used towels made from grass sacks, cut in two and hemmed. For very dirty hands these towels are not so bad; they save a great deal of washing, too, for boys. But it would be hard to find anybody now who would admit having used such a towel.

The standard every-day towel for the farm hands was made from meal sacks, large two-bushel sacks at that. The cloth is heavy cotton stuff, nearly as thick as the hickory shirting that we once used and possessing just such lasting qualities. Less rough than grass sacks, these meal sacks also help scrub off the dirt after you have soaped your hands with home-made lye soap and started the dirt to coming off anyway. I might add that you must wash your face with water scooped up in both hands and must make a blowing noise with your mouth, whether any of the soapy water has got into your mouth or not. This is merely a part of the process of washing the hands and face.

When company comes, unless it is some boy who has followed us home from church, finer towels are brought out, linen or near-linen, and smaller by half than the meal sack towel. These towels, unlike the standard ones, are white, rather than gray in color, and show dirt. Besides, it is best to use tinted toiled soap instead of Big Deal or lye soap. But the old washpan is still the container of the water, even with these fine towels.

In every style there is a best, and towels were no exception to this rule. Exclusive company used only the washbowl and pitcher in the front room. The towel supplied here was the best in the house and sometimes even had some embroidered flowers or initials on it. The soap, too, was in a dish, not a broken cup or saucer, a dish that often had been a present from the best boy friend of Big Sister, a sort of companion to the water pitcher and six-glass set that often graced the front room. Holding up the train of royalty has never and will never fail to my lot, but I have walked with swelling chest into the front room with a pitcher of water and a nice towel, all for the distinguished guest who had honored us with his company. Even better, I have been the guest who used the washbowl and pitcher; the scented, tinted soap; the embroidered guest towel. Style? You bet!

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

Mothers and fathers who have experienced helpless embarrassment when Junior talks out of turn in the presence of company, will appreciate the suffering of Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews who is sorely embarrassed because one of his supposedly bright young aides has pulled a faux pas.

The faux pas was committed recently when the Wage-Hous Administration issued one of its interpretative bulletins. The bulletins are designed to "guide" employers, and are supposedly an interpretation of what can and what can't be done under the wage-hour law.

In this case, the bulletin contained a paragraph pointing out that under the law, time spent by employes at company picnics, banquets, safety meetings, etc., must be considered part of their working time, and therefore the boss must pay the usual hourly wage rate for such leisure.

When word of this interpretation began trickling back to Capitol Hill, many Congressmen interested themselves in the ruling. Now some observers believe this may be part of the reason behind the resolution approved by the House Rules Committee for an investigation of the Wage-Hour Administration. The argument made at the Capitol is that this was not the intent of Congress when it wrote the Wage-Hour Hour law, and that such interpretatoins are beyond all reason..

All in all, the so-called bright young theorists who sit behind big desks and make big decisions are finding themselves more and more in disfavor with the Congressmen.

That, perhaps, may be why Commerce Secretary Hopkins is looking for a group of mature and experienced men to take over the present Brain Trust activities in his department. Hopkins has fifteen positions to fill, the salaries ranging from $6,000 to 69,000, but he wants real $40,000-a-year men for the jobs.

What Hopkins is endeavoring to do is revitalize this department with a corps of highly trained specialists The fifteen men he hopes to hire may be given the title of executive assistants.

CRACK OF THE WEEK: At the height of the fight over depriving the President of his power to devalue the dollar, a Press Clubber made this observation: "Well, I see where the administration says this will give control of money back to Wall Street. After watching the handling of public funds for the last six years, however, that doesn't seem to constitute a serious threat. At least Wall Street has some idea of the value of money."

A story is going the rounds of the military and diplomatic circles, which, if true, reflects vividly the unhappy state of things under a Communist regime (or any other ism, for that matter). The story is that in the Russian Army soldiers must turn in every empty cartridge. The bullets are rationed and if a soldier cannot produce every bullet or empty cartridge the penalty is sometimes death.

Reason is, according to the story, that the Communist officials are fearful of a revolt from the iron fist rule of that form of government, and that no chances can be taken that somebody might be hoarding ammunition.

VITAL STATISTICS NOTE: The national birth rate, by the last census figures, was 16.6 and may be lower now. Some experts point to this figure as an alarming indication that Americans are dying off faster than they are born. If so, there should be some comfort in current vital statistics coming from the government-built, government-operated "model village" at Greenbelt, Md. There babies are arriving on something like an old-fashioned scale. The Greenbelt population, according to the statistics, is multiplying at the rate of 64.5 per thousand.

To others "viewers with alarm," who say this is only going to increase unemployment, this bit of information should be added for their comfort: Those who live in Greenbelt are mostly government workers from Washington, meaning their babies probably will grow up to be jobholders and a burden to no one (except the taxpayer).

Senator Lundeen of Minnesota received a "post card" four feet long and three feet wide from postal clerks requesting support for a sick leave bill.

A hen is mothering a litter of kittens near Huntington, Ind., assisted by a farm hand who feeds them milk.

A New York young woman chatted with a burglar who had entered her room and finally made a date with him. He kept the date, and so did a policeman.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Can you remember your first real sorrow? Up to the time you couldn't realize that such sorrow could come to you when you had mother, father, brothers, sisters, relatives, friends, schoolmates—in fact, nothing to mar your happy life when all of a sudden a sorrow came into your life like a thunder bolt out of a clear sky, which you could not understand; when the angel of death knocks at the door of your heart, taking mother, father, sister, husband, wife, son or daughter just blooming into womanhood, or some innocent boy or girl, the pride of the family.

I had had boyish imaginary troubles but did not know what real trouble was until I was away from home. I was a young clerk in the dry goods store of Mr. Dillingham one of the leading merchants in Richmond, Ky., when one of my village home neighbors had driven 12 miles as fast as horse and buggy could travel. He called me out of the store to tell me the sad news that my little 4-year-old brother had been kicked in the head by what was considered a gentle horse that was standing to a hitch post in front of my father's country store. We never knew, but believed that, the horse was asleep when the boy stooped over to pick up a block touching the horse's hoof. The animal was frightened and kicked the little fellow, who only lived a short time, dying as the sun went down over the western horizon. The little boy's spirit passed out to the God who gave it. He was a bright little fellow, the pride of the family. His name was Seneca Xenophon, named for a noted Methodist preacher, S. X. Hall.

My brother was dead before I could reach home. Then I realized what real trouble was. It was doubly hard on my mother, as she was aninvalid. We buried the little fellow in my grandfather's family burial grounds. Great sorrow and sadness was cast over the village and surrounding country, folk who expressed real heartfelt sympathy. Hope I am wrong, but it seems like we do not take time to sympathize with bereaved ones as they did in those days. Notwithstanding, I was only a boy, I had accepted and learned the great truths, that there was a resurrection and that we cannot bring our dear ones back to us.

That was my real sorrow, and I have had to meet them in untold numbers as I have gone through life. There is hardly a week and sometimes every day that I do not learn of some of my friends or relatives going out to the great beyond, realizing they have just gone on a little ahead. I am impressed with the part of the song, "Earth has no sorrows that heaven cannot heal."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURING THE HOUSE

Careful "framing" with trees made this snapshot more pleasing.

ALMOST everyone who has a camera takes pictures of his home, but many of us neglect the few simple suggestions which would make our snapshots of "home sweet home" much more pleasing. Here they are:

First, keep the camera level, or vertical lines will be distorted. Stand back far enough to get the picture without tilting the camera. If necessary, shoot from across the street—perch yourself in a fork of a tree, or maybe a step-ladder will give you the proper elevation.

Second, pick a time when the sun lights the house at the proper angle. The sun rays should strike the house at a slant so that shadows are cast by such details as window frames and weatherboarding. These shadows outline all the brightly lighted projecting details, and they will appear clearly in the picture.

Third, try to "frame" the picture attractively with trees or overhanging branches. Such a natural "frame" for the house gives depth to the picture and adds pictorial charm.

Space didn't permit taking a complete view, but the doorway and roof angles alone made a charming shot.

If you have no recent pictures of your home, take a few today, following these suggestions. Perhaps your house is so situated that you can't apply all the rules, but each, by itself, will help you produce pictures that more attractively present the place where you live.

New York City Rewards The Interested Explorer

NEW YORK takes discovering, declares Arthur Gordon, former Rhodes scholar and native of Savannah, Ga., who advances the somewhat unusual opinion that New York, for all its glittering front is essentially a shy place, hiding its real personality from strangers.

"That's why," Gordon writes in an article called "Make Friends With Manhattan," in May Good Housekeeping, "of all cities in the world, New York has the most visitors and the fewest friends. The visitors usually come for a good time and they nearly always have one. If a good time consists of buying clothes, seeing a few plays or making the rounds of all the night clubs, New York will gladly accommodate them. But when they are through, they may feel that New York is a cold, unfriendly place, where gather sinister people sell high-priced entertainment at a great profit to unsuspecting visitors from out of town."

This arises from the fact that the average visitor never gets to know the real New York or its people but moves around in an orbit composed largely of other out-of-towners. While New York is never a gushing or a chatty place, it is genuinely friendly and ready to meet the explorer halfway.

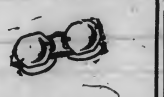
You don't have to have a lot of money, a guide or a car even to find things which are typical of the real New York, buried behind its overpowering facade of skyscrapers, Gordon says. An itinerary which includes something of interest to every type of individual with directions about how to get there and what to do when you do get there, is included in the article. He ranges from Spuyten Duyvil at one end of Manhattan to the Battery and suggests diversions which start with the Free Theatre on Twenty-Seventh Street and proceed to a visit at the Stock Exchange.

There is an aspect of New York which suits every mood, Gordon insists, and states that while getting close to the heart of the city requires a certain amount of curiosity and initiative, the effort is rewarded. "Like all friendships made slowly and with some difficulty," he concludes, "Manhattan's is well worth having."

WITH THE REDS

Cincinnati—A busy weekend faces the league-leading Cincinati Reds as they start their semi-final stand at Crosley Field. During this home stay they will play fourteen games, weather permitting, before they again take off for foreign climes.

The Boston Bees will supply the opposition Thursday when the Reds appear in a doubleheader which is also a ladies' day. On Friday the Philadelphia Phils come to town for single games that day and Saturday, and a twin bill on Sunday.



The coming of August coincides with the coming of the New York Giants, who start a series of three games here on August 1. The series will close with a ladies' day battle on August 3. The Reds and Giants have not met since the celebrated series at the Polo Grounds that produced the disputed home run by Harry Craft.

The powerful arcs will blaze again at Crosley Field when the Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers clash in a night game on August 4. The Reds will also meet the clan of Flatbush in a single game the next day and a doubleheader on August 6.

Following that the Reds will journey to Chicago for five games in three days and then to St. Louis for a trio of contests against the Cardinals.

Tickets for Sunday's twin attraction with the Phillies are now on sale at the Reds downtown ticket office, the Henry Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets.

President and Borah had sharp exchange in White House conference.

FAMOUS NOVELIST IS DEVOTED FAMILY MAN

Dr. and Mrs. Cronin and Their Three Sons: Patrick, Andrew and Vincent.

DR. A. J. CRONIN, phenomenally successful novelist who turned from a career in medicine to writing, is married to a doctor, according to a sketch in the May issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine. They have three sons, Patrick, Andrew and Vincent.

Dr. Cronin's first novel, "Hatter's Castle," appeared in 1931 and was immediately successful. This was followed by "Three Loves," "Grand Canary," "The Stars Look Down" and "Lady with Carnations." In 1938, Cronin wrote "The Citadel," which was widely acclaimed by critics and was on the best-seller list for many months. His new novel, a dramatic story of the nursing profession entitled "Vigil in the Night" begins serially in the May issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Dr. Cronin and his family live in a beautiful old manse, Sullington Court, in Sussex, England, where in addition to writing, Cronin farms, raises ducks, plays golf and tennis and goes fishing. He also collects modern paintings and ancient Chinese art objects.

Dr. Cronin is a Scotsman with Irish blood and his wife is also Scotch. He spent his youth in Dumbarton and Glasgow, studied medicine and became an inspector in the Welsh mines. Here he had much personal experience with hardship and man's inhumanity to man. These unforgettable experiences are reflected in his novels. Cronin says that he will always remain a doctor at heart.

UNION

A two weeks revival meeting is being held in the local Baptist church. The pastor Rev. Henry Beach is conducting the services.

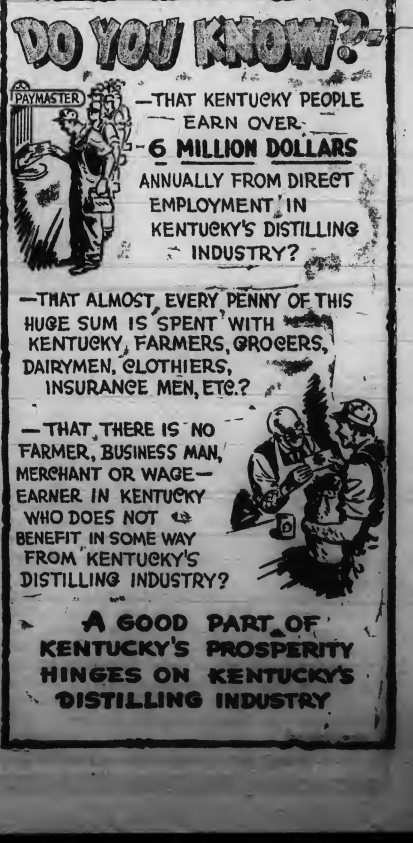
"NO BAD EGG SMELL" SCIENCE'S CLAIM FOR NEW COOL-CREAM DEPILATORY

Have you ever sat across the room from an attractive woman and noticed a young forest of hair showing through her chiffon hose?

Of course you have! And when those legs come out into the open at a beach or swimming-pool, or in shorts on a tennis court, you are apt to wonder where on earth their owner's personal daintiness and taste can be that she'd allow herself to prance around like that!



No getting around it . . . women are supposed to be hairless creatures when it comes to arms and legs, and seeing them otherwise is anything but alluring! However, with legs uncovered as much as they are . . . arms in evidence everywhere from the street to tennis courts . . . it stands to reason that the femininity of today would have more to consider in the matter than their mothers. Which is all very well if they DO consider it . . . but pretty awful if they don't.

The good old razor method is still a standby . . . but there's no getting round the fact that it DOES leave legs looking like the skin of a chicken you've plucked. Not to mention how legs feel with that stubbie. And, of course, for use on arms it's out of the question.

Then there's the alternative of using a depilatory which smells up the whole house (and you, too). Or ripping the hair off with wax (effective, very, if you can stand it). But until now there has been nothing else to solve the problem.

Now you can have legs and arms as smooth as satin and clean as a whistle . . . without pain or porcupine stubble or smelly applications. You simply apply a new cool-cream hair-remover called "Wisk." You leave it on for about ten minutes . . . and wash it away. That's all. It has no odor. It is not painful. It is quick as a wink and easy as pie. The large tube for home use is $1.00, at beauty shops only. Or you can enjoy the luxury of a Wisk professional salon treatment at a reasonable price.

GRANT COUNTY PRESENTS A MAN FOR COMMONWEALTH'S ATTORNEY

Grant County presents R. L. VINCENT for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney. He is one of ten brothers raised on a farm. He worked his way through college served seven years as principal of some of the best high schools of the State; served eight years as County Attorney of Grant County where he made a splendid record. He is a member of the Baptist Church, a member of the Williamstown Rotary Club, a member of the Grant County Farm Bureau, a member of the Williamstown Masonic Lodge and Chairman of the Grant County Red Cross Chapter. He has the confidence and backing of his home people, having won his last nomination by 900 majority.

The Commonwealth Attorney's office is a very important office. The criminal, with the high-powered automobile, can come into your community after you have gone to sleep and steal your sheep, your meat, chickens and other produce, and be a hundred miles away before daybreak. The safety of your property and the safety of your lives depends upon a FAIR, HONEST and FAITHFUL enforcement of your criminal laws. It is, therefore, necessary that we have an HONEST, DEPENDABLE Commonwealth's Attorney.

For the past twelve years Owen County has had the Circuit Judge's office, and for the past twelve years years Gallatin County has had the Commonwealth Attorney's office, and for twelve years before that Boone County had the Circuit Judge's office, and for fourteen years before that Carroll County had the Commonwealth Attorney's office. For a period of thirty years Grant County has not been honored with either of these offices.

We realize that we are in a heated campaign for Governor and other state offices but since the Commonwealth Attorney's office is so important tto the farmers and business people we urge you not to lose sight of the Commonwealth Attorney's race.

Boone County and Grant County have always stood together. We are in the same Senatorial District and are in the same Legislative District. Two years from now the people of Boone County will be asking th epeople of Grant County to support a man for Representative and possible for Senator.

A vote for R. L. VINCENT for Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney will be appreciated.

(VINCENT CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE)

Nation-Wide Express Industry Which Began With Carpetbag, Celebrates Centennial

Picture History of Express—Upper left: William F. Harnden, first Express Messenger. Lower left: Pony Express. Upper right: Modern Diesel electric streamlined train and trans-continental plane, the Express carriers of today. Lower right: Express stage coach in Indian country.

THE modern express industry, just 100 years old, has grown from the carpetbag carried by William F. Harnden, a former railroad employee, in 1839, between Boston and New York. His enterprise gave birth to a new industry which, aided by the 1849 gold rush to California, soon spanned the continent, using first stage coaches, then swift pony auxiliaries—the pony express—and eventually the railroads. Air express is the latest development.

The history of the express business is a part of the American pageant. From stirring days of the Civil War, the express companies continued operations, sometimes actually carrying commercial packages and letters between north and south. After the conflict, the companies played a noteworthy part in quelling the wave of banditry and keeping the nation's roads open.

Great versatility has been the reward of these many and varied experiences. Today the expressman rightly boasts that he can handle anything from a needle to an elephant.

Created by the urgent needs of a growing nation, express has grown with America. The seven major companies were united under one government-controlled organization, in the wartime year of 1918. After the war the railroads took over the unified company, renaming it the Railway Express Agency. The air division was established in 1927 and now includes all major airlines, including Pan American Airways, serving many foreign lands.

Rail and air express employ 57,000 men and cover 223,000 miles of railroads, 50,000 miles of water routes, 25,000 miles of air lines, and 10,500 miles of motor roads. Shipments total about 140,000,000 annually. Of these, 74,000 are air-borne and weigh 1,500 tons.

Helen Keller Gets Barkless "Seeing Eye" Dog

HELEN KELLER, famous deaf, dumb and blind lecturer greets her new "seeing eye" dog, Kanzan Go, upon his arrival at New York after completing an 11,000-mile journey from Japan by steamship. Especially trained for Miss Keller's use by the Tokyo Police Department, Kanzan Go, a shaggy, barkless Akita, was presented by the Japanese Foreign Office, equivalent to the U. S. State Department, to replace a similar dog that died two years ago while Miss Keller was lecturing in Japan.

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHN

(From May Good Housekeeping Magazine)

HARRY JOHNATHAN had never heard of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stanley. There was no reason why he should have or why they should ever meet, but they did. Harry Johnathan was a proud and happy man. He was successful in the amazing and difficult world of New York. He had a nice apartment in Forest Hills and he loved his wife and his little boy, Butch. He liked his boss, Mr. Holland, and he and June were going to entertain Mr. and Mrs. Holland at dinner on Saturday night. That gave him an expansive feeling as he drove to town over the Queensborough Bridge. He felt as if he owned the world.

Laura Stanley was a proud and happy woman. She was the brand new mother of a darling baby boy and Bill was so thrilled over their son. Her son. What a wonderful word. Laura couldn't wait to get home with the baby so that she and Bill could play with him and give him a bath and really have him to themselves. They were so stingy in hospitals with new babies. Her heart was ready to burst with joy when Bill came after her that morning, and they wrapped the baby up carefully and took him downstairs and they got in their old car and started home. She and Bill had waited a long time for this moment.

Harry Johnathan was coming across the Queensborough Bridge, feeling as if he owned the world, feeling proud and expansive and successful and as if everybody ought to get out of his way. Bill and Laura Stanley were taking their first baby home. That was when they met. Harry Johnathan edged over into the wrong lane of traffic and crushed against the Stanley's old car. That was how the accident happened—the accident which snuffed out the life of the Stanley's first little boy.

It is easy to imagine the heartbreak of two young people, holding their little dead baby, but there is another kind of heartbreak. There is the heartbreak of a decent, good man who suddenly, by his own hand, finds himself a murderer.

Good Housekeeping presents this poignant story in the May issue as a part of its campaign for greater traffic study.

CHEVROLET SALES FOR JULY HIGHER THAN YEAR AGO

Detroit, July 17—Retail sales of new cars and trucks by Chevrolet dealers during the first 10 days of July totaled 18,498 units, W. E. Holler, general sales manager, announced here today. This is gain of 41.8 percent over the same ten days in 1938.

Sales of used cars in the same period, Mr. Holler said, were 40,106 units, as compared with 35,048 in the same 10 days last year. This is a gain of 14.4 percent.

Combined new and used car sales for the 10-day period were 58,604 more than 10,000 units ahead of those for the first July period in 1938, the figures indicate.

GARDEN GOSSIP
by PETER HENDERSON

Summer Flowering Bulbs to Plant This Spring

Bulbs commend themselves to every gardener—they are easy to grow and rarely fail to flower. Yet some of the summer flowering bulbs are seldom found in the average garden. They thus offer an easy means to make your flower garden distinctively beautiful. Here are some of the varieties that will flower in practically any garden.

• • • •

CALADIUM ESCULENTUM (Elephant Ear). A tropical foliage plant, ideal for tubs or lawn specimens. A good rich soil will produce the largest leaves.

• • • •

CALLA. The yellow Calla will thrive in a rich well-drained soil, with some direct sunlight. Plant after danger of frost, setting the bulbs about 4 inches deep.

• • • •

CHLIDANTHUS FRAGRANS (The Fragrant Lily). Delightfully sweet scented, golden yellow miniature lily, about 1 foot high. Plant the bulbs after danger of frost, about 2 inches deep.

• • • •

CRINUM. Plants grow about 3 feet high with clusters of richly scented Amaryllis-like flowers. They like a rich soil and plenty of moisture. Plant with half the bulb exposed above the level of the soil.

• • • •

HYACINTHUS CANDICANS. The flowering spikes attain a height of 4 to 5 feet, and bear 20 to 30 white bell-shaped flowers. Cover the bulbs 3 to 4 inches.

ISMENE CALATHINA (Peruvian Daffodil). Produces clusters of striking, fragrant, pearly white flowers. Plant them when the soil is warm and dry, in a good sandy soil. Will usually flower in six weeks.

• • • •

MONTBRETIA. Produces graceful spikes, 8 to 12 inches long with star-shaped flowers in yellow, orange and scarlet. Plant toward the end of April, 2 inches deep.

• • • •

TIGRIDIA (Shell or Tiger Flower). The gorgeous blooms are in shades of red, salmon, yellow and orange with brownish spots. The bulbs are planted about 3 inches deep, preferably in a light moist soil. Although the flowers last only a day, they are produced in great abundance throughout the summer.

• • • •

TUBEROSE (The Double Pearl). Grows about 2 feet high, and has large white fragrant spikes of flowers. After danger of frost, plant the bulbs in a rich moist soil, and cover them to a depth of one inch. They should be in full sunlight.

• • • •

ZEPHRANTHES (Fairy Lily). Has graceful, starry, rose-pink flowers, that are freely produced throughout the summer. The plants grow about 10 inches high, and do well in sunlight or partial shade. Plant 2 inches deep.

HEBRON

Gilbert Popular Contender In Lieut.-Governor's Race

The following is an editorial taken from the Adair County News, Columbia, Ky., June 28:

"While the Governor's race holds the most prominent place in the public attention at this time, the numerous candidates for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor are also attracting attention.

"The race is obviously between Judge Ralph Gilbert of Shelbyville and Rodes K. Myers of Bowling Green, with the former, in our opinion, the stronger candidate.

"Judge Gilbert served as Congressman for several terms when Adair County was part of the old Eighth District and is very popular here. He will carry Adair county by a large majority.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for their kindness and sympathy shown us in the death of our foster mother.

MRS. REBECCA RATCLIFF.

We especially wish to thank Rev. R. F. DeMoisey, Mrs. Blanche Coffman, the choir, pallbearers, and the undertakers, Chambers & Grubbs.

J. W. KINSLEAR & WIFE.

"He has also done valuable work in the Kentucky Legislature and is known as a capable man, qualified in every way for the post.

Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson will speak at the courthouse in Burlington today (Thursday) at 2 o'clock p. m., (C. S. T.)

IRVIN S. COBB ENDORSES R. M. BAGBY FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Irvin S. Cobb, internationally famous author and humorist, and one of Kentucky's most prominent and beloved sons, endorsed R. M. Bagby of Grayson, for Lieutenant Governor, in a personal letter to Mr. Bagby.

Mr. Cobb said, in part, "For many years I have known Mr. Bagby and always favorably. I admire his personality, I pay tribute to his moral stability and his attainments. With all my heart I believe that, should he be nominated, he will add strength to the Democratic party's ticket and when elected will reflect credit and honor upon his county, his section and the whole Commonwealth. He has my warmest wishes for success."

R. M. BAGBY

Lieutenant Governor

He is a practical farmer and business man. He has their interest at heart and is eminently fitted to aid the farmer and his helpers in their economic problems.

He is intensely interested in farm ownership as well as home ownership and believes in encouraging the small farmer and home owner by making their tax burden lighter.

He is a friend to the laboring man, and he knows their problems. He believes there should be the closest cooperation between labor and capital, and that our Government should always be sympathetic and helpful in its dealings with all our citizens.

He is not a professional politician. He is genuinely interested in the welfare of you and our Kentucky.

R. M. Bagby of Grayson, for Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

"R. M. BAGBY will add strength to the ticket."

JOHN J. HOWE DIES SATURDAY

John J. Howe, 59, well known attorney of Carrollton and Covington, passed away Saturday at Good Samaritan Hospital, Cincinnati, after an illness of eight months.

Mr. Howe was well known here, having served 18 years as Commonwealth Attorney in this district. He also was quite active in Masonic and educational circles, as well as in church work.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. W. F. Howe; two sisters, Lilile and Jean Howe, all of Carrollton, and a brother Beverly Howe of Chicago.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 2 p. m., from the Carrollton Methodist church, of which he was a member, with interment following in the Carrollton cemetery.

FALL FATAL TO ERLANGER YOUTH

A fall forward onto the handlebars of the bicycle he was riding near his home in Erlanger, Sunday proved fatal Monday night at Booth Hospital, Covington, for George Loffink, III, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Loffink, Jr.

Dr. James P. Riffe, Kenton county coroner, said the boy's death resulted from a ruptured stomach. The rupture was detected Monday when physicians operated on the fall victim.

The boy was a sixth grade student at Locust Street school. He lived with his parents at Hulbert and Center streets.

Besides his mother and father, he leaves his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Loffink, Sr., Erlanger, and Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Howard of Covington; a sister and two brothers, Robert and Thomas Loffink.

Funeral services are to be held today (Thursday) at 2 p. m. from the Allison & Rose funeral home in Covington, with burial in the Independence cemetery.

HOLR ANNUAL PICNIC

The Sunday School of the Independence Christian church held their annual picnic at the George Klein picnic grounds at Kenton, on Sunday, July 30th.

Walton-Florence May Not Become Stations

It seems not yet settled as to whether or not the Walton and Florence Methodist Churches will be raised from one-half to full time pastoral appointments next Conference year, beginning September 1; nor whether there will be any transfer of the present pastor to some other charge. This information was conveyed by a letter last week from Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Huntington, W. Va., to the local pastor, Rev. R. R. Rose, in which it was stated:

"It is probable that both Walton and Florence should be Stations (full time pastoral appointments). That, of course, will depend upon how many men are on the effective list and how the work will have to be divided. This, of course, grows out of the absorption of the Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Protestant Churches as the result of the unification of three denominations."

It is likely, therefore, that both churches will be raised to Stations and the present pastor transferred, but it is not at all certain as yet.

Rev. Rose has made many friends here and at Florence who would be pleased to have him return.

Revival In Progress At Independence

A revival is in progress at the Independence Baptist church. The pastor, Rev. Shirley Spahr, is doing the preaching, and Mr. and Mrs. David Hughes are in charge of the singing and special music.

These services will continue each evening, except Saturday, at 8 p. m., Fast time, until August 13th.

The Sunday School of this church enjoyed a motor trip to Natural Bridge Ky., last Saturday.

HAPPY HELPERS CLASS TO MEET AUGUST 8

The Happy Helpers class will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, August 8th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Lancaster, south of town. Plans will be discussed for entertaining the several classes here on August 11th. Every Happy Helper is urged to be present.

HILLBILLY REVUE AT THE JAMES THEATRE AUG. 8th.

Six fiddleplaying, guitar picking hillbilly artists, whose playing and rendering of old and new rustic airs have captivated audiences where ever they have appeared, are one of the features with Fat Sanders and His Country Cousins appearing at the James Theatre, Tuesday evening, August 8th.
